FRANCE, JAPAN WAIT ON U.S. TO RATIFY TREATY

Want to See Attitude of Senate on Pact.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Complications were added to the controversy over the peace treaty today when information reached the capitol that both France and Japan probably will defer ratification of the pact until the United States senate acts.

France, it is understood, wants to see what the senate is going to do about the Anglo-French-American treaty of alliance, which President Wilson has withheld from the senate.

According to a cable received by Senator Lodge, the Republican leader of the senate, the French chamber of deputies has postponed action on the peace treaty until the middle of September. By that time, the chamber expects the United States senate either will have acted on the alliance or have clearly indicated its attitude toward the proposed pact.

What French May Do.

If it becomes apparent to France that the senate is going to vote down the alliance, it is regarded by senators as almost certain the chamber of deputies will insist upon writing into the league of nations covenant the once rejected French amendment providing for an international military force to be placed at the league's disposal.

It was recalled that France considered this amendment vitally essential to her protection under the league covenant and was persuaded to abandon it only on President Wilson's promise to lay the treaty of alliance before the senate.

France fears that she will not be adequately safeguarded by the league; that her safety will be menaced without the alliance, and if she sees the senate is going to reject the alliance, her statesmen propose to to see to it that the league is strengthened to conform to the French requirements.

Japan to Delay Action.

Word has also reached Washington from Tokio that Viscount Uchida, the Japanese foreign minister, has made a statement indicating Japan will not act on the treaty for several months, probably not until after the senate disposes of the document. At the same time Viscount Uchida made it clear that Japan has no intention of opening negotiations with China over the Shantung settlement until after the ratification of the treaty by Japan.

Japan's reason for withholding action on the treaty, according to the view taken by senators, is her desire to gain time to make an accurate estimate of America's purposes with regard to the Shantung settlement.

If the senate, as now seems likely, insists upon going further than a mere expression of regret and undertakes to amend the Shantung settlement by proposing to turn the disputed territory over to China, Japan, it is believed, will retaliate by reviving and pressing her racial equality clause, rejected by its failure to obtain a unanimous vote in the commission which framed the league covenant.

Tokio Taking Offense.

There also is reason to believe that the Japanese government is taking offense at the anti-Japanese campaign in the United States, especially at the attacks upon Japan in the United States senate, and that this agitation may be made, if it has not already been made, a subject for diplomatic conversations.

A widely published statement today that "a full account of the feeling aroused here against the Shantung provision has gone forward to Tokio as a result of a conference Thursday between Katsuji Debuchi, the Japanese charge d'affaires, and Secretary Lansing," drew from Mr. Lansing a denial that he had seen Mr. Debuchi on Thursday.

It developed, however, that Mr. Debuchi had called upon and seen Secretary Lansing yesterday, but the business of the conversation could not be learned.

President Wilson, it was stated at the senate today, has asked the Jap-

ALL HAPPY AT MARKET WITH NO MIDDLEMEN

Farmers and Consumers Both Pleased at Prices.

BY LUCY CALHOUN.

"Ain't it a shame," said Mrs. Flanagan, "here I been payin' 50 cents a dozen for green corn, and I might a got it for 30 here at the market."

Mrs. Flanagan and hundreds of other south side housewives started out yesterday with their market baskets on their arms to do their Saturday buying at the Farmers' Produce market in the rear of 5423 South Halsted street.

They started out so early that before 6:30 in the morning they were lined up in front of the market waiting for the first of the farm wagons to bring in the green goods from the neighboring truck farms.

At this market, you must know, there is no middleman's profit to be considered. The ultimate consumer buys direct from the farmer who has gathered his vegetables the night before or early the same morning on which he brings them to the market.

We shall see how this scheme works and whether or not the U. C. and the farmer are satisfied.

Here's Farmer's Side.

Let us hear from the first of the farmers, A. B. Sharp, who has twelve acres of rhubarb and I don't know how many acres of beets, carrots, cabbages, onions, and other garden truck out in Blue Island. With a great geeing and hawing to his horses Mr. Sharp finally parked his farm wagon full of vegetables in the market place and the housewives fell upon it.

"Satisfied? Gosh, this is great. Saves so much trouble," said Mr. Sharp, waving his bandana. "Just look at them women. Jack (to his helper) tell that lady she can have all the beans there is left for a dime. It's pretty near time to go.

Beats South Water Street.

"You see, ma'm," he explained, "the South Water street men are supposed to give you 10 per cent on your goods. They'll only take 'em on commission. How can we tell what they get for 'em? I can make more money here selling direct to the people, and they say they can get better prices buying from me. So we're both satisfied. Take my rhubarb, for instance. All the South Water street men would give me for it was $1. Why, I got $2 for the same amount and quality of goods right here—and the people said it was cheap."

Up came pretty Miss Margaret Owens, 15, who had come to the market for her mother. She saw some good looking cabbages, beets, and carrots in the wagon and was promptly laden with a unique corsage bouquet. The beets and carrots she purchased at the rate of three bunches for a dime, the cabbage was 3½ cents a pound.

Promoter Is Favorite.

The most popular farmer of all those in the market is Farmer Bill Maloney, promoter of the market, who is no farmer at all, but a steamfitter in the neighborhood, whose dream has been the establishment of just such a market. He gets nothing out of it except joy, and every time he takes a whack at the high cost of living he gets a thrill of rapture that is almost sublime.

A number of South Halsted street residents and merchants are taking an interest with him in the enterprise and are planning all sorts of wonderful new features, such as a community meat market, a grocery store, etc. Farmer Bill was delighted yesterday when a representative of Uncle Sam, a lieutenant from the government supply house on Thirty-ninth street, called at the market and bought a lot of watermelons.

"When the government comes to buy, then you know it's good," quoth he.

Prices Being Charged.

Here are the market prices on green goods and eggs. Mrs. Mary Draper furnishes the eggs and says she guarantees every one.

Potatoes—60 cents.
Tomatoes—25 cents for two pounds.
Cabbage—3½ cents a pound.
Green peppers—10 cents for six.
Dried onions—25 cents for five pounds.
Green onions—15 cents for two bunches.
Green and wax beans—15 cents for two pounds (more than two quarts).
Eggs—55 cents a dozen.
Watermelons—40 cents each, selected.
Canteloupes—10 cents apiece, two for 15 cents, three for 25 cents.
Oranges—28 and 40 cents a dozen.
Green corn—30 cents a dozen.

AIR PASSENGER TRAFFIC BEGUN; WOMEN ENJOY IT

New York, July 26.—Lounging on cushioned seats, munching chocolates and reading magazines, while whirling through the air at a mile a minute, two society women today demonstrated that aerial passenger traffic, with all the comforts of home, has arrived.

Miss Ethel Hodges, Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. John A. Hoagland, New York, were passengers on the seaplane which inaugurated regular aerial taxi service between New York and Atlantic City. The glass inclosed compartment, fitted like a drawing room, enabled them to wear afternoon gowns without any fear of dust.

"It's more pleasant than riding in a Pullman," said Miss Hodges, "and much nicer than riding a broncho."

The return flight from Atlantic City was made in seventy-eight minutes.

"It was a wonderful experience," said Miss Hodges. "The only time I ever went up in the air before was while trying to ride a bucking broncho in Texas. It was a unique sensation to glide over the land and look down upon the thousands enjoying the Saturday afternoon at the beach. We were only 500 feet up and could see everything fine."

JURIST RULES CHALONER SANE

"Who's Loony Now" Author to Control Million Dollar Estate.

New York, July 26.—John Armstrong Chaloner, author of "Who's Loony Now?" today was declared sane by Justice Ford of the New York Supreme court.

As a result Thomas T. Sherman will be removed as administrator of his affairs, for the decision also declared Chaloner competent of managing his business interests, involving an annual income of $150,000. He had been limited to $25,000 yearly by Sherman, who supplied, in addition, alimony checks amounting to $36,000 for Chaloner's former wife.

Victory was Foreshadowed.

Mr. Chaloner's victory today was foreshadowed two months ago when a jury in this city declared him sane and gave him a verdict in a libel suit brought against a New York newspaper.

Mr. Chaloner is a grandson of John Jacob Astor and the owner of an estate valued at more than $1,500,000. He was adjudged insane in this state in 1897 on the petition of several of his relatives, and was confined in Bloomingdale asylum. Two years later he escaped and took refuge in Virginia, where an appeal to the state courts resulted in a decision that he was sane.

Killed Man in Virginia.

In March of 1909 Chaloner shot and killed John Gillard in defending the latter's wife whom Gillard had attacked. He was acquitted by a jury of Virginian farmers who complimented him. Later Chaloner erected a monument to Gillard with the inscription: "John Gillard, March 15, 1909. He died game."

It was in connection with this case that Chaloner sued the New York paper for libel.

Originally Mr. Chaloner's name was Chanler.

In 1888 Mr. Chaloner was married to Amelie Rives, the writer. She divorced him in 1895 on the ground of incompatibility and later married Prince Pierre Troubetskoy, a Russian

PACIFIES MEN AFTER BOLT TO SET STRIKE DAY

Union and Company Chiefs Call on Governor.

Gov. Lowden personally intervened last night to avert the threatened strike of 15,000 street and elevated railway employés on Tuesday morning.

Though a definite announcement was not made, it appeared the governor's efforts would be successful and that the men's massmeeting called for tomorrow night, when the walkout finally was to have been declared, would be abandoned.

The crisis in the wage negotiations developed suddenly when the union officials, indignant at a letter made public by Leonard A. Busby, president of the surface lines, withdrew from their conference with traction executives and members of the public utilities commission.

The car men's representatives declared Mr. Busby's criticism of their demands constituted an ultimatum and that the call for the meeting already had been circulated.

Commissioners Rush to Lowden.

Commissioners James H. Wilkinson and P. J. Lucey hastened to the Blackstone hotel, where the governor had waited in anticipation that a settlement of the entire controversy would be reached. The new complication was explained.

Later, Mr. Busby and Henry A. Blair, chairman of the surface lines board of operation, called at the governor's suite and were followed by William Quinlan, president of the surface employés union, and William Mylan, president of the elevated employés.

It is understood the governor told the car men's leaders that, while the publication of Mr. Busby's letter might have been unfortunate, it did not constitute an ultimatum, since the public utilities commission had undertaken to investigate the whole pay question and no conclusion had been reached.

In consequence, he pointed out, it would be manifestly improper for the men to ballot on Mr. Busby's terms under the impression that they were final.

Union Chiefs Confer.

After leaving the hotel, Quinlan and Mylan assembled their associates on the union's joint committee in secret conference. It was still in progress at a late hour, Mylan and W. S. McClenathan, secretary of the elevated trainmen, having impressed substitutes to attend the union's regular meeting last night.

The governor will remain in his hotel today, and the members of the commission near their offices. For further offers of settlement by the utilities board, the union executives left the door open, when they retired from yesterday's session. A statement by them said they would be pleased to consider any proposition the board might care to make.

The interruption in the negotiations came when every one concerned had expressed a feeling of optimism that a compromise would be reached. It was due chiefly to apprehension on the part of Quinlan, Mylan and their associates that the mention by Mr Busby of certain concessions, which were under discussion, would cause the union leaders to lose control of their organizations.

Debate on "Reasonable" Fare.

In addition, it is known that the commission's inclination to hold fares to the lowest possible level has resulted in a serious difference in opinion as to what that level is.

On Friday several propositions had been taken up—not as definite offers to the men, but as premises for computation of what the men's demands would cost.

It was suggested, for instance, that it might be possible for the surface lines to operate on a 6 cent fare, with a 1-cent transfer charge, if the men were to receive 65 cents an hour, an eight hour day with time and a half for overtime. In such a scheme, 60 per cent of the runs might be straight runs

Cops, Bartenders, and Labor Leaders Mix in Battle Royal.

Frank Kane, secretary of the steam fitters' union, had gargled half of his measure of bourbon in Paul J. Buse's Randolph street drink shop last night when two detectives ambled in. It usually happens that sleuths walk into such places at these psychological moments.

The detectives were Joe McDonald and Maurice McMahon of the central detail station.

"Ha! got you with the goods, eh?" said McDonald.

"Raspberries," said Kane, and he brushed the glass to the floor.

Seizes Highballs.

Then McMahon spied four bottles of what looked to be ginger ale highballs behind the bar. He rushed for them and cornered the market.

There were five remaining bottles under the bar and McDonald sought possession of them. He got them under his coat, but he didn't get far. Bartenders Ed Farrell and Jack McGrath halted him and the former let loose a haymaker for McDonald's ribs. Result: Three broken bottles of good highballs. McDonald dropped what remained of the evidence and they crashed to the floor.

He rolled up his sleeves and struck a Dempsey pose. Then he swung a right at McGrath's ear. He missed. Kane came from behind and soaked the sleuth on the side of the jaw. Then came McGrath and Farrell with their fists loaded with wallops. Kane registered clout No. 2 and McDonald was in a bad way when McMahon returned to the scene after depositing his evidence outside.

Uses His Revolver.

He whipped out his gun and ordered Kane, McGrath and Farrell to elevate their hands. They did. Then he lifted his brother "dick" out of the salt and on to his pins. Calling the patrol bus was the next order of business.

When the five lined up before the desk at central station the lieutenant scratched his head and smiled as he surveyed the names.

"McGrath, Kane and Farrell pinched by McDonald and McMahon," he mused. "When Greek meets Greek they usually start a fruit store, but when harp meets harp they usually start a fight."

The five tried to smile.

"Chuck 'em in the cooler and let them argue about the new Irish republic," the "loot" said to McMahon and McDonald.

NEW EVIDENCE TIGHTENS NET ON FITZGERALD

Seen with Janet in Hotel Basement; Gave Her Candy.

At midnight last night the police had Thomas Fitzgerald mercilessly bound in a web of circumstantial evidence connecting him with the disappearance last Tuesday noon of little Janet Wilkinson.

At midnight he was still the unkempt, unconfessing, wary Fitzgerald.

Establish Two Links.

But during the last two hours of their fourth day of investigation the police, under the personal direction of Acting Chief Alcock, had established two vital facts:

Fitzgerald had the 6 year old girl on his lap in the basement of the Virginia hotel just a few days before she vanished.

Fitzgerald had stopped her in the hallway of the building which sheltered both at 112 and 114 East Superior street last Saturday and had given her candy from the box of chocolates which condemned him as a "friend of little girls."

Denies New Evidence.

Confronted with this evidence shortly before midnight in the presence of his wife, who has announced she believes him guilty, Fitzgerald, with eyes shifting and lips curling, denied taking the girl into the hotel basement.

He already had admitted, for the first time, at an earlier grilling, that he had stopped the child on her way into the Wilkinson flat and had given her sweets. He said, however, he had made no attempt to mistreat her.

Hundreds Hunt Clews.

While the inquiry at the Chicago avenue station, by far the most trying to which he has yet been subjected, was under way hundreds of police and volunteer sleuths were working on other developments.

Chief of Detectives Mooney, with a picked squad of detectives, was ferreting every nook and cranny of the Virginia hotel.

Sewers were dragged and clothes closets searched.

The ashes in the great hotel furnace were resifted.

Witnesses who might incriminate Fitzgerald were sought.

Find Bones in Sewer.

The detectives received a shock when a scoop let down into a sewer in the hotel basement came up loaded with crushed bones. These were declared by Chief Mooney to be those of an animal other than a human, however. But they were carefully preserved by Lieut. Norton for further examination.

Not Human Bones—Evans.

A later examination of eight of the bones by Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of "The Tribune," showed they were not human. They were taken to the physician by Detective Sergeant Fred Tapscott.

"These bones are plainly not those of a human being," said Dr. Evans. "Four of them are rib bones of an animal larger than a human being. Of the other four, three are joints of birds, probably chickens, and the fourth is a fragment, apparently also from a chicken."

Chief Mooney had spent the early part of the night in Fitzgerald's apartment in the hope a new clew might be found. He announced his efforts had been fruitless.

Under Stiff Grilling.

The session at the Chicago avenue station was considered the most important development since the arrest of Fitzgerald.

It was theatrical. A dozen or more witnesses had been assembled all evening. At 10 p. m. Fitzgerald, cowed by the number of persons inside and surrounding the police station, was led into the office of Capt. Ernest Mueller.

Facing him was his relentless wife, whose stories of his conduct as a husband before she left him seven years ago have counted as a big point against his protestations of innocence. The room was crowded with policemen, led by Acting Chief Alcock and his staff.

Admits One Girl Was Guest.

"Fitzgerald," said the acting police head, "did you ever have any little girls in the basement of the hotel?"

The prisoner's eyes shifted. He seemed to take a mental stumble. His lips moved for a moment, but no words came. Then he cleared his throat and said:

"Yes, sir, one girl."

"Who was she?"

"The Howe girl, the daughter of Florence Howe, an employé of the hotel."

"Is she the only girl you ever had in the basement?" interjected Assistant State's Attorney Jacob M. Arvey.

"Yes," the man answered.

Saw Janet in Basement.

There was an intermission. When the curtain figuratively arose again the scene was the same, but there was one new character present.

He was Michael Kezik, a fireman at the Virginia hotel. The newcomer was handed a photograph of the missing Janet.

"Did you ever see this girl?" the assistant states attorney asked.

"Yes," answered Kezik, "just as I told Lieut. Grady this afternoon. I saw her in the basement of the hotel."

"Whom was she with?"

"This man," indicating Fitzgerald.

All eyes turned to the suspect. He shook his head without changing color or expression.

"Are you sure, Mike?" asked the police head.

"I am sure this was the girl."

"Do you know the Howe girl?"

"Yes, I have seen her many times."

"Did you ever see her in the basement?"

"Never."

Insists It Was Janet.

"Could the girl you saw with Fitzgerald several days ago have been Miss Howe?"

"No, it was Janet, I am sure."

Fitzgerald moved his head dolorously from side to side as if pitying the ignorance of his accuser.

"Mike," he sneered, "you are mistaken."

"I am not mistaken; I know the girl," said the witness, and the dramatic interview was at a close.

Mrs. Howe, the police had learned previously, is a chambermaid in the hotel. Her daughter is about the age of Janet. Employes of the hotel corroborated the statement of Kezik that the girl had never, to their knowledge, been in the basement.

Sat on Suspect's Lap.

Although it was not divulged at the hearing, Kezik told a TRIBUNE reporter when he saw Janet with Fitzgerald she was sitting on the latter's lap. Fitzgerald has repeatedly denied he ever had Janet on his lap, but he admitted he held "the Howe girl" on his knee.

The incident described by Kezik happened the Thursday or Friday previous to the disappearance of Janet, he said. It was the first time the girl had been in the hotel basement to his knowledge, he declared.

The other point, the fact that Fitzgerald had had Janet in the hallway of the building at 114 East Superior street, had been carefully covered up by Fitzgerald until yesterday, when, under the questioning of Detective Sergeants Powers and Otto and Assistant State's Attorney Arvey, he broke down and admitted this much.

"I met her in the hallway," he said.

"What did you do?"

"I gave her some candy."

"Anything else?"

"No."

"Did you take her into your flat?"

"No."

This, he said, was either Friday or Saturday.

These Witnesses Heard.

Among other witnesses who appeared for the final grilling of Fitzgerald last night were:

Marie Pearson, chambermaid at the hotel, who, according to the police, has declared Fitzgerald attempted familiarities.

William Harris, a chef at the hotel. He told the police Fitzgerald nearly fell asleep at his supper when he appeared for work six hours after the disappearance of Janet. Fitzgerald, he says, remarked he hadn't slept during the day.

Foster Decorah, package man at the hotel. He related how Fitzgerald brought a brand new revolver to him several days before his arrest and asked him to keep it for him.

Furnace Clew Hopeless.

The police learned there was no hope of finding any trace of the girl's body if it was placed in the roaring furnace of the hotel.

The ashes, pulverized by the sifting mechanism, were carted out of the hotel Wednesday and dumped into the lake near the new Field museum.

Metal Tag May Be Clew.

The fact that Janet wore a metal identification tag, tied to her dress by the authorities at the public playground at Chicago avenue and the lake, had caused the police to have high hopes this would show in the ashes. The intense heat of the furnace, 3,000 degrees, would have consumed every part of her body, it was said, had she been thrown in.

Hunt New Suspect.

That another suspect may be taken in the case was indicated by a rumor at the detective bureau last night, following the visit of five women and their daughters to the station.

The police declared none of the girls had identified Fitzgerald as the man who had annoyed them recently in the neighborhood. This led the police to believe another moron has been at large in the district. The police were ordered to keep close watch for a man described by the girls.

Lieut. Gray left the Chicago avenue station shortly before midnight in an automobile, bound, it was said, for Naperville, near Wheaton, west of the city. It was reported an important clew had been discovered there.

Girl at Benton Harbor?

In Benton Harbor, two men from the detective bureau, Detective Sergeants George Parker and Charles P. Engel, together with Bert H. Hazelton, a member of the volunteer state constabulary, were engaged in running down information contained in an anonymous letter sent from the Michigan town.

It stated flatly tiny Miss Wilkinson was alive and well and could be found in the resort across the lake.

How completely the letter directed the search of the detectives, Acting Captain Ernest Mueller of the Chicago avenue station, refused to say.

Chief of Police Johnson of Benton Harbor said there was no truth in reports that Janet could be found alive there. He said he had run down every clew. He also denied a child had been kidnaped there under similar circumstances about July 4.

"I Think She's Dead"—Suspect.

During the afternoon Acting Captain Mueller and Lieut. Grady took Fitzgerald to the office of Acting Chief of Police Alcock, where the latter subjected him to his second questioning of the day.

After the captive had been taken back to his cell at the police station Acting Chief Alcock said:

"Fitzgerald tearfully denied he was a degenerate, although admitting he had been arrested on charges involving that phase several times.

"Finally, I said, 'Fitzgerald, what do you think became of Janet Wilkinson?'

"He hesitated a moment, and then said, 'I—I—I think she' dead.'

"That was all."

The acting police head refused to say whether he believed Fitzgerald guilty. He did state, however, he thought the arrest of the man was "a good one." He declared himself in favor of holding the watchman in custody.

Aces Take Up Trail.

Acting Chief Alcock then ordered Chief of Detectives Mooney to help out the detectives of the Chicago avenue station with his men.

Seven of the "mystery aces" of the bureau were assigned to work with Chief Mooney on the case. They are Detective Sergeants William Russell, James Kilgore, Edward P. Birmingham, John J. McGinnis, Thomas McFarland, John Cartan and William O'Brien.

Dr. James Whitney Hall, an alienist, was drafted to examine Fitzgerald and question his wife on his habits and actions to find out whether he is a moron, as the police have declared repeatedly.

That Fitzgeral was alone in the boiler room of the Virginia hotel the night following Janet's disappearance was a new fact developed during the day. Engineer William J. Hogan of the hotel, according to his story, was sent up to the fifth floor by Fitzgerald to install an electric light bulb.

Continuing their tireless fight for the first conclusive clew to supplement the web of circumstantial evidence which they have wrapped about the taciturn prisoner at the Chicago avenue station, the police prepared early in the day for a new campaign of inquiry to reach every part of the United States.

Pictures of Janet, with her description, will be printed in the Police Bulletin, and the country, especially the middle west, will be flooded with the sheets.

Detectives of the Chicago avenue station, in whose district Janet vanished, have grown grim in their battle to solve the case.

Day's Developments.

Other developments of the day were relatively fruitless:

Fitzgerald was grilled—vainly.

Vacant houses near 114 East Superior street, the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilkinson, and sewers were once more searched for a trace of the youngster.

The sister superior of Holy Name cathedral issued a message asking the children of the neighborhood to seek their lost playmate.

The grilling of Fitzgerald early in the day was more stern than that of Friday, when detectives and prosecutors entreated Fitzgerald to tell where the body was.

And, although he wavered not a whit from his denial of guilt, Fitzgerald's attitude caused Acting Lieut Howe to declare:

Believes He Knows All.

"This man will confess soon, I feel."

He admitted, however, he did not have the evidence to force such a confession. His statement was based upon the unqualified belief by the police of the district that Fitzgerald knows all.

"I think he will confess because I believe he is guilty and cannot stand this strain much longer," said Lieut. Howe.

"I have been on the police force twenty-five years and I have never seen an accused man who would contradict himself like Fitzgerald, yet insist upon his innocence. We have punctured his story at several material points, yet he holds out no confession.

"He is the most persistent fabricator I have ever questioned. He misrepresents about the most trivial and unimportant details, apparently just to be contrary. But I am sure he will come off his high horse before many more hours. He will have to give in."

One thing calculated to break down Fitzgerald's protecting wall of denial was the appearance before him of a 10 year old girl who had told her mother two weeks ago he exposed himself in the window of his flat in the same building in which the Wilkinsons lived. It failed, too.

The lake failed to bring the tiny burden of Janet's body shoreward, as was hoped Friday afternoon after it had been reported that the body of a child had been sighted not fifty feet from the spot where Dolly Chesher, nurse for Clarence F. Parker, 999 Lake Shore drive, slipped in.

Life guards and bathers watched the beaches and stone breakwaters at this point in the hope they might end the ceaseless vigil of the girl's parents, even though they might bring the word that ended all hope.

Hunt Down Many Clews.

The clews that failed were many and promising. One sent Mr. Wilkinson, Janet's father, and Detective Powers rushing from the police station in a taxicab to the Polk street railroad station on a tip the girl was being taken out of the city.

One glance at the child in question assured the searchers that it was not Janet, however, and detective and father returned downcast to the police headquarters.

Hundreds of telephone calls to the police station and the newspapers showed the prevalence of a report Janet's body had been found in the boiler room of the Virginia hotel, where Fitzgerald was a watchman. This, of course, was denied.

Grave Digger Kills Wife by Slashing Her Throat

Joseph Kasik, a grave digger, sliced his wife's throat last night in their home, 4529 North Karlov avenue. She staggered to the porch and fell dead. Neighbors ran to the scene in time to see Kasik toppling over the porch railing with blood streaming from his face and throat. He was taken to the house of correction hospital. Neighbors said the pair had been quarreling several days.

RADIUM WORTH $3,000 STOLEN FROM PHYSICIAN

Someone in Chicago is walking around with the radium elements of forty-five tons of carnotite in his or her pockets. The radium, in five brass needles was removed from the office of Dr. Frank Simpson, 1604 Mallers building while he was lunching Friday.

Last month Dr. Simpson went to the carnotite mines in western Colorado and had the potassium and uranium removed from the vanadate in order to obtain radium. He carried it to Chicago for professional purposes. Each needle, he declares, is worth $600.

Dr. Simpson has turned his office inside out in an effort to find the missing tubes, but without success. Friday night he inserted an ad in THE TRIBUNE. He offered $500 reward for the return of the needles and promises to ask no questions.

BLIMP JURY'S VERDICT WAITS ON MAN'S STORY

Hoffman Anxious for Testimony of Injured Mechanic.

The coroner's double jury, which is investigating the cause of the fire that sent the dirigible "Wingfoot Express" burning to earth last Monday afternoon killing thirteen people and injuring a score of others, will make no finding until they have heard the testimony of Henry Wacker, injured mechanic. This was announced yesterday by Coroner Hoffman.

Wacker, who was seriously injured by the accident, is now fighting death in the Presbyterian hospital. Yesterday his condition was reported hopeful.

He is alleged to have made statements to the effect that the engines of the blimp were not in good condition at the time of the take-off on the last fatal flight.

Will Visit His Bedside.

"The coroner's jury will go to Wacker's bedside as soon as he is sufficiently well," said Coroner Hoffman yesterday. "I have made an effort to see Wacker, but he was too sick. As soon as possible I will take the jury to the hospital."

The inquiry adjourned at noon yesterday and will convene again at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning.

It developed yesterday from testimony that while the flights of the "Wingfoot Express" over Chicago were not made entirely for publicity or as a "press agent stunt," that officials of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company had looked for first page stories in the newspapers.

Longed for Publicity.

E. R. Preston, head of the sales of the aeronautical department of the Goodyear company in Akron, Ohio, was called to the witness stand. He was questioned regarding letters that he had sent to W. C. Young, stating that the "Wingfoot Express" was the first distinctly Goodyear ship built and that the completion of the balloon was looked to as a method of securing "big publicity." The letters also expressed a desire to have a "special stunt" occur on the first trip so that first page stories in newspapers might be had.

"It is advisable to secure prominent men on the first flight," one of the letters said.

Flight "Experimental One."

"Flights over cities should not be made except for 'definite purposes,'" Mr. Preston said. "The first flight was for experimental purposes and that flight started from White City because the only available hangar was there."

"Was there any advertising connected with the motive for the flight?" Assistant State's Attorney Lowery asked.

"The company was automatically advertised by the flight," Preston answered.

"Wasn't Chicago selected as the place for the first flight because thousands of people would see the balloon?" asked the assistant state's attorney.

"No, sir," answered Preston.

For "Educational Purposes."

Later he asserted that the flights were made for "educational purposes."

H. T. Kraft, who came to Chicago to test the blimp and who made the first flight, was the next to testify.

"After the ship's construction it was understood that R. H. Upson was to go to Chicago and test the ship," Kraft asserted. "But he was unable to go and he asked me to test the ship. I arrival a week ahead of time to make the preliminary tests. You know it is possible to test a dirigible on the ground, something that cannot be done with an airplane. The valves were adjusted properly and the gravity gas tank was installed and all of the instruments were checked and found O. K.

"The motors started with the first swing of the stick [propeller] and there was no back fire. They worked beautifully."

Asks About Motors.

At this point Coroner Hoffman interrupted to learn why La Rhone motors were used.

"They were used to eliminate the danger of one motor going dead. On the first flight the motors worked beautifully. We went a mile west and then started for the lake and sailed along the lake to Grant park.

"Did you hear anything about having the flights in Chicago 'go off with a bang'?" Attorney O'Brien asked.

"No, sir," Kraft answered.

"Don't you know that this was an advertising scheme?"

"No, sir. I know nothing about it."

"Is there any reason why you did not take the second or third flights?"

"The ship was all right," Kraft answered, "and I did not wish to give the impression that I was attempting to take all of the honors while the others had done all the work. Boettner has had 50 per cent more time in the air than I have."

ONE CHECK TOO MANY ENTRAPS BANK 'SLICKER'

Tries Scheme Twice in Same Place; Is Pinched.

Since the early days of June various Chicago banks have suffered from the depredations of a particularly "smooth" check worker. Police and Pinkertons both have crossed his trail without result. But in the arrest yesterday of Jacob W. Berger, 2027 North Clark street, officials state they have the author of more than a score of petty frauds within the last sixty days.

Thursday Berger walked into the Kenwood Trust and Savings bank, 402 East Forty-seventh street, and deposited $15 as a savings account. Friday he returned with a check drawn on the Chicago Savings bank, signed by "L. W. Curtis," for $380. The check was accepted. Saturday morning the bank was notified the check was one of a series of forgeries. At noon Berger walked into the Kenwood bank and presented a check for $200. Officials called the police.

Admits Five Arrests.

A list of twenty Chicago banks was found in Berger's possession, according to the police, all of which have been victimized by a similar scheme in the last few weeks.

Berger admitted five arrests in Chicago, even giving the numbers under which, he said, he was listed in the rogues' gallery. He worked under many names, among which were G. W. Barwig, G. W. Burkhardt and A. H. Walker.

He is being held under a warrant sworn out by the Capital State Savings bank, 5400 North Clark street, from which, it is claimed, he obtained $110 July 2.

It is said the smallest amount Berger received from any of his transactions was $100 and the largest $273.

"Worked" Hotels, Too.

In addition to his activities in banking circles, police claim he has defrauded a number of hotels.

Berger is about 40, slightly over 5 feet 6 inches in height, has a rather dark complexion and black mustache and was in the habit of wearing dark clothes and a fedora straw hat.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 26.

REPORTS reaching the senate that France and Japan probably will defer ratification of the peace treaty until America acts have added new complications to the controversy here. France, it is said, wants to know what the senate is going to do about the Anglo-French-American alliance, and Japan is holding off to see that the Shantung settlement is not disturbed. The president, senators have heard, has asked Japan to make public all oral and written agreements her representatives at Paris made with regard to Shantung.

PRESIDENT WILSON, in a letter to Senator Lodge regarding requests of the foreign relations committee for peace treaty data, begged the committee's indulgence until he could search a mass of papers in his possession. He intimated that he might not be able to furnish all information sought, as he did not bring a complete file from Paris.

GOV. LOWDEN was boomed for the presidency in a speech in the house by Representative Denison of Illinois. Mr. Denison lauded the part played by Illinins in the war.

THE ways and means committee of the house approved the bill repealing the tax on soda water and ice cream, a bill reducing the manufacturers' tax on grape and loganberry juice, bills for increased duties for magnesite tungsten and pearl buttons, and a bill repealing the Canadian reciprocity act.

REPRESENTATIVE HUDSPETH of Texas in a speech in the house urged that troops be sent into Mexico and that recognition of Carranza be withdrawn.

THE federal trade commission has instituted proceedings to determine whether the steel trust's scheme of fixing basic prices on Pittsburgh as a base for the whole country is a violation of anti-trust laws as charged by the Western Association of Rolled Steel Consumers, represented before the commission in a preliminary hearing by John S. Miller of Chicago.

The complainants suggest that Chicago also be made a basing point. E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, which has been summoned to answer the complaint, says the proceeding will be "the biggest lawsuit ever tried in this country."

Mountain Storms Snare Flyer Circling Country

Washington, D. C., July 26.—Lieut. Col. Hartz, army pilot, who is making a flight around the rim of the country, was forced to land at Ausable Forks, N. Y., today, when his gasoline supply ran low after he became lost in mountain storms, the army air service announced tonight. Hartz left Augusta, Me., this morning and was to have reached Cleveland today, the third day of his flight.

CAPUCHIN FINDS 1776 PARALLEL IN IRISH RISING

Father Hayden Says Erin Has Passed Her Valley Forge.

When English bullets crashed through the brains of fourteen Sinn Fein patriots in the back yards of Kilmainham prison on Easter Monday, 1916, Ireland passed her Valley Forge.

There remains only a repetition of Uncle Sam's democratic evolution to complete Erin's freedom, according to the Very Rev. Augustine Hayden, Franciscan Capuchin, here from Dublin to tell Chicago why and how Irish patriots have died in a decade of struggle.

"Home rule and English concessions to a nation aflame with the truth of freedom have and will be voted down," declared the priest last night as a preliminary to the address he will deliver at a meeting tonight in the Auditorium.

"It is too late for concessions in Ireland, just as it was too late for England's tardy recognition of her fundamental mistake in colonial policy in the flaming years beginning in 1775. And exactly as the American republic and government functioned in those years without recognition and despite the hampering presence of British troops, so is the Irish republic functioning now under the weight of its English army of occupation.

"I am here to tell Chicago the truth about the Irish martyrs of Easter week; of why and how they rose and how they fell. And, mark you, the story is strikingly, startlingly the same that is written across the pages of American history. I sometimes close my eyes and say 'it cannot be true,' as I read deeper and deeper into that history of England's oppression in your colonial times. The facts, the ideals, almost the incidents are in exact parallel to the history of Ireland's struggle.

"In Pierce is your Irish Patrick Henry, in Ulster is your colonial torydom, in De Valera is the essence of your Washington, whose victory over his Calvary in Valley Forge is the most stirring chapter in all history for me, and in the fourteen men who died in that bleak back yards of Kilmainham there lives on the spirits of your signers of the Declaration of Independence. There are some forms of death that mean life forever, and the English bullets that brought down the leaders who rose when home rule was voted and treacherously suspended are going on to make Ireland a nation as free as any in the world.

"The risings in Ireland are no one day or one week affairs as may be popularly believed. Revolutions and evolutions do not come that way. The Irish situation as it is today and has been in recent years is simply the result of years of fermentation by England herself, just as was the American revolution. And now the spirit is beyond control. Nothing now can stop it. Nothing that England can do toward concessions can stay the Irish republic."

Father Hayden, who was spiritual advisor to the leaders shot in 1916, and the sole witness to their death, further declared that fighting men of the United States would eventually throw the balance of power to the new republic.

CANNY BELFAST TRIMS SAILS FOR IRISH HOME RULE

There's Opposition, but It's Not So Strong as in Other Days.

BY JOHN S. STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BELFAST, July 26.—Coming from Dublin to Belfast is like going from Washington to Detroit. Both cities are of about the same size, built on much the same plan, and with an outward appearance not dissimilar. The mental and spiritual attitude of the people, however, totally are opposed, and the change in the atmosphere instantly is noticeable.

The Dublin streets are full of well dressed leisurely people, and the hotels and clubs are filled with people with time to talk politics, religion, philosophy or any old thing, and to talk well. There are no working crowds in the streets and the whole town bears the appearance of a leisurely, cultivated capital.

Arriving in Belfast last night just as the mills and shipyards were closing I was struck at once by the crowds of workingmen and women hurrying home. There was no loitering or dawdling. They had done their day's hard work and were anxious not to waste a moment of leisure.

Awakened by Labor.

This morning I was awakened by the noise of many feet passing my hotel. They were the men and women of Belfast going to work. In Dublin I always slept until the hotel servant called me.

The question I came here to settle was, Is Belfast as irreconcilable towards the national aspiration of Ireland as ever? The answer is, I don't believe she is. The Ulster politician talks as violently as ever. In Belfast the working man still curses the pope and talks of shooting the papists when the Ulster volunteers are called out, but the Belfast business man is busy exploring the situation and, being one of the best business men in the world, it is he who probably will find a solution.

Let me not be understood as saying the Belfast business man has become a Nationalist. He has not. He does not like nationalism any more than he ever did, but he recognizes some form of it is inevitable and is concerned now in finding the form which, in his opinion, will do the least injury to the industries of Ireland.

Spokesman of Belfast.

The most authoritative spokesman of Belfast business is H. M. Pollock, for two years president of the chamber of commerce, now chairman of the harbor commissioners and during the Irish convention delegate representing the northern business interests. I had a long talk with him this morning, and I have come away with the feeling that, although he declared he does not see any practical solution in the immediate future, the outlook is far from as dark as most Ulstermen seem to believe. The whole problem of dominion home rule, he declared, is economic and turns on the question of taxation.

"Shall Ireland under a full dominion status be allowed to set up tariffs against England?" Mr. Pollock asked. "Belfast is a great industrial and manufacturing community. Its three great trades are shipbuilding, linen and cotton, and, with the exception of a small portion of raw flax grown in Ireland, every ounce of raw material used is imported from abroad. How is Ireland going to compete in these industries if the Irish parliament imposes a customs tariff, and England admits raw material free?

Fear of Retaliation.

"Furthermore, if the Irish parliament puts a hostile tariff on English goods, how long will the English parliament refrain from retaliation? Consider the consequences to Ireland in face of the fact practically the whole of Irish exports go to England. Another phase of the economic problem centers around direct taxation. England and Ireland now are subject to enormous income taxes and death duties. Nationalist Ireland could run its business handsomely on the proceeds of the customs and excise alone, and I cannot conceive of an Irish parliament shouldering any portion of England's enormous war debt. How long would England stand such a favored position of Irish industries? British manufacturers and traders would demand protection against Ireland at once."

There are, however, two solutions to the Irish problem Belfast business men are ready to accept. One is a general federal system for the United Kingdom, in which Ireland would be one or two units, with all the powers of taxation reserved to the central parliament. The other is the old scheme home rule, with the six northeastern counties left out and attached to England under the present system.

Will Keep Word.

Having accepted the latter compromise the Ulstermen will keep their word, if it is insisted on, but they don't like it, and as a matter of fact Mr. Pollock told me today of his belief that if put in force it would not last many years.

"It's the economic argument again. Human nature is human nature, and even Ulster loyalty hardly would stand up against such conditions. Imagine political Ulster bearing all the burdens of the English income tax and death duties, amounting in many cases to more than half the total income, while on the other side of the imaginary frontier line, which a man could step across at will, there are no such taxes.

"The people would be going across in shoals, and very soon I am afraid we would be forced to join up with the rest of the country. I believe in such a case also we would find many English people making a two hour crossing to escape British taxation."

I asked Mr. Pollock whether Ulster still is prepared to resist by force of arms the imposition of home rule. His reply, I think, indicated a distinct advance on the wild attitude of stark rebellion.

"We never thought of resisting the law of the British empire, or of taking up arms against the king's troops. What Ulster volunteers were for was to protect us in resistance to taxation by the Dublin parliament, to which we determined not to submit. We still hold that attitude, but that is far from rebellion against the law of the land."

Bad School System.

At present one question which is poisoning the relations of the parties in Belfast and reviving dormant religious passions is education in Belfast. Because of its rapid growth, the city is woefully backward in educational facilities, and, unlike in England, the local authority has no power to levy a tax for school building and can only support schools built with money granted by the central government.

Belfast business men promoted a bill allowing the levying of a rate for school building, but the bill was killed by the Catholic opposition because of a dispute about the control of the schools. The situation, as Mr. Pollock, who promoted the bill explains it, is that, while 25 per cent of the population of Belfast is Catholic, they only pay 5 per cent of the local taxes. They demanded full control of 25 per cent of the new schools. The reply of the Belfast majority was: "We will spend the full 25 per cent on your schools, but you must submit them to control, so far as educational efficiency is concerned, to the national board of education. This was refused, and the bill was dropped.

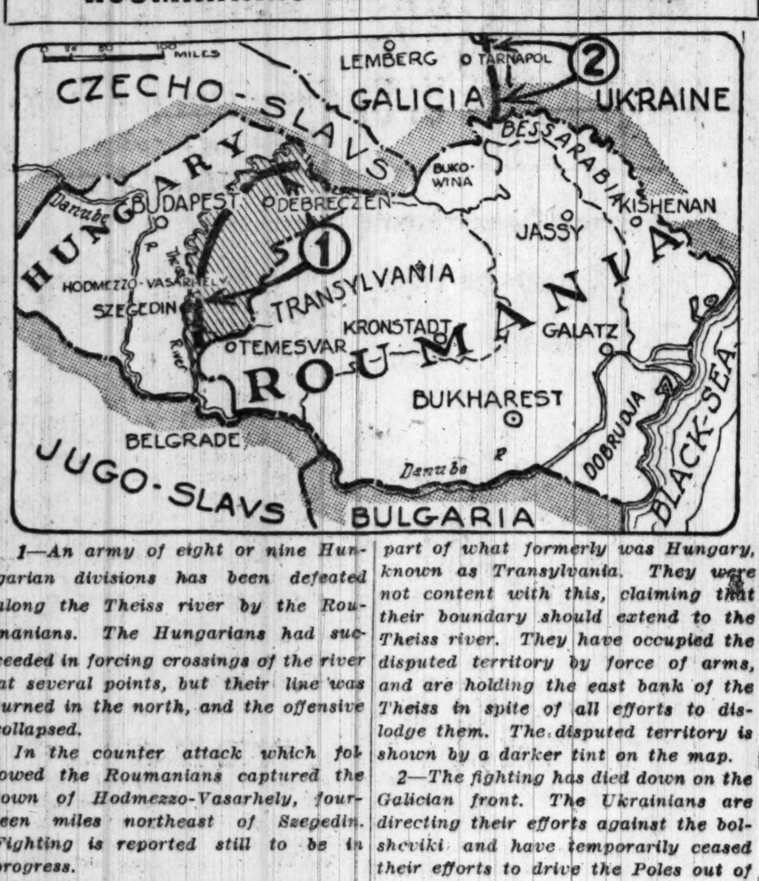
This, said Mr. Pollock, has created a bad feeling among Protestant workmen, who blame the Catholic hierarchy for delay in providing educational facilities for their children.

Irish Soldiers Go to Work.

This, of course, is only one side of the story. I attempted to get the other side from the Catholic bishop, who is the only authorized spokesman, but he is traveling in connection with his episcopal duties and cannot be reached for some days.

Some people have asked me to investigate the position of the demobilized soldier in Ireland with a view to determining whether he might be a potential force in a new rebellion or in more peaceful measures to force some measure of home rule from Great Britain. My answer is that he is nonexistent as an organized force, and to a far greater extent than in England he has returned to civil life and settled down as a unit in the working community. Therefore things are less unsettled by the war here than in England.

ROUMANIANS DEFEAT HUNGARIANS



1—An army of eight or nine Hungarian divisions has been defeated along the Theiss river by the Roumanians. The Hungarians had succeeded in forcing crossings of the river at several points, but their line was turned in the north, and the offensive collapsed.

In the counter attack which followed the Roumanians captured the town of Hodmezzo-Vasarhely, fourteen miles northeast of Szegedin. Fighting is reported still to be in progress.

The Roumanians were awarded the part of what formerly was Hungary, known as Transylvania. They were not content with this, claiming that their boundary should extend to the Theiss river. They have occupied the disputed territory by force of arms, and are holding the east bank of the Theiss in spite of all efforts to dislodge them. The disputed territory is shown by a darker tint on the map.

2—The fighting has died down on the Galician front. The Ukrainians are directing their efforts against the bolsheviki and have temporarily ceased their efforts to drive the Poles out of eastern Galicia.

DOCK STRIKE IN ENGLAND DELAYS U. S. THOUSANDS

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

LIVERPOOL, July 26.—On account of the strike of the dock employés compelling steamships to anchor in the river it is difficult for ships to enter the port. Shipping men expect the strike to last several days. All sailings are postponed indefinitely.

The Canadian lines are also held up, detaining thousands of soldiers. The loss to the steamship companies totals millions of dollars, besides holding up cargoes of provisions from America.

The longshoremen not only refuse to work overtime but their efficiency is 40 per cent below the old standard.

Let Russia Alone, Asquith Says; Sees World Menace

LONDON, July 26.—The former prime minister, H. H. Asquith, speaking at Edgware today, said:

"I regard with bewilderment and apprehension the part this country is playing in Russia. The country wants a clearer definition than has yet been given of what are our commitments, definite and prospective. I sincerely hope that the attempt to commit us further in Russia will be successfully resisted. The future government of Russia is a matter for the Russian people, and for no one else.

"The economic conditions of the world and of our own country were never more menacing."

FRANCE, JAPAN, WAIT ON U. S. TO RATIFY TREATY

Want to See Attitude of American Senate on Pact.

anese government, through the Japanese embassy in Washington, to make public at once all of the oral and written agreements her representatives at Paris made with regard to the Shantung settlement.

The understanding is that if Japan declines the president himself will make the agreements public and he hopes in this way to reduce the agitation over the Shantung affair.

With France and Japan both withholding ratification of the treaty considerable speculation began at the capitol today as to when the senate would finally dispose of the pact. Some senators thought the treaty wouldn't be reported by the foreign relations committee before Sept. 1, and that debate in the senate would hold up final voting at least until Oct. 1. This, however, does not mean the completion of negotiations.

Senator Curtis of Kansas, the Republican whip, said today forty senators stood ready to vote against the treaty unless they were satisfied with amendments or reservations. Thirty-three senators can force the rejection of a treaty. They can be satisfied, it was stated, only by amendments or reservations of such a vital character as to necessitate the resubmission of the treaty to the signatory powers.

Such action would compel the reopening of the treaty negotiations between the various nations and bring on indefinite delay in the final conclusion of peace. It might be a year before the tangle could be straightened out, it was predicted.

China Admits Weakness.

Interesting in connection with the Shantung situation were further foreign advices today stating that the Pekin government on June 30 dispatched a circular telegram to the governors of provinces declaring China was obliged to sign the German peace treaty or be isolated. The telegram reads:

"According to the report of Lu Tseng Hsiang, the peace treaty will probably be signed by Germany on the 24th instant, and it appears that in view of the assurances from the British and French governments and also the announcements of the Japanese government and peace delegation about the restoration of Kiau Chau with full sovereign rights to China under certain conditions, China must sign the treaty simultaneously with the others powers, otherwise she will be isolated internationally."

The telegram concluded with a paragraph stating that the government had already received unofficial assurance from the Japanese government that Kiau Chau would be restored to China by means of negotiations to be begun after the signing of the treaty.

Statement by Japanese.

Viscount Uchida's statement as received here said:

"The peace treaty will become effective if it be ratified by three of the five great powers. It will be noted that in Japan and America a somewhat elaborate process is necessary for the ratification of the treaty, and it cannot be done in so simple a way as in Great Britain and France. In Japan, for instance, the treaty will be referred to the privy council for approval and then the ratification of the emperor is to be obtained. The whole process will require a period of about two months.

"Negotiations with China regarding Shantung will be opened after the ratification of the treaty.

More Aid for Kolchak.

"The allies have hitherto been rendering assistance to the Omsk government and their recent declaration at Paris will enable them to go further afield in giving such assistance.

The formal recognition of the Kolchak government by the allies will be followed by the dispatch to Omsk of more influential representatives than at present.

"The consummation of the league of nations will probably necessitate more or less alteration in the stipulations of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, though the spirit of the alliance will remain unaffected. The alteration of some of its provisions will have the effect of strengthening the alliance instead of weakening it."

Denies Secret Agreement.

Katsuji Debuchi, Japanese charge d'affaires, today authorized the following statement in reply to the charge made yesterday by Thomas F. Millard that a secret agreement exists among England, France and Japan for a division of Asia.

"I can emphatically deny that there is any truth in the statement. I think the story is the invention of some mischievous elements. The fixed policy of Great Britain, France and Japan is to uphold the integrity and sovereignty of China and to maintain the policy of the open door and equal opportunity."

Chicago Phone Girl Back After Eighteen Months as "Central" at Front.

Miss Helen Carey

Miss Helen Carey, 914 East Fifty-fifth street, returned to Chicago yesterday after having served eighteen months as a telephone girl overseas. She was in the danger zone for nearly a year and had several narrow escapes during heavy bombardments. She will be given a banquet next week by officials of the Chicago Telephone company and her friends in Hyde Park.

WILSON WRITES LODGE

President Wilson wrote a letter to Senator Lodge today begging the foreign relations committee's indulgence while he searches a mass of papers for documents bearing on the peace treaty for which the committee had asked him. The president said he did not bring a complete file from Paris and intimates that some of the papers asked for may not be available.

An agreement for division of Germany's reparation installments among the allied and associated governments referred to in article 237 of the peace treaty, and a copy of which the committee asked for, President Wilson said had not yet been reached so far as he knew.

Text of Wilson Letter.

The president's letter to Senator Lodge follows:

"My Dear Senator: In response to your letter of July 22 requesting me, on behalf of the committee on foreign relations, to send to the committee the agreement referred to in article 237 of the treaty with Germany, in the event that such an agreement has been determined upon by the allied and associated governments, I would say that so far as I know such an agreement has not yet been reached. As I recollect the business, an attempt was being made to reach such an agreement, but I have not yet learned of an agreement having been arrived at.

"May I not add, with regard to other requests which I have received from the committee for papers and information of various sorts, that I was not able to bring from Paris a complete file of papers. I brought with me only those which happened to be in my hands when I left France. These alone constitute a considerable mass of papers, and I have been going over them as rapidly as time and my engagements permitted, and must beg the committee's indulgence for the delay in informing them which I can supply them with.

"WOODROW WILSON."

Article 237 of the treaty, referred to in the president's letter, reads as follows, relating to the reparation demanded of Germany:

"The successive installments, including the above sum, paid over by Germany in satisfaction of the above claims, will be divided by the allied and associated governments in proportions which have been determined upon by them in advance, on a basis of general equity and the rights of each."

President Wilson's advisers said today that after studying the letters written by former President Taft to Chairman Hays of the republican national committee and several senators regarding reservations to the peace treaty the president had concluded that Mr. Taft did not write for publication.

They said the president believed Mr. Taft was making an honest effort to bring about a settlement of the league controversy and that he had no idea that what he wrote would be published at this time.

Frown on Publicity.

Some of the president's advisers let it be known today that they deprecated the action of some senators who have visited the White House in placing their own interpretations in statements for publication upon what the president has said to them on the peace treaty and the league covenant.

It was indicated today that the president was considering the advisability of making some sort of a statement regarding his views on proposed reservations to the treaty. It was said such a statement might be made before Mr. Wilson left on his trip west.

Protest by Taft.

New York, July 26.—[By the Associated Press.] — The Associated Press has received the following message from ex-President Taft:

"Your association yesterday gave out two letters written by me to Will Hays on July 20 last. These letters were personal and confidential and were so plainly marked and were published without the knowledge or consent of Mr. Hays or myself. I ask in fairness to Hays and me at once to give this the same publicity you gave the letters. WILLIAM H. TAFT."

It should be said that the Associated Press was furnished the letters referred to by one who had received copies of them and felt himself under no obligation to regard them as confidential.

JAPS ACT ON CHINA.

TOKIO, July 23.—[Delayed.]—Kenkichi Yoshizawa, former councilor of the Japanese legation at Peking, left here today for the Shantung peninsula to conduct a special investigation of conditions there, preparatory to negotiations with China for the return of its sovereignty over the territory controlled by Japan under the German peace terms.

The negotiations, officials indicated, would be initiated after ratification of the peace treaty by the privy council, which officials said they expected would take place before Sept. 15.

Much interest is displayed by officials here in the inquiries made in the United States senate by Senator Borah of Idaho regarding the negotiations at the peace conference which resulted in the Shantung agreement.

Avoid Partisanship on League, Request to Lodge

Los Angeles, Cal., July 26.—Prominent Republicans of southern California tonight sent a telegram to United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, chairman of the foreign relations committee, at Washington, D. C., urging that political partisanship have no place in the consideration on its merits of the constitution of the proposed league of nations. To the telegram are signed the names of a half hundred or more southern Californians.

RUSH ARMY INTO MEXICO, PLEA OF TEXAN IN HOUSE

American Boy Kidnaped for Ransom; Stop Gun Smuggling.

Washington, D. C., July 26.—Military occupation of Mexico by the United States was advocated by Representative Hudspeth, Democrat, Texas, in an address today in the house. He urged withdrawal of American recognition of the Carranza government and said American troops should be kept in Mexico until a stable government had been established.

After reading the resolution recently adopted by the Texas senate, which asked the federal government either to use troops or permit the state to act, Mr. Hudspeth added:

"But that is not necessary. That flag [pointing to the Stars and Stripes hanging over the speaker's desk] is sufficient."

This remark, as also his declaration for military intervention, was applauded by the members. In urging military intervention Mr. Hudspeth declared he was "not a jingo" and that he only asked for the protection of American lives.

American Boy Kidnaped.

Philip Thompson, 14, son of John West Thompson, an American citizen, was kidnaped from his father's ranch, thirty miles from Mexico City, and is being held by Mexican bandits for 1,500 pesos ransom, the state department was advised today.

The bandits took a horse and a revolver from the boy before taking him from the ranch and are said to have threatened to execute him unless the ransom was paid.

The state department immediately instructed the ambassador in Mexico City to make strong representations to the foreign office demanding release of the Thompson boy and punishment of the outlaws.

Stop Arms Smuggling.

Efforts to prevent the smuggling of arms and ammunition into Mexico from the United States are to be redoubled. This was made known today at the state department after publication of a proclamation signed by the president on July 12, restoring to the state department control over shipments of munitions to the southern republic, which was invested in the war trade board during the war.

Anti-U. S. Propaganda.

Among outstanding developments today in the Mexican situation were reports of a new outbreak of anti-American propaganda by Mexican newspapers, especially those recognized as Carranza organs in Mexico City. Officials believe the kidnaping of young Thompson is a direct result of the inflammation of public opinion by this propaganda.

Ambassador Fletcher in a message today to the Mexican congress expressed the hope that the congress might see its way to better the relations between the United States and Mexico by providing for the fullest protection for American lives and property and by the recognition of the property rights of Americans and other foreigners.

The message was in reply to a telegram Mr. Fletcher received from a number of members of the senate, congratulating him on the fairness of his remarks before the house rules committee last week.

A similar telegram was signed by fifty-eight members of the house.

MEXICO CALLS SELF 'STABLE'

Ambassador Bonillas today, in a public statement on the situation in the southern republic, addressed to the American people, says:

"Mexico today has a stable government. True, there are some districts in which a few bandits are at large. Mexico is in the aftermath of a civil war and the conditions in these few areas are such as have followed such struggles in all lands. In your own south it was many years after Appomattox before conditions were restored to normal and your central government was occupied a long time in pacification.

Names Our Own Bandits.

Yet because the James boys, the Apache kid, Geronimo, and other bandits in the southwest continued their depredations after the civil war, no one would have urged that the American government was 'unstable.'

"Foreigners today are accorded every protection. In the few disturbed areas they are occasionally made the victims of bandits, but in every case the government is devoting the utmost energy to the pursuit and punishment of the criminals.

"The Mexican government today is spending two-thirds of its national income on the pursuit and punishment of bandits. It has an army of 50,000 men engaged in this work.

Will Pay Every Debt.

"Mexico has never repudiated any of her international obligations and will meet every debt which is due. She has the resources to discharge every obligation without making any serious drain on her national wealth, and as fast as these assets become available with the revival of industry she will meet her obligations.

"In the oil regions there has not been one instance of confiscation, nor are the companies paying royalties. In 1918 thy produced 64,000,000 barrels of oil out of a potential capacity of their wells of over 580,000,000 barrels. Their own published balance sheets show their prosperity and profits.

"The very intense press propaganda of these days, when the principal bandits are being killed, captured, or are surrendering or disbanding, and when pacification of the country is in sight, is interpreted, in my opinion, as the last efforts of expatriates, members of the old régime, and their powerful confederates and politicians in Europe and this country, to precipitate armed intervention."

In the Paradise of the Ultimate Consumer

Scenes in South Side Community Market Where Buyers and Farmers Meet Face to Face and the Middle Man Is Conspicuous by His Absence.

Lillian Ostlyng

Since housewives have learned that they can eliminate the middleman's profit as a cost item by patronizing it, the Farmers' Produce market at 5423 South Halsted street has been doing a rushing business. Farmers drive in to the market to sell their wares to the ultimate consumer directly and the prices are far below those charged at groceries and even by commission merchants. The market was established for the people in the immediate vicinity, but is now visited daily by many persons from all parts of the south side.

MRS. WILSON SAW NO BEATEN YANKS, PRESIDENT SAYS

K. of C. Aid's Version of Hospital Visit Is "Inaccurate."

Washington, D. C., July 26.—President Wilson, in a letter to Representative Dallinger, Republican, Massachusetts, made public tonight, characterized as 'entirely inaccurate" a recently published statement by John W. Kehoe, a hospital superintendent of the Knights of Columbus, that Mrs. Wilson obtained personal evidence in Paris of brutal treatment of American military prisoners.

Soldier Had "Welts."

A dispatch from New York quoted Mr. Kehoe as saying that Mrs. Wilson, while at base hospital No. 57, was beckoned to the cot of a soldier who displayed "numerous welts on his arms and back," and that she reported this to the president with the result that "the entire guard staff were brought up on charges and removed."

In the correspondence with the president, given out by Mr. Dallinger, the latter quoted from the newspaper account and asked for additional information so that he might "learn from the war department the punishment meted out to those guilty."

Letter from Mr. Wilson.

The president replied as follows:

"My dear Mr. Dallinger: The newspaper to which you refer in your letter to me of July 21 was entirely inaccurate. Mrs. Wilson saw no evidence of violence on the patient whom she met in base hospital No. 57, and her inquiries brought out the fact that whereas one of the prisons used by the American army in Paris had been delivered over to them in a very bad condition, the conditions had been rapidly corrected, and such harsh treatment as had been practiced in one or two instances had been promptly checked. WOODROW WILSON."

Cites March's Testimony.

With the correspondence Mr. Dallinger gave out a statement to the effect that he could not reconcile the president's favorable reference to prisons with the recent testimony of Gen. March, chief of staff of the army, "showing conditions rivaling that of Siberian prison camps."

Former Senator Beveridge in League Talk Tuesday

Former Senator Albert J. Beveridge will lecture on the underlying principles of the league of nations Tuesday night at the Auditorium theater. He will arrive in Chicago tomorrow. Col. Abel Davis, formerly of the Prairie division, has been appointed chairman of the meeting. Tickets can be obtained at the Auditorium box office, Republican national committee headquarters in the Congress hotel, and the Hamilton club. Mail requests should be directed to Col. John V. Clinnin, U. S. Fidelity and Guaranty company, Corn Exchange Bank building. The lecture will be preceded by a concert by the Royal Italian band.

Aged Contractor Is Killed by Own Auto

Joseph Arnold, 83 years old, Palos Park, Ill., a retired contractor, died at his home yesterday from injuries suffered when he was run over by his own automobile while cranking it while in gear.

Maurice Rothstein, 5 years old, 45 East Twenty-ninth street, died yesterday from injuries caused July 25 when he was struck by an automobile driven by Isaac Stern, 6153 Vernon avenue. Stern was arrigned and the case continued until Aug. 7.

Laughs as He Shoots Man; Detective Has Last Laugh

Giuseppe Coconato, 2646 Grand avenue, going through an alley on his way home last night was shot in the right shoulder by a demented Italian, who laughed loudly as he pulled the trigger of a small automatic. Detective Sergeant John Coughlin of the Marquette station heard the shooting and ran into the alley. A bullet whizzed by him. Coughlin hid until the mad man ran out of ammunition, then arrested him.

Only Tears Keep Wake of Vogelsangs from Being Dry

Timothy McGrath—they knew him as "Little Tim" years ago—dropped off a Santa Fé limited early last evening and hurried to the Briggs house. He asked for his same old room, and, after brushing up, started around. Tim had come east in search of friends and licker.

An evening newspaper brought tears to his eyes and he hurried to Vogelsang's on Madison street. Going to throw the old place in the discard—eh? Well, he'd see. Tim was a short man, but bred in Irish and bourbon, he was a mean man when started.

Asks for Proprietor.

"Where's John?" he shouted as he pounded on the mahogany.

"Tell John that Little Tim wants to see him."

"Sorry, pardner, but John has gone home," said the bartender.

"What's that, John gone home? On Saturday night. Come awn, tell him I'm here," the little Irishman pounded the bar.

"Honest, John's gone home. But you can see Jack, his son."

Jack Vogelsang, recently honorably discharged from the Blackhawk division, came forward.

"Say, if you're John's boy, tell me about this," the Irishman roared. "What's this rumor about closing up this place? Come on, tell me."

"The rumor is right," said Jack, quietly. "Dad's going to build a nineteen story hotel here and name it after my division. This is the last night."

"Honest to God," sighed Tim.

Then he gave up. Jack said so, and he knew Jack was speaking for old John.

"Gimme a drink and come here and sit down. I want to tell you what I think of you."

Almost Drank Ginger Ale.

He lugged the ginger ale to a booth—and almost drank it.

"Hell, but that was close," he said. Then he drifted into a reverie.

"Jack, I can't get this idea at all. I been away for a few years, and I came east looking for life. And they tell me Vogelsang's is closing. After all these years—well, I think it's a damn shame.

"I can remember the old round table that used to sit in that dining room, and I can remember the gang that used to drift in and crowd that board. Many's the night I have sat right next to Carter H. They used to drop in after hard days in the hall for a conference over the eats. Carter H. planned his campaigns—his first and last—here. He would drift in and pretty soon all the boys would come in.

"They figured out their wards, their policies, and their moves over that round table. Labor troubles, saloon troubles, ballot scraps were settled there. And everybody had his little drink."

Scoffs at Soft Drink.

Tim paused to look contemptuously at the ginger ale.

"Theatrical people came in," he continued. "Why, I can remember Dick Carle, kidding George Ade, and Drury Underwood out of their clothes. All of the old newspaper men used to drop in—and many's the story they got by just listenin'.

"Ed Dunne talked over his campaigns here. Fred Busse used to be at that table. Of later years Mac Hoyne has taken possession.

"And you're going to close this place up. It's a crime. It's a shame. Oh, the hours I spent an' the dollars that I spent . . ."

Finds Dining Room Dead.

"It's tough, I know," smiled Jack. "But they took the liquor away . . ."

Tim wandered into the dining room.

"Dead—positively dead, and on the last night too. Thriving since 1899 and now lifeless, passing out without a struggle. Good-bye, Jack, tell your daddy I'm going somewhere east of Suez where a man can raise a thirst."

The old man wandered through a lifeless loop to the Briggs house and his luggage.

ATTORNEYS SEEK PAGE DECISION IN TEST BEER CASE

United States Attorney Charles F. Clyne yesterday received telegrams from district attorneys in nearly every state of the union asking for copies of the opinion of Federal Judge George T. Page in the test beer suit. It is the first opinion announced outside of the New York case, which was a suit in equity to restrain the United States attorney from enforcing the prohibition law against the brewers.

Judges Rogers, Ward and Hough of the United States District Court of Appeals in New York held that a court of equity was without power to restrain the government from enforcement of a criminal law or restrain the United States collector from issuing stamps for the manufacture and sale of beer. The court said incidentally that it believed the United States attorney had the wrong construction of the act and that beer was not prohibited unless it was intoxicating.

In Boston the first criminal case was tried before Federal Judge Anderson, who held the government's construction of the law wrong in that "intoxicating beer" was barred. This was followed by the decision of Judge Rose at Baltimore, who agreed with Judge Foster on the same contention.

Judge Bickinson in Philadelphia and Judge Thompson, Pittsburgh, held with the government, declaring the word "beer" meant intoxicating beer. Judge Page's decision Friday was different in that he ruled beer of one-half of 1 per cent was such beer as was prohibited without being intoxicating.

The entire lawsuit tourned on the words "beer or other intoxicating beverages." Judge Page held that when congress used the word "beer" it was meant to be a part of the law, while if the contention of the counsel for the defendant Stenson Brewing company was followed the word "beer" might as well be left out of the law. He said the revenue laws classify any brew with less than one-half per cent of alcohol as not beer.

The government will now proceed to prosecute the Stenson Brewing company for making beer of one-half of 1 per cent alcoholic content.

While it is the contention of the government that the ruling applies to the manufacture of beer in any manner, it is expected the district attorney will make a separate test case on that ground, as soon as revenue agents make the arrest of some one found brewing beer in the home.

HOME DEMANDS AND EXPORT MAKE SUGAR SITUATION SERIOUS

Heavy consumption of sugar combined with large exports are mainly responsible for the unsatisfactory situation in the sugar market, is the explanation given by one of the largest refiners in the country. There are no government regulations on sugar such as previously prevailed, but jobbers apparently are telling the retailers, and the retailers are telling the public, that the government is responsible for their inability to secure all the sugar they require.

Announcement was made in Washington on Friday that the government had turned over 37,000,000 pounds of refined sugar to the United States Sugar Equalization board. This is about 4,000,000 pounds less than a day's melting of the refineries. The main trouble comes from the failure of the British commission, which has an agreement with the United States for 300,000 tons per month to take its quota during January, February, and March. It then doubled up on the requirements during April, May, June, and July.

Europe came into the Chicago market during the last three weeks and in one day bought 80,000 bags of sugar. This is most unusual, as the sugar was recently shipped here from the east to take care of the western trade, and has been sent back. At the same time canners in West Virginia, Michigan, and other states entered the market and the home canning demand was in competition with the buying by the outside canners and Europe.

Hymen Jeers at Mars; Frauleins and Yanks Wed

COBLENZ, July 24.—Delayed.]—[By the Associated Press.]—Reports of marriages between American soldiers and German girls have been received at headquarters from various parts of the occupied area within the last few days, but as yet no charges have been filed against any of the men, as it is believed most of the marriages were due to misunderstandings regarding the anti-fraternization regulations.

At headquarters it is said that even after the United States ratifies the treaty marriages with German girls will be prohibited by an army order.

SALOON FOE ON STATE BOARD.

Lansing, Mich., July 26.—Gov. Sleeper today appointed Grant M. Hudson, who recently resigned as head of the Michigan Anti-Saloon league, a member of the state industrial accident commission at a salary of $3,500 per year.

FARMERS' PRICES TRIPLED SINCE 1908, SAYS U.S.

Two Federal Departments Make Reports on Food Costs.

The farmer today is getting three times as much for his crops, all taken and averaged, as he did during a forty-three year period from 1866 to 1908. This fact and statistics to prove it are made public in a report of the United States department of agriculture, issued yesterday, as part of the government's search into the reason for the high cost of living.

In arriving at the figures given the department took the prices received by the farmer for wheat, corn, rye, oats, barley, buckwheat, potatoes, hay, flax, and cotton from 1866, when the first records were tabulated, up to and including 1908. A grand average on all prices for the entire time was taken and considered as a base figure for 100 per cent.

Increase Is Shown.

Using this base and averaging the farm crops year by year from 1914—when the war started—to date, shows the manner in which the farmer's price for his goods has increased. The comparison follows:

1915	139	1918	272
1916	144	1919	310

The same report showed that all farm prices averaged 13.7 per cent more than last year; 7 per cent more than in 1917, and 84 per cent more than the average for the last ten years. It showed also that on hogs, cattle, sheep, and poultry prices this year are 10 per cent more than last year, 27 per cent more than in 1917, and 87 per cent more than the average for the last ten years.

Food Prices Compared.

Simultaneously with the department of agriculture report on the farmer's produce prices the department of labor issued a report to show the increase in the price of food to the family, taken on an average in thirty cities in the United States. That report shows that for the six year period from 1913 to 1919 the increase in the retail prices of all articles of food has been 85 per cent. Six articles show an increase of 100 per cent or more, as follows: Lard, 123 per cent; flour, 118 per cent; bacon, 114 per cent; potatoes, 107 per cent; ham and cornmeal, 100 per cent. Other increases range from 70 per cent for fresh milk to 98 per cent for lamb.

"Such prices would indicate that it is not all the fault of the city grocer, the city middleman, or even the city packer," said R. H. Blakesley, secretary of the Anti-Profiteering league. "The grocer, of course, cannot be expected to run at a loss and if the prices he charges are merely in ratio with the prices he has to pay he is not profiteering. It is the grocer or butcher or jobber or wholesaler, who is not charging in ratio that we intend to get."

A meeting of the questionnaire committee of the league is slated for Monday in the rooms of the Aviation Club of Chicago on the twenty-first floor of the City Hall Square building at 8 p. m. A tabulation of all the prices charged by retail grocers, as gathered by the league's investigators during the week, will be read. A meeting of the entire league will be held at a date not yet announced to vote on whatever action it may deem best to start prices downward.

DEALERS GONE MONEY MAD, SAYS PRICE EXPERT

Every One Who Sells Is Raising Prices; U. S. Must Act.

New York, July 26.—Price fixing commissions by the government are the only remedy for profiteering in the necessities of life in the opinion of William Harmon Black, formerly vice chairman of the war labor board, who sailed today on a six weeks' trip to France and England. Mr. Black declared that even men who intended to be fair had been forced into exactions not warranted by the situation.

"The pressing problem," he said, "is the sky-rocket cost of living. It is all paid by the ultimate consumer. The country believes that nearly everybody who can is profiteering. Nearly every man is raising the price of everything he sells. If nothing is done to check this abnormal inflation in prices the stage will be reached finally where there will be a breaking point to relieve the tension."

Price Fixing Valid.

Suggesting the remedy of price fixing commissions, Mr. Black said that as far as the power of the government to create such commissions was concerned "the same Supreme court which read 'the rule of reason' into the Sherman act could read fair prices into a decision which would validate an act creating price fixing commissions."

He pointed out that the war labor board had fixed the prices of labor and that the price of wheat had also been fixed, and maintained that there was no difference in principle in his plan. If the federal government was found not to have jurisdiction over prices of production within the states Mr. Black proposed that each commonwealth appoint a commission to regulate prices within its borders.

Where the Burden Falls.

As to the composition of such commissions, Mr. Black held that the unorganized consumer should be represented, "especially that part of the consumers who do not produce and who have most bitterly felt the pinch." He suggested that each commission should be composed of a laborer, a capitalist, a railroad man, a steamship man, a farmer or miner, a manufacturer and a consumer, and should include one woman member.

"The producers," he added, "would not dare to refuse to submit the question of prices to the kind of men who would compose these commissions."

Allies Owe U. S. Total of $9,615,400,927 Today

Washington, D. C., July 26.—The United States now holds $9,615,400,927 worth of I. O. U.'s of the allies. This total was reached today when a new loan was made to France for $157,549,000. France alone now owes the United States $3,010,026,800, the treasury department announced.

NATION FACES GREATEST CROP LOSS IN YEARS

Wheat Prospects Are 300,000,000 Bushels Under Forecast.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

With a loss in wheat crop prospects of possibly 300,000,000 bu from the early prediction and 100,000,000 bu or more in oats, also a cutting down of the rye and barley, there has been the greatest reduction known in crop promise. Losses in wheat are sensational. Kansas, which had a promise of 229,000,000 bu a month ago, has 159,000,000 bu, or a loss of 70,000,000 bu in a month, as given by the state report issued Saturday. It is the greatest reduction ever made from the early prospects in any state, especially for Kansas. In the northwest losses are sensational.

It will be no surprise to see the final returns on all wheat around 1,050,000,000 bu, or about 25,000,000 more than the record crop in 1915. This will make it easier for the government to handle the crop, and no uneasiness is felt as to the outcome.

European Conditions Changed.

Conditions abroad have changed, and estimates on the world's wheat production have been reduced somewhat, although it is too early to make definite figures. Estimates on Europe's requirements range from 550,000,000 to 720,000,000 bu, which can be supplied without any hardship by the leading wheat producing countries, as all have a surplus.

There has been a readjustment of grain values the world over and prices in Argentina which have been the lowest, have about doubled, especially in corn, within a short time, due to competition between foreign buyers and speculators.

Food Situation of World Changed.

The whole food situation of the world has been changed, and a return to low values is not to be expected until there is an excess of production and the cost of the latter is greatly decreased. With speculation in farm lands, and high cost of labor, and everything the producers have to buy, there is no prospect of a low value.

LOWDEN CALMS CAR MEN AFTER BOLT TO STRIKE

Brings Peace Hope When Walkout Appears Inevitable.

and all runs could be made within a span of twelve hours.

The men demand 85 cents an hour, an eight-hour day with time and a half for overtime, and the further concessions that 80 per cent of all runs must be straight runs and all runs must be made within ten hours. Such a scheme according to the companies' estimates, would involve a 10-cent fare— to which Mr. Busby said flatly he would not agree, and members of the commission also professed to regard it as excessive.

A Tentative Suggestion.

Another of the tentative suggestions was that the men be paid 70 cents an hour, with an eight hour day, time and a half for overtime, 60 per cent of the runs straight runs and a twelve hour span.

The traction companies maintained that because the two periods daily when travel increases virtually 100 per cent are ten hours apart, neither the men's demand that 80 per cent of all runs be straight, nor the proposed ten hour span, could be put in force without an expense of $5,000,000 annually for bonus and overtime.

A settlement of both those questions appeared well under way, overtime virtually had been conceded, and the hourly wage and the eight hour day were scheduled for discussion yesterday morning when Mr. Busby's letter appeared in the newspapers.

Charge Bad Faith.

He alluded to the fact that a twelve hour span had been under consideration, and the union executives immediately branded it a breach of confidence. They professed to fear that the radical element in their organization would seize it as a pretext to assail them as being too generous to the traction lines.

If, on the other hand, negotiations were interrupted and a strike called, responsibility would rest on the men as a whole.

How the Break Came.

The break came without warning so far as the commission was concerned. It had assembled with the understanding—reached when the conferees adjourned the night before—that the cost of the men's demands was to be carefully analyzed and, perhaps, a conclusion reached before nightfall.

"I believe Mr. Busby has some figures to present," said Chairman Thomas E. Dempcy, to open the discussion. "I'll request him to read them."

"That will be unnecessary," interrupted L. D. Bland, member of the union's international board. "Our committee has decided we cannot continue the negotiations."

All except the car men's delegation exhibited surprise.

Offended by Busby.

"For what reason?" Commissioner Wilkerson inquired.

"Because of the publication of Mr. Busby's letter in this morning's papers," Bland rejoined. "We construe it as an ultimatum, and since that is true there is nothing we can do except to submit it to the men as a whole. That was the procedure outlined in the resolutions under which we are acting."

"But," protested Commissioner Lucey, "the letter is not an ultimatum. The whole subject is under discussion here. I can't conceive how it would be fair to permit the men to vote in those circumstances."

"Consider our position," Bland replied: "The men are impatient. There are many among them of radical views—that is, they are against any compromise. And we've got to consider, too, that the strike was opposed by a mere handful. What can we do when the letter reveals that after three days of talk we have gotten no place at all?"

Pledged to Secrecy.

Several of the commissioners expressed the opinion that the Busby letter had been ill-advised.

"Furthermore," Bland declared, "it made public matters we were all pledged to keep secret until a complete report could be made."

Mr. Busby explained that no breach of confidence had been intended—that he believed none had been committed; the public, he said, was entitled to know the facts since the public would have to pay the bill.

"Af for the wages proposed," he added, "and the working conditions suggested, the letter was merely a written confirmation of our verbal offer Wednesday, and a more complete explanation of some of the difficulties to be encountered in granting your demands."

Dispute Over Purpose.

"It was a clear attempt to prejudice our cause!" Bland retorted.

"It was not!" asserted Busby. "It was a true and exact statement of the case."

"Your figures are wrong——" Bland continued.

"On the contrary they are a correct abstract of our time cards and pay rolls."

The voices of the conferees rose until they became audible in the corridors.

Chairman Dempcy suggested that nothing would be gained by acrimoniousness.

"Assuming," said Commissioner Shaw, "that the letter should not have been sent, still no official aspect of the case has been compromised. Whatever recommendations the commission may make have not been affected."

Try to Patch Up Trouble.

"That isn't the point," Bland asserted. "It's the attitude it places the committee in."

Members of the commission attempted vainly for an hour to induce the union conferees to reconsider, but failed.

Neither were they successful in inducing the car men's representatives to defer or cancel Monday night's meeting.

"It's already been called," William Quinlan, president of the surface employés, pointed out. Eventually he and his associates quit the conference room.

Says Strike is Certain.

To newspaper men, who were waiting in the commission's general offices, Quinlan remarked:

"A strike is inevitable."

William Tabor, financial secretary for the surface men, added: "As far as we are concerned, the negotiations are over."

"All we've talked about since we started is the eight hour day," Maurice Lynch, assistant financial secretary for the surface men, supplemented. "We couldn't agree on that, and there was no use in continuing."

Statement by Commission.

Several statements immediately were forthcoming from the various participants. Chairman Dempcy, in the commission's behalf, gave out the following:

"The commission simply wishes to state to the public of Chicago that on the reconvening of the joint meeting at the offices of the commission this morning the representatives of the employés stated, in view of the statement contained in the public press of this state, emanating from the managers of the railroads, which they regarded as an ultimatum and which should not have been made while the negotiations were pending, they could no longer continue the negotiations without submitting a report to the railway employés whose representatives they are, and that, accordingly, the meeting had been called of the employés for Monday evening, at which a report will be made.

"The representatives of the employés then withdrew from the joint conference. The commission regrets the situation thus created, and has not entirely abandoned hope of a renewal of some conference which may ultimately adjust the situation without a suspension of service by these necessary utilities."

Unions State Their Case.

The union conferees, having repaired to their newly established quarters at the Briggs house, handed the following to newspaper men:

"When the meeting of the public utilities commission, at which the committee of employés and representatives of the companies were present, adjourned Friday afternoon to meet again this morning, it seemed that some progress had been made.

"The spirit of the conference seemed to be that we should continue the sessions without delay until some proposition should be worked out that we could take back to our men. When we first appeared before the utilities commission Monday morning it was the request of the commission, and so understood by all, that all matters discussed would be treated with confidence, and that any statements made to the public would come through the chairman of the commission.

"All day Friday the representatives of the companies and the employés' committee presented their case to the commission, with the understanding that when we adjourned we could continue Saturday and Sunday, if necessary, to reach a satisfactory conclusion.

"Imagine our surprise when we were met by representatives of the press Friday night and told that the companies had issued a long letter to the newspapers presenting in effect an ultimatum and containing a misstatement of facts.

"It was designed to prejudice the case of the employés with the public.

Charge Bad Faith.

"In issuing these statements the companies have not acted in good faith with the public utilities commission or with the employés, and they have aroused a feeling among the men on the lines that makes it impossible for the officers of the organizations to take any other course than to follow the instructions of the members and call a joint meeting to submit their report of all that has transpired during the week.

"We have therefore called a meeting of the members of divisions 241 and 308, surface lines and elevated employés, to take place at Ashland boulevard auditorium, Van Buren street and Ashland boulevard, next Monday night, July 28, at 8:30, to present our report and place the situation in their hands for future action.

"Regret" Action.

"We regret that we have been forced into this position through the unfortunate action of the companies, which leaves us powerless to take any other course. We deeply appreciate the efforts of the members of the public utilities commission to bring about a settlement of this controversy.

"They have displayed an earnest eagerness to bring about a fair adjustment.

"When we left the commissioners today we informed them that we stood ready to meet them any time that they might have a proposition they could submit to our men."

The statement was signed by William Quinlan, John McLain, C. W. Mills, William Taber, Maurice Lynch, William Mylan, W. S. McClenathan, and L. D. Bland.

Statement by Busby.

In behalf of the surface lines, the following was issued by Mr. Busby:

"I regret very much that the representatives of the men decided to break off negotiations this morning. The reason given for this action is that we gave to the public a copy of the letter sent them confirming our offer made orally last Tuesday.

"Statements have been made tending to give the impression that the companies have not made the men a definite proposition. Our letter was intended to make clear, not only to the men, but to the public, our position in this matter.

"We have already stated that the men are entitled to a fair wage increase, but the increase should be reasonable. We want them to have good wages and the best working conditions the business will permit. On the other hand, we are not prepared to agree to any proposition which will make carfares in this city unnecessarily high.

"In the meantime, we shall, if opportunity offers, endeavor to agree upon some reasonable proposition which will be fair to the men, to the public, and to the companies."

LABOR NOTES

Three hundred typewriter repair men held a meeting in the Haymarket Theater building last night and formed a union. They were addressed by American Federation of Labor organizers and propose to demand $35 a week, instead of $20 and $21 they claim they are being paid.

The United Cigar Stores company filed a bill for an injunction in the Circuit court yesterday asking that officers and members of the Retail Cigar Clerks' union No. 411 be restrained from picketing or interfering with the business of the company. The clerks are on a strike, demanding the reinstatement of Irving Clyman, president, and Albert Levy, vice president of the union, and other members whom they say have been discharged. They also want a forty-eight hour week, no Sunday work, wages of $25 to $35, and the abolishment of commissions.

With the lockout of the building workers tying up all work, the various unions and international unions are being bombarded with requests for strike benefits. Another meeting of the union committee and the contractors will be held tomorrow afternoon.

The Court Reporters' Federation, local No. 14171, will raise their rates on Sept. 1. Miss Grace H. Harte, secretary, says the raise will be 50 per cent more for court work, time an one half for overtime, 25 per cent more on the page for transcript and rate and one-half per page for rush orders and daily copy.

Harry Jacobson, 2047 West Division street, a striking member of the Knit Goods Workers' union was arrested yesterday while picketing the plant of the Lorenze Knit Goods Manufacturing company, 1754 Belmont avenue. Over 2,000 are on strike.

Postmaster William B. Carlile, upon the request of a congressional commission, has begun preparation of statistics on the cost of living and local labor conditions to support his request for an increase in pay for the 9,000 employés of the Chicago office.

UP TO CHICAGO, SAYS CHIEF

Detroit, Mich., July 26.—[Special.]—W. D. Mahon, president of the street car men's union, was not aware of the fact that the Chicago street car men had bolted the conference with the state board and called a massmeeting for Monday night until informed of the action by THE TRIBUNE correspondent.

"The conference was in session when I left Chicago," said Mr. Mahon this evening, "and the break in the conference was news to me. Future action now rests with the Chicago street car men and I cannot do anything further until I hear from them officially. I will return to Chicago if they wish me to."

Add to the Pay of Employes of Studebaker

South Bend, Ind., July 26.—Old age pensions, stock partnerships, and life insurance, together with an increase in wages and a reduction in working hours, all of which benefits to employés will begin on Aug. 1 of this year, were announced by officers of the Studebaker corporation here today, following a conference of the board of directors.

Some 6,000 men and women will benefit under the grant, which is said to be one of the greatest steps in behalf of the workers taken by any American corporation.

Illinois Postoffice Clerks to Ask $1,800 Minimum Pay

Decatur, Ill., July 26.—Illinois postoffice clerks will ask congress to raise their wages, with a minimum of $1,800 a year instead of $1,000, and a maximum of $2,400 instead of $1,500, if a resolution, being discussed by them in their annual convention here today, is adopted. They also will ask limitation of overtime work as far as possible.

WE REJECTED PEACE CHANCE IN '17--ERZBERGER

Bares Effort of Allies to Bring About End of War.

BERLIN, July 25.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—Peace overtures to Germany by Great Britain and France were made through the vatican in August, 1917, according to the declaration of Mathias Erzberger, vice premier and minister of finance, in the German national assembly at Wiemar today. These overtures, he added, were rejected by Germany.

Mgr. Paselli, papal nuncio to Munich, on Aug. 13, 1917, addressed a note to Imperial Chancellor Michaelis, inclosing a telegram from the British minister at the vatican to the papal secretary of state, to which the French government assented.

The British note, Herr Erzberger explained, asked for a German declaration for Belgian independence and compensation, and inquired as to what guarantees Germany would need for itself.

Michaelis Delays Answer.

Chancellor Michaelis did not answer the note for four weeks; then Sept. 14 he wrote that the situation for giving such a declaration was not yet sufficiently clear.

Herr Erzberger promised more important revelations within a few days. Mgr. Paselli's note said:

"I have the honor herewith to transmit to your excellency a copy of a telegram which his excellency the king of England's minister at the vatican has handed to the cardinal secretary of state.

"The French government gives its assent to the statements made in the aforementioned telegram, and his eminence earnestly desires actively to continue his efforts for the speedy attainment of a just and lasting peace such as the imperial government has shown such a conciliatory readiness to accept.

Asks Declaration on Belgium.

"Your excellency's attention is particularly drawn to the point in the telegram relative to Belgium, with a view to obtaining, firstly, a positive declaration regarding the imperial government's intentions with respect to Belgium's complete independence and compensation for damage caused Belgium through the war; secondly, a definite statement of guarantees for political, economic, and military independence which Germany desires.

"If these declarations have a satisfactory effect, his eminence thinks an important step will have been taken towards the further development of negotiations.

Holy See Ready to Reply.

"As a matter of fact, the minister of Great Britain has already informed his government that the holy see will reply to the communications made in the aforementioned telegram as soon as it has received the imperial government's reply.

"It may be permitted for my part to give expression to my firm conviction that by using your influence in all highest quarters on behalf of the papal proposal and for this peace work your excellency will gain the eternal thanks of the fatherland and the whole of humanity, if a conciliatory reply be obtained which can open up the prospect of peace negotiations."

Herr Erzberger said that the government had asked permission to publish the contents of the British dispatch, but that such permission had not yet been received.

Sensation in Assembly.

The reading of the note caused a great sensation in the assembly. In commenting, Herr Erzberger said:

"In 1916 President Wilson used every effort to bring about peace, but Mr. Wilson's peace work was sabotaged by the proclamation of unrestricted submarine warfare, and at least twice an honorable peace could have been brought about, but a fight with the military party both times prevented it. At the end of September I was in Munich. The papal nuncio came to me and with tears in his eyes said: 'Now everything is lost, and for your poor fatherland, too.'

Collapse Not Due to Revolt.

"The collapse of Germany," continued Herr Erzberger, "was not brought about by revolution, but by madness of the country's political and military authorities by lack of political insight on the part of the Conservatives and the supreme army command. These so-called authorities intimidated and terrorized the German people and are still pursuing these aims. We had to accept a peace of violence because that was the only way out.

"We have undertaken the responsibility for their misdeeds; if they wash their hands in innocency a hundred tims, with loud 'noes' they will not free themselves of their guilt, either before us, before history, or their own consciences."

LAKE FOREST'S MYSTERY UNVEILED

Box Party Invitations "to Meet Opera Star" Bring Inquiry and Reveal Remarkable Voice.

Mrs. Alfred E. Hamill, Mrs. Kent S. Clow and Opera Star.

Lake Forest, steeped in mystery all week, is drawing its first natural breath. Amateur detectives have found an answer to the question, "Who is he?" on the lips of debutante and dowager ever since Mrs. Walter S. Brewster issued invitations to a box party at the Garrick next Tuesday night, accompanied by the words: "To meet an opera star."

Yesterday Mrs. Kent S. Clow and Mrs. Alfred E. Hamill, dropping in at Covin Tree, the Brewsters' Lake Forest home, came upon a tableau—Mrs. Brewster and the Opera Star in intimate conversation.

There was no time to dissemble. The secret was out.

"Who is he?" say these two young matrons. "A very attractive personality. Hair of a lovely brown, large speaking eyes. And such a voice!"

The "opera star" turns out to be a histrionic burro, who has played the donkey part in "Pagliacci" at Ravinia for two years. Presented to Mrs. Brewster by Mrs. Scott Durand of Lake Forest, to be used in any way for the benefit of the poor little French war orphans, he will appear on the stage of the Garrick between the acts on Tuesday night, to tell the audience a few interesting stories of children "over there." Francine Larrimore is to be his spokesman, while a corps of "donkey girls," captained by Mrs. Mark Walton, will act as attendants.

YANK SALESMEN AT RHINE DUPED BY ALLIED ARMY

Find English and French Have Beaten Them Into Germany After Trade.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

COBLENZ, July 24, via Paris, July 25.—Restrictions which barred American business men from Germany officially were lifted today, and the representatives of export houses travel in hithetro forbidden territory and learn the needs of the recent enemy accumulated in the last five years.

For the opportunity large firms had been waiting for months, and made their plans to deal extensively with the Germans, only to be greeted with the first cold fact that their customers had been canvassed by salesmen for French and British firms, who placed goods totaling millions.

Put One Dver on Us.

Perhaps the salesmen will cable home they have been beaten. Perhaps the export houses will ask the state department why. Perhaps the department need not investigate what has been common knowledge along the Rhine for many months, viz.:

The British were going into Germany through Cologne, the French through Mayence. Before the representatives of the allied houses got into Germany military passes were necessary, but issuance of these to salesmen was a violation of the allied high command orders.

In plain American, some one slipped one over on us.

While American salesmen were cooling their heels, waiting for the blockade to be lifted, French and British salesmen were getting orders in Berlin, Hamburg, Munich, and a score of other large cities. That does not mean they have cornered the German trade, as it is too big for that, but they have sold everything they could furnish, and, what may be more important, contracted for purchases of things needed, including chemicals.

High Prices in Germany.

For whatever America buys from Germany it will pay much higher than in 1914. The increase is due to higher wages, scarcity of raw material and coal. The rate of exchange may have something to do with it, as before the war a hundred franc note was worth 80 marks, but now it is worth 220 marks.

The Germans are complaining of the coal shortage, but at the same time thousands of tons are supplied daily to Holland. Saxony is getting coal in Upper Silesia, while Dresden has no surplus for the gas and electric power plant. Saxony limits freight traffic to coal, provisions, and paper.

BEAUTY WEDS

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—Miss Francis Jordan, whose beauty embellished the war risk insurance calendars and who has posed for many of the drawings of Harrison Fisher and Howard Chandler Christy, late this afternoon became the bride of Lieut.-Com. Frank Huntoon, U. S. N., at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Pierce Jackson, 468 Riverside drive. Commander and Mrs. Huntoon will make their home at Rock Island, Ill.

Passport Restrictions Still Further Removed

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—The present restrictions on the issuance of passports to Europe are to be relaxed, Secretary Lansing announced today, although passports will not be issued to those desiring to go abroad solely for pleasure until after Nov. 1. "Hereafter no person desiring to visit European countries, except enemy countries and Russia, will be required to show urgent reasons or be restricted as to age," said the statement. "Such person will merely be required to show that the object of the visit is legitimate and reasonable."

ITALIAN DEBACLE LAID TO HYPNOSIS OF PROPAGANDA

Politics and Ignorance of Chiefs Also Blamed for Caporetto.

ROME, July 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The findings of the government commission investigating the Caporetto disaster in October, 1917, where the Italian line was broken by the great Austro-German attack, were published here today.

The commission's report attributes the Italian defeat to three sets of causes, which were:

First—The powerful influence of unfavorable propaganda which seriously affected the morale of the Italian troops:

Second—Political meddling with military plans.

Third—The military's lack of vision, necessary in modern warfare; underestimation of the enemy forces, and lack of preparation and material.

Gen. Benato Rosso, who commanded a part of the Italian line on the Isonzo, was acquitted by a court martial in March, 1919, of charges that grew out of the Caporetto catastrophe.

Italy Wants Big Loan.

Premier Nitti told the senate today that Italy must raise a foreign loan of 18,000,000,000 lire for the purchase of raw material. He said the refusal of the United States to grant new credits was not a hostile act, for the United States had lent Italy during the war money at a rate of 3½ per cent, whereas the rate paid on loans raised in Italy was 5½ per cent.

"The United States has accomplished its task," said the premier, "and it is now a question of asking America for an act of friendship and we also must act in a friendly manner."

Who Won the War? Italy.

Premier Nitti said:

"There is no need to say that because one of our national aspirations is unsatisfied we have lost the war. The prestige we have acquired is worth more than riches. In spite of treaties, as a result of which we ought to have been supported in our struggle against the Austro-Hungarian empire, we were alone in the combat. None can say we did not win the war."

The senate expressed confidence in the new ministry.

Infantile Paralysis Perils Three Counties in Illinois

Springfield, Ill., July 26.—The outbreak of infantile paralysis in Putnam, Bureau, and La Salle counties has assumed such proportions that the department of health today sent Dr. C. E. Crawford, district health officer, to make a survey of the situation.

BOOSTS LOWDEN FOR PRESIDENT ON HOUSE FLOOR

Denison Presents Man to Lead in Critical Situation.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—In a speech in the house today on the part played by Illinois in the war, Repesentative Denison, Republican, who represents the extreme southern end of the state, boosted Gov. Lowden for the presidency.

Mr. Denison declared Gov. Lowden is the man best fitted to guide the nation during the critical period when industrial revolution may spread from other countries to the United States.

"There will inevitably be a recoil against things as they are," Mr. Denison said. "The danger is that the hideous head of revolution will appear. The old order of things will change. Who knows what the near future has in store for us, whether an industrial crisis will be precipitated? I believe the immediate future is charged with dynamite, and the presidential election of 1920 will be second in importance only to that of 1860. The man to lead us through this critical situation is Gov. Lowden."

Asks League of Nations Views.

Representative Bankhead of Alabama, a Democrat, interrupted Mr. Denison to inquire how Gov. Lowden stands on the league of nations.

"I am not authorized to speak for Gov. Lowden," replied Mr. Denison, "but you can depend upon it that he will have a real American view of it."

Representative Yates of Illinois arose with a question:

"The gentleman has stated that Gov. Lowden is his candidate for the presidency," said Mr. Yates. "Is it not true that he is Illinois' candidate?"

"That is true," replied Mr. Denison. "The state of Illinois is preparing to offer him for the presidency."

Mr. Denison made a veiled reference to other prospective candidates.

"I do not think next year will be a favorable time for a military man," he said, "nor will it be a favorable time for an idealist or a dreamer of dreams. The country needs a practical man, who will lead us back to the constitution of our fathers. If the people want a big man, a good man, Illinois can give these in Gov. Lowden."

Constructive Statesman.

Mr. Denison said that Gov. Lowden had served with distinction in the house, had proved himself to be "a constructive statesman devoted to the interests of the people and the nation, who had toiled with the toilers, farmed with the farmers, and was respected by both classes as well as by all others."

Referring to Gov. Lowden's service in his present office, Mr. Denison said economics under the consolidation of state boards and commissions had made it possible to reduce the state tax rate last December from 90 to 75 cents per $100 assessed valuation and that the Illinois budget system was being investigated and patterned after by other states.

Mentioning the fact that the only president from Illinois up to this time was Lincoln, Mr. Denison said that the country might well turn to that state again at this time.

Reviews Illinois' War Record.

The Illinois congressman reviewed the achievements of the Illinois soldiers in the war, stating that a total of 329,504 men were furnished by the state, in addition to 27,000 men recruited by the shipping board. He mentioned the standing of the state in agriculture, commerce, and coal mining.

"Wherever the Illinois soldiers went they made a splendid record and proved themselves worthy," said Mr. Denison. "The 33d division was the only division to reach its objective on schedule time in the Argonne battle."

Ohio Urges Harding.

Another presidential boom was launched during the day by a member of the house, Representative Emerson of Ohio sending a letter to his colleagues from that state urging them to join in solidifying sentiment in favor of Senator Warren G. Harding for the Republican presidential nomination.

Owen Boom Center in Chicago.

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 26.—[Special.]—National headquarters for Senator Bob Owen, Oklahoma's candidate for the Democratic nomination for president, have been opened in Washington, according to word received here today. Headquarters may later be moved to Chicago. Oklahoma state headquarters will open Monday, Gov. Robertson, chairman of the state organization, announced.

A RESCUE

Woman and Girl She Saved from Lake in Race with Two Men Swimmers.

PHOTO-HANSEN

Mabel Lindstrom
Louise Sherry

In a race with two men to save the life of Mabel Lindstrom, 10 years old, who had lost her balance on water wings which carried her beyond her depth in the lake, Louise Sherry, 1611 Benson avenue, Evanston, won.

Miss Sherry, telephone operator for the Evanston News Index, was seated on a pier at the foot of Lincoln street, Evanston, yesterday, when she heard the child scream for aid. Miss Sherry leaped from the pier and started swimming toward her. Two men also dived, but Miss Sherry reached the child first.

"My daughter, my only child," said Mrs. G. Lindstrum, 2211 Wesley avenue, Evanston, "visited the lake for the first time without me in the company of neighbors.

"When she returned she told me she had been nearly drowned, but I discounted the story, because the neighbors denied there had been an accident. She will never go to the lake again without me."

STARTS INQUIRY INTO PRICES OF ROLLED STEELS

U. S. Board Acts on Complaint Pittsburgh Basis Is Unfair.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—The federal trade commission has acted on the complaint of the Western Association of Rolled Steel Consumers that the United States Steel corporation and other steel producers act in violation of the federal trade commission act and the Clayton antitrust act in selling rolled steel on a Pittsburgh basing point basis.

The commission today announced that it has undertaken a thorough investigation of the subject to determine whether a formal complaint should be issued. In its complaint the Western association urges that Chicago should be made another basing point in the fixing of steel prices.

Means "Biggest Lawsuit."

The action, which is undertaken by the trade commission as a friendly suit, has been pronounced by E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, as "the biggest lawsuit ever tried in this country."

The application for complaint made by the Western association is presented by Attorney John S. Miller of Chicago, as counsel. It says the membership comprises more than 700 fabricators of steel, operating in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington, Wyoming, Colorado, and California. All are tributary to what is known as the Chicago district.

These interests say the United States Steel corporation mill at Gary, Ind., produces steel at a cost substantially lower than at the Carnegie plant of the steel corporation at Pittsburgh or at other corporation plants in Pennsylvania. It is added that more than one-fifth of the rolled steel made in the United States is made by the respondent at Gary, Ind.

Prices Called Unreasonable.

"The applicant submits that the normal, reasonable price for rolled steel should be measured by cost of production with addition of reasonable profits, and without addition of a large and arbitrary increase which forms no part of the production cost and is over and above such reasonable profit," says the complaint of the steel fabricators.

The applicants declare that despite the fact that steel is made more cheaply at Gary, the complainants are compelled to pay a set price plus a freight rate of $5.40 per ton from Pittsburgh to Gary, although in fact the steel actually is not shipped from Pittsburgh at all.

Certain discriminations in price, especially to agricultural implement manufacturers, are charged by the steel consumers. The whole method is alleged to be so repugnant to the federal trade commission law and the Clayton law that it should be ordered discontinued.

FINNISH DIET PICKS PRESIDENT

HELSINFORS, July 25.—Delayed.—The Finnish diet today elected Prof. K. J. Stahlberg president of the republic. Prof. Stahlberg received 143 votes, while Gen. Justus Mannerheim, who has been acting as regent, was given fifty votes.

HIS TOPSY TURVY ANATOMY KEEPS MEDICS BAFFLED

Till X-Ray Shows His Liver, Heart, Lungs Misplaced.

The anatomical tribulations of Mr. H. W. Matthias are something enormous. Back in the '70s, when he first took his place among the citizenry of the world, Nature temporarily misplaced the blue prints labeled "Species homo—male." As a result Mr. Matthias was not assembled according to orthodox plan.

No one knew exactly just what the matter was. The ambitious M. D.'s of Goodnow, where Matthias dwelt amid his progeny, looked him over at several dollars per inspection and shook their heads.

Then it occurred to some one that he might have appendicitis. So he came to Chicago Heights, where a medic explored in the usual vicinity of the "worm" and drew forth an alleged appendix. Mr. Matthias felt no better.

Slightly Misplaced.

"Try Dr. Waterman up at the Hotel Sherman," suggested a sympathetic friend after several years had passed. "They tell me he's considerable anatomical sleuth."

Matthias packed his grip, kissed his wife and children, and locomotived to Chicago. There Dr. Waterman gave him the professional stare and felt him over. Then he applied an inquiring ear upon the left sector of his chest.

"Your heart's stopped," he gasjed, reaching for the pulmotor. "No, it hasn't, either. Here it is, over on your right side."

Topsy Turvy Interior.

An X-ray examination followed, with the discovery that the liver was also on the wrong side and the colon piled up in a knot on the right. Moreover, his spleen was out of place and his lungs transposed.

The patient was taken to the American hospital, 850 Irving Park boulevard, and Dr. Max Thorek made the second trip in search of that elusive appendix. He found it this time, way over on the left side of Mr. Matthias' person.

"What did they get on that first operation when they thought they had your appendix?" the patient was asked yesterday.

"Money," he groaned.

MARINE STRIKE OVER; ENGINEERS ARE STILL OUT

New York, July 26.—Despite settlement of the strike of the International Seamen's union, ships will not sail from Atlantic or gulf ports until demands of the Ocean Marine Engineers' union, not considered in the settlement, are granted, according to a statement tonight by B. L. Todd, business manager of the union.

End of the strike of 40,000 marine workers, which has tied up shipping for three weeks, was announced here today by Gustave H. Brown, general secretary of the International Seamen's union.

The men, Secretary Brown stated, were satisfied with the terms of settlement, which include an increase of $15 a month per man for all except the coal passers, who receive a $10 increase.

Latest reports from local unions all over the country, he said, showed unanimity in favor of waiving the demands for an eight hour day at sea and a "closed shop" in order to end the strike.

The AEOLIAN-VOCALION

—supreme in the art of playing for the dance

IT is a witching, midsummer night, purple-clear and cool. There is just moon enough to throw fantastic shadows from shrubs and flowers across the dew-spangled lawn. The fragrant breath of the wind sets a-swaying the Japanese lanterns that edge the veranda roof.

A sublime night for that most fascinating of summer evening pastimes, dancing "al fresco."

"Aloma Fox Trot"
Played by the Vocalion Dance Orchestra

THE broad, breeze-swept veranda has been cleared of all furniture save an Aeolian-Vocalion. How smart and attractive it looks as a mellow ray of light from within the house throws a soft sheen over the rich mahogany case!

Such dance music as this is!—melodious, snappy, crisply phrased—as a Fox-Trot should be. The Vocalion summons to the scene the very instruments themselves—the mellow saxophone, the strings, the rhythmic beat of the traps; all are present to the very life.

"Rainy Day Blues"—One-Step
Played by Dabney's Band

WITH merry, tuneful abandon, the Vocalion lends itself to the spirit of the music as played by this famous Ziegfeld Follies Band. Now we hear the brasses—trombone, cornet and bass—clear in tone and big in volume—it is almost unbelieveable that a phonograph is delivering this splendid volume of music.

"Thoughts of Home, Sweet Home"—Waltz
By Yerkes' Jazarimba Band

AGAIN the character of the music changes—as the Vocalion breaks softly into a beautiful waltz. There is the sinuous legato waltz-rhythm of the strings—the silvery tremolo of the xylophones is heard as the couples glide through the dance.

Presently one young girl steps over to the Vocalion and draws out a little device attached to the instrument by a slender cord. Her hands move slightly and lo! the music gradually melts into distance—again in answer to a longer pressure it swells forth to full fortissimo. Now her hands separate again and the music gradually grows softer, dreamier, fades to a deeper whisper—and ends.

Vocalion Features

THIS effect, so often heard when fine orchestras play waltzes, is possible to one phonograph only, the Vocalion, through its sensational expression device, the Graduola.

Vocalion Records play one-third longer than any lateral cut phonograph record without repeating; due to the finer cutting used in the Vocalion Record-making process.

The Vocalion Automatic Stop is simpler to adjust than any other device of its kind on the market, and is absolutely precise and effective in action.

The Vocalion plays every standard disc record made. This means that every instrument and every voice which has been recorded phonographically can be reproduced upon the Aeolian-Vocalion.

Most important of all, the Vocalion possesses the acknowledged ability to reproduce the tones of all instruments and all voices with a life-like realism known to no other phonograph.

VOCALION PRICES—Conventional models from $50. Period models from $240. Convenient terms.

Mandel Brothers

An Old Lake View Landmark on the Market

Lincoln Turner Hall
Diversey Boulevard, near Sheffield Avenue

A two-story brick building of substantial construction, about 70x125 feet. Ample room on first floor for two large stores and storerooms.

Broad stairway leading to second floor. Front part of second floor is divided into good-sized lodge rooms, anterooms, and lobbies. Rear part is an auditorium about 54x77 exclusive of stage. Balcony on three sides. Well adapted for dancing or entertainments. Running water, lavatories and toilets at convenient places throughout the building. Electricity, gas, steam heat. Cement basement.

Connected with the main brick building on the west is a two-story frame gymnasium about 40x60. Fine floor. Shower baths and dressing rooms. In front of the gymnasium and opening on Diversey is a smaller brick and frame building which might be adapted for a small store.

The lot on which these buildings are located has a frontage of 200 feet on Diversey, and a depth of 125 feet. A new brick wall runs along the Diversey side, forming a private yard.

This property is very desirable for a clubhouse, stores, or light manufacturing. The unoccupied space offers a splendid location for new buildings. The entire premises now bring a rental of $250 a month.

The description of the property is as follows: Edson's Sub. of E 6⅔ acres of Block 10, and E 3⅓ acres of Block 13, Sub. of Lots 3 to 10, Block 13. Canal Trustee's Sub. E ½, R 14, T 40, Sec. 29. Dimensions, 200x125 feet

Selling price and detailed information will be given to interested parties.

SIX SAILORS DIE AS PACIFIC FLEET BOILER BURSTS

Accident at Canal on the Naval Tender Melville.

On Board the U. S. S. New Mexico, July 26.—[By wireless via Colon.]—Six men were killed today in a boiler explosion on the U. S. S. Melville, a naval tender attached to the Pacific fleet, Capt. Twining, the chief of staff, has been advised.

The Melville, the first ship especially designed as a destroyer tender and completed in 1915, was the first large American naval vessel to cross the ocean after the United States entered the war. It carries a regular personnel of 500 officers and men, more than one-half of whom are skilled mechanics.

Giant Warships Traverse Canal.

Aboard the U. S. S. New Mexico, Friday, July 25.—Four dreadnaughts of the Pacific fleet, the New Mexico, Arkansas, Texas and New York, were lifted successfully through the Gatun locks today. This was the first attempt to negotiate the waterway with a fleet of dreadnaughts, and tonight the warships lie anchored in the fresh water of Gatun lake, eighty-five feet above sea level.

Admiral Hugh Rodman, in command of the fleet, was pleased with the success of the first stage of the canal trip. He said: "The flagship was lifted out of the three locks of Gatun dam in one hour and seventeen minutes. Now let us go tarpon fishing near the dam—putting dreadnaughts through the canal is too easy."

Proves Canal's Value.

Twenty destroyers went through the canal Thursday, passing through the locks in groups of ten. Capt. Twining, chief of staff, said that the canal had proved its naval value beyond a doubt, as dreadnaughts may be easily moved from the Atlantic to the Pacific with celerity and without trouble as shown by today's operation. The Pacific fleet will leave Panama for San Diego, Cal., Sunday night.

Wilson Review at Golden Gate.

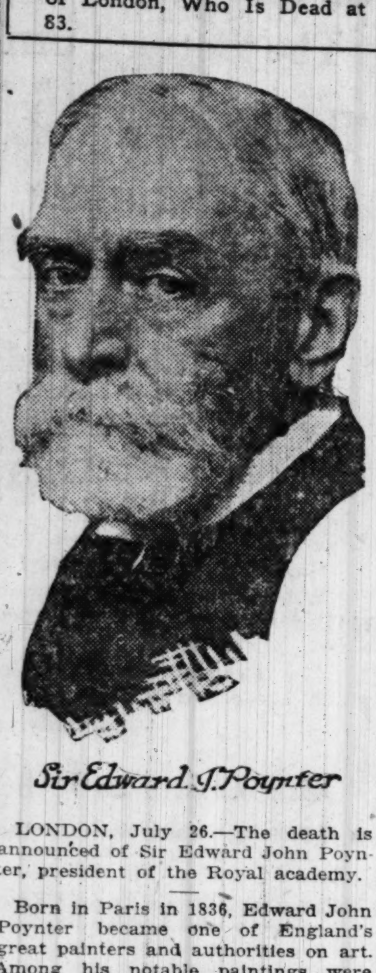
Washington, D. C., July 26.—Complete plans for President Wilson's trip are expected to be announced from the White House within the next few days. The president plans to leave Washington between Aug. 8 and 10, it is said, and probably will go direct to San Francisco, where he will review the Pacific fleet when it arrives there Aug. 15.

F CLEANLINESS IS NEXT, ETC., 1,700 IN N.Y. ARE UNGODLY

New York, July 26.—A housing survey of a block in East Thirty-third street made for the state reconstruction commission shows one bathtub in forty-three tenement houses in which live 1,700 persons. The bathtub is the property of the saloonkeeper. It is for use by the owner and his family and comparatively few of the other 481 families on the block have even seen it. The next approach to bathing facilities discovered by the investigators on that block was a stationary washtub with a partition which can be lifted out Saturday nights.

ONLY ART ENDURES

President of the Royal Academy of London, Who Is Dead at 83.



Sir Edward J. Poynter

LONDON, July 26.—The death is announced of Sir Edward John Poynter, president of the Royal academy.

Born in Paris in 1836, Edward John Poynter became one of England's great painters and authorities on art. Among his notable paintings were some of his earliest—"Israel in Egypt," [1867]; "The Catapult," [1868], and "Atalanta's Race" [1876].

On the death of Sir John Millais in 1896 Poynter was elected to the presidency of the Royal Academy and was knighted. He was made a baronet in 1902.

One of Sir Edward's sons, Hugh E. Poynter, married Miss Mary Dickinson, daughter of Charles M. Dickinson, American consul general-at-large, at Constantinople.

WARN BASIC LAW CANDIDATES TO AVOID PLEDGES

The Civic federation issued a bulletin yesterday urging candidates for the constitutional convention not to pledge themselves on proposals likely to come up. It asks them not to "foreclose their judgment," and says "the only proper pledge a candidate can give is that he will do all in his power to promote the welfare of the people."

"Having observed," says the bulletin, "that in the confusion of a campaign candidates for other legislative positions at times have been prevailed upon to commit themselves in ways that later proved embarrassing, we take the liberty of calling your attention to this practice on the part of certain organizations and interests, and of warning you against such insidious efforts.

"We believe the purpose of the convention is to modernize provisions of the constitution which have become antiquated, preserving the coherence of the instrument, regardless of the amount of revision that may be deemed necessary. We do not suppose the people intended, in voting for such a revision, that the convention should meet merely to submit back to the voters any or all changes which various small groups might demand."

WEIL WINS AND LOSES IN FIGHT TO QUIT PRISON

Habeas Corpus Hearing Set, but He Goes Back to Cell.

Joseph "Yellow Kid" Weil, alleged "con man de luxe," was only partly successful yesterday when he and his attorney, Eugene Moran, appeared before Judge Windes in the Criminal court to seek his freedom on a writ of habeas corpus. Weil was sentenced to the penitentiary on two charges, and his attorney argued before the judge that the "Kid" was now serving his second term first.

Judge Windes ordered the writ issued, returnable before him next Thursday.

Weil's and his attorney's efforts to have him released on cash bond or, at least, be allowed to remain in the county jail pending the hearing on the writ was unavailing. He had to go back to Joliet penitentiary pending the hearing.

"If Weil were to be released on this flimsy writ, which is without merit, it would be a travesty on criminal law," declared Assistant Attorney General Edward J. Taylor to the judge.

"Weil has a long career of crime and one of his associates forfeited a $100,000 bond," suggested Assistant State's Attorney Raber. "The associate mentioned is Fred Buckminster.

The judge considered a moment and the "Kid" lost.

Weil seemed somewhat cast down by the judge's decision. His blond beard was gone and the walking stick that he carried during his trial had likewise disappeared. His wife was a spectator at the hearing.

SENATE DELAYS DRY MEASURE

Washington, D. C., July 26.—Legislation for the enforcement of wartime and constitutional prohibition probably will not be enacted for two months at least, as the result of the decision today of Republican leaders to have the house recess from Aug. 2 to Sept. 8.

Senate leaders have indicated that many changes would be made in the house bill, and even should the senate pass its measure before the house reconvened in September considerable time would elapse before final enactment, as the differences between the senate and house would have to be thrashed out in conference.

DEPUTY SHERIFF EXONERATED.

Patrick Carr of 1800 West Madison street and Charles Gada of 3142 Pensacola avenue, special deputies sworn in during the Argo riots, and accused by Joseph Stock, a Yellow Cab company chauffeur, of having taken advantage of their temporary authority to intimidate him, were discharged in the Sheffield avenue court yesterday when Stock failed to appear to prosecute charges he had filed against them.

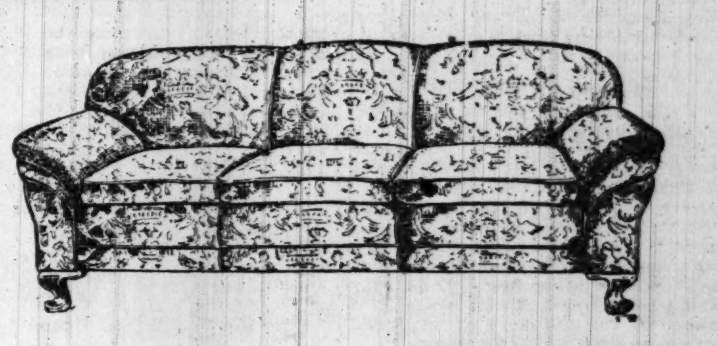
YOUR interest in this sale is probably greater than in any previous year. If you know how far behind the factories are on their orders you are wondering if there will be anything to buy.

We have a remarkable stock of beautiful things and all of them genuine Scholle quality throughout. Many are marked at special prices for this sale, and we invite you to come and see how well we have prepared to take care of our customers.

When the war began we, like all others, were tempted to quit giving orders, as no one knew what was coming; but realizing that our business was built on always having the goods and the service that our customers wanted, we decided to continue to order and select and buy in a perfectly normal way, which we have done consistently.

The result is that today we are in position to offer you some wonderful furniture; plenty of it; and at prices that are very attractive; some of our retail prices today are far below those now quoted on wholesale lots by the factories.

Come and see this storeful of furniture bargains, and not once has Scholle quality been sacrificed.



Rugs

The same things apply to our rugs; we ordered and selected and bought pretty much as though there were no war, and now we have a plentiful stock at unusual prices. We have plenty of fine domestic and oriental rugs from which to make your choice.

EUROPE, WAR WEARY, WANTS U. S. TO HURRY

Willing to Accept Any Modifications to Two Pacts.

BY HENRY WAL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, July 26.—The United States senate amendments to or alterations in the peace treaty and league of nations covenant may not cause as much trouble as the pessimists have thought.

Careful inquiry among French, British, and Italians discloses no apparent desire on the part of any of them to combat any changes America may make in the documents. Any revisions of the treaty would require that a new revised agreement be handed to the Germans for ratification, but with every Teuton spokesman making speeches in behalf of overtures toward America it is not believed Germany would make any objections to signing the treaty anew with amendments or reservations, especially as there is no evidence that the terms will be made stricter.

Japs Might Protest.

The Japanese might make a protest against any United States reservation regarding Shantung, but investigation fails to disclose any elements among the French, British, or Italians who would stand by Japan on such a platform.

It is frankly conceded that any senate changes or reservations in the league of nations covenant would weaken the league, but at the present big and small powers alike want the league, even though it be so shorn of powers as to be nothing more than a glorified Hague tribunal.

If the United States does not become a member of the league the organization seems doomed to fall, but it is believed a shadowy structure can be carried on exactly like the Hague tribunal was—as a mere façade behind which secret or open ententes and alliances will work. Furthermore, the league, under no matter what guise, could always be used to apply pressure against Germany.

All in Favor of Peace.

Public opinion in Europe everywhere is whole-heartedly in favor of peace and the banishment of all schemes or propositions likely to cause war a new.

If the United States senate accepts the treaty and the league covenant, but maintains certain reservations, the president may either sign articles thus agreeing with the reservations or he may cable a proposition. If he signs the amended treaty and sends it to Paris to the president of the peace conference it will be up to such allied powers as refuse to accept these changes to declare themselves.

France is entirely satisfied with the Anglo-American military treaties, and will make no further fight for the league of nations, it is believed.

Exponents of America's membership in the league of nations assert it is an error to think that the United States troops and warships would have to take part in every little flareup in the Balkans or other parts of the world. They declare American membership will merely enable the United States to sit in upon the big power and diplomatic conversations when a world crisis arrives, so that the little military skirmishes between the small states cannot burst forth into worldwide hostilities, as in 1914, without America having a hand trying to stave off recourse to war.

Believing French and British public opinion actually reflects American opinion, however, leading diplomats here refuse to believe the United States senate will dare trifle with the war weary people by refusing to ratify the treaty as it stands without taking chances on what might happen if rejected.

AIR WEDDING

Army Aviator Takes Bride in One Machine, Best Man and Preacher in Other—Wireless Does the Rest.

Lieut. and Mrs. G. E. Burgess.

New York, July 26.—Traveling eighty miles an hour, 2,000 feet in the air, Lieut. George E. Burgess of the army aviation corps and Miss Milly K. Schaefer of Brooklyn were married today by wireless telephone.

The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Alexander Wouters from another airplane, piloted by Lieut. Eugene H. Hartsdale, best man, while the machines circled above 200,000 persons attending a police field day at Sheepshead Bay speedway.

The details of the ceremony were announced to the crowd after being received at a wireless telephone station. The bridesmaids, who were in the grandstand, also had wireless telephone connection with the airplanes.

O, SKINNAY, RUN! THEY'RE TAKING TAX OFF 'SODIES'

Ice Cream Also Freed of Levy by G. O. P. of House Body.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Repeal of the soda water and ice cream tax; reduction of the tax on fruit juices; protection by increased duties of tungsten and magnesite, two war industries; and pearl buttons, an industry menaced by Japanese competition, and repeal of the Canadian reciprocity act of 1911, were propositions approved today by the ways and means committee of the house.

On all these matters Republicans voted as a unit with Democrats dissenting. Removal of the tax on soda water and ice cream was objected to on the theory that all consumption taxes should be repealed at the same time, and then only if some other source of revenue is found.

The bills increasing tariff duties were objected to as contrary to Democratic doctrine, the minority members having agreed to support propositions to protect war industries by an import license control extending over a limit period.

Postpone Dye Taxation.

Republicans had not reached the point of agreement on a bill for the protection of the domestic dye industry and did not bring up the subject in the meeting. The majority party members will hold further conferences with a view to action on the dye bill next Thursday.

The Republican steering committee is anxious to obtain action in the house on the bill repealing the tax on soda water and ice cream before the recess scheduled to start Saturday.

Considerable opposition has been expressed by Republican as well as Democrats to repeal of any of these taxes without providing another means of revenue, but the majority party leaders intend to force favorable action if possible.

The fruit juice bill applies to grape and loganberry juice. The tax on manufacturers of these products is reduced from 10 per cent of the sale price to 2 cents per gallon, the claim being that the present law amounts to a tax of from 20 to 30 cents per gallon, and is an excessive burden on the industry.

War Industries Guarded.

The domestic tungsten industry was developed during the war as a means of supplying the substance needed in the manufacture of high speed steel and for other war purposes, while magnesite was needed for use in blast furnaces.

The pearl button bill restores duties formerly in the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, eliminated by the Underwood act. It is said that 20,000 workers are affected by this industry, which exists along the Mississippi and other inland rivers.

Representative Young, North Dakota, filed a report with the house from the committee favoring the repeal of the Canadian reciprocity act. He explained that provisions of the bill affecting wood pulp and wheat, actually in operation, were reënacted in the Underwood tariff law and hence are not affected by the repeal bill.

Resume Air Mail Service Following Strike in East

New York, July 26.—Air mail service between New York and Chicago, which was suspended yesterday by a strike of twenty pilots at the local landing field in Belmont park, was resumed today. The plane with Chicago mail, scheduled to leave for Bellefonte, Pa., at 5 a. m., did not get away until 8:25 o'clock. The delay was due, local postoffice officials said, to the failure of the mail to arrive on the field in time.

PUT ALLEGED BLACK HAND LEADERS IN JAIL

The firing of a sawed-off shotgun in Little Italy Friday night in what is believed to have been an attempt to take the life of an Italian, one of the Black Hand victims, and the appearance of an Italian woman carrying a mysterious package in the federal building late yesterday after the offices had been closed were the alarms that reopened the $50,000 blackmail plot last night.

Warrants were issued by United States Commissioner Lewis F. Mason for [illegible], Lucia [illegible] alias Lucy Naponelli; Joe and Jacob Vito, and others of the "gang" rounded up by postoffice inspectors recently. The alleged Black Hand leaders who had been released on bond were thrown into cells at police stations and a score of victims whose lives have been threatened were taken to nearby cities by Deputy Marshal Sam Howard and assistant deputies, where they will be held to assure their safety.

The incident of the Italian woman was reported by a charwoman and an elevator man. According to the charwoman, the Italian, carrying a package wrapped in newspaper, appeared on the eighth floor of the building shortly after 5 o'clock. She wandered through the corridors of the four wings, finding all offices closed, and when approached by the charwoman said she was just looking at the "nice building." She then walked to the seventh floor, where she was met by the head charwoman, who also questioned her. Without replying the woman took the elevator to the street floor, still holding the package carefully. She was ordered out of the building by the elevator man.

The third regiment of the reserve militia, led by Col. Anson H. Bolte, returning from Camp Logan, paraded the loop yesterday, 960 men in number. Gen. Leroy T. Steward, brigade commander, reviewed the regiment as it passed the federal building.

NOTE TO WOMAN NETS SUSPECT IN $4,800 ROBBERY

He wrote a letter to a woman in Chicago, and [illegible] the police came [illegible] Edward Tillian, wanted here for robbing Philip Fleming, messenger of the Austin National bank, of $4,800 last Tuesday. He was arrested in Kansas City last night by Detectives McFarland and Cartan.

His two alleged companions in the robbery are known, according to Chief of Detectives Mooney.

Tillian denied participating in the robbery, but admitted he was in Chicago at the time. The police say he is an ex-convict. He [illegible] Flaming, who lives at 3027 Walnut street, was arrested on complaint of Miss Matilda Wunders, 145 N. Central Park avenue on the charge he stole her purse.

JAIL ENDS DAY'S ORGY OF FORGERY

James Ross Cameron, 20 years old and a resident of Keewahlin, Mich., bombarded Chicago yesterday with bogus $100 postoffice money orders, netting nearly $700 and a new outfit, from shoes to hat, which he purchased at various loop stores in order to cash the forged paper. He was arrested by Postoffice Inspectors Sullivan and Mundelle.

In a confession made to Chief Postoffice Inspector James E. Stuart, Cameron admitted robbing the Keewahlin postoffice of a pad of money order forms, a money order stamp, and a cutter, July 24. He arrived in Chicago and at once set to work issuing and circulating $100 money orders, using the signature "C. E. Harris."

Placed under bonds of $5,000 by United States Commissioner Lewis F. Mason, Cameron went to jail marveling at the astuteness of the postoffice inspectors in trailing him down in a few hours.

Here's a "self-starter" for your washing machine

Fels-Naptha Soap. Everyone knows naptha dissolves dirt. When you set your clothes to soak in a solution made by Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water, the naptha searches out the dirt and loosens it.

The naptha starts to work before you start the machine. This saves lots of "churning."

The machine flushes every thread of the garment with naptha, therefore the Fels-Naptha way is the complete way of cleaning. ALL of the dirt is removed.

When you use Fels-Naptha, you'll notice this difference:—

—the clothes will be whiter
—they will smell sweeter
—they will last longer

If you wash by hand, remember this: You don't have to boil the clothes unless you really want to. When you use Fels-Naptha, you KNOW the soap will do the hard part of the work.

SCRAP OF PAPER MYSTERY STIRS POLICE CAPTAIN

Missing Clew to Attack on Woman Is Being Sought.

What has become of a mysterious scrap of paper dropped by assailants who attacked Mrs. Melville Warner of 463 Calumet avenue. Thursday night? Detective Sergeant Patrock Brown of the Fiftieth street station, who was assigned to the case, declared he turned the paper in to the station. At the station it could not be found yesterday and Capt. Michael Lee, much annoyed by its apparent disappearance, ordered an immediate investigation.

Story of Attack.

Mrs. Warner, the wife of an army lieutenant, was walking in Grand boulevard in front of the home of Thomas Byrne, at 4519, about 10:30 o'clock Thursday night, when two men suddenly sprang upon her and beat and choked her into unconsciousness.

"I had mailed some letters," she said yesterday, "and I thought I would walk around the block. When I got in front of this big residence I noticed a man standing near the stone stairway leading up to the door. When I got even with him I noticed he had a black cloth over the lower half of his face and a dirty gray cap pulled down over his eyes. His clothes were black and his collar turned up.

"I stopped involuntarily for a moment and looked at him. The next instant I was seized from behind by the left arm by another man—a big powerful fellow."

Shows Her Bruises.

Mrs. Warner here exhibited big bruises on her arm where the men had seized her.

"He jerked me around and threw me on my right side. As he did so a piece of paper fell out of his pocket. Instinctively I picked it up with my free right hand and put it my mouth. The man then let go of my arm and grasped me by the throat. The other one then ran up to him and said: 'Look out, beat it, we're trapped!'

"With that the big fellow struck me over the head with a revolver and I knew no more until a policeman revived me and carried me home. I thought they had placed a rope around my throat; but the policeman told me it was a handkerchief they had tied there.

No Attempt at Robbery.

"I had $11 in money in my pocket in a small purse, and a wrist watch on. They made no attempt to rob me. They were white men, I believe. I don't know whether I screamed or not, but I don't believe I did, and can't understand why they should say they were 'trapped.' I don't know what became of the paper after I put it in my mouth. The police must have taken it out. It was quite a big piece, as it irritated my throat."

Sergt. Brown said his investigation led him to believe Mrs. Warner had walked into an attempt by burglars to rob the Byrne home, and that they slugged her simply to make a safe getaway. He declared he didn't remember what was on the slip of paper, but that it was "at the station."

He could not be reached later in an effort to find out who had the paper at the station. Neither could Desk Sergeant Manning, who was on duty at the time.

PICKWICK CLUB AIDS ICE FUND FOR POOR KIDS

"We're th[illegible] vick club because we have a go[illegible]e to beat the Dickens, I guess——

"'N' then besides we like to have other little kids see good times, too, so we're all Pickwickers together."

There's the constitution and by-laws of the "Pickwick club" at the Chicago Beach hotel as outlined by a little charter member who voted "yes" the other day to turning everything in the club treasury over to THE TRIBUNE free ice fund for Chicago's poor kids. It came yesterday in an envelope, $4 in all—happiness and comfort for a score of overheated tenement children!

"The club is a hotel affair," explained Miss Rena Stillwell, social director, "to interest little guests. We do most everything from bathing to hop scotch. The dues are 10 cents a week and the money each year is supposed to be used for a big Pickwick children's party at the season's end." Robert Clarke, the manager, told the club last week he intends to give the party himself and the children demanded at once that our money be turned over to help the poor kids. THE TRIBUNE ice fund of course is the proper place. Members have directed that any more money that comes in shall go to THE TRIBUNE summer hospital and Camp Algonquin fund for tenement children and their tired mothers.

TWO DROWN AS CITY SWELTERS; HOT AGAIN TODAY

Comedy Relief Given by a Man Snoring in Boat in Lake.

Two Chicagoans were drowned in Lake Michigan yesterday after one of the hottest week ends the city has passed through this year. The mercury bobbed up to the 1919 maximum of 95 degrees, and over 100,000 parboiled victims sought relief at the parks and beaches. It's going to be hot again today, the weather man says.

Donald Calder, 3732 Southport avenue, lost his life off Grace street when he was seized with cramps 150 feet from shore. Life Guard Joseph Harrop paddled to his rescue, but the bather had gone down for the third time. After an unsuccessful attempt at resuscitation the body was taken to the Broadway undertaking rooms.

Tragedy and Comedy.

An unidentified man, about 45 years old, sank while bathing at the foot of Roosevelt road. He was 200 yards from shore when he shouted for help. Before aid could reach him he disappeared.

The body of Leroy McDermott, who was drowned at Columbus park Friday night, was recovered early yesterday morning by the west park police. It was the first drowning in the pool since it was opened last year.

Henry Edmunds, who lives at the Haven house on the Northwestern university campus, shoved off from Evanston in a canoe shortly after noon yesterday. An hour later several friends saw the canoe floating right side up, apparently unoccupied. They swam out and found Edmunds snoring in the bottom of it.

Breeze Helps Some.

There was little relief to be found from the heat during the afternoon, but toward evening a twenty-three mile an hour wind blew up from the south. It continued spasmodically through the night.

Further relief is expected late today, when the long delayed thunderstorm is due to break, according to official forecast. Early in the day the weather bureau looks for high temperatures, which may approximate those of yesterday.

FLAMES TRAP FIGHTERS; LEAP IN RIVER SAVES

Missoula, Mont., July 26.—A crew of more than sixty men, fighting a fire in the Selway forest last Thursday, were trapped by the flames and saved themselves by leaping into a stream, where they remained up to their necks until the fire had passed.

Fires Worry Officials.

Spokane, Wash., July 26.—With new fires springing up in western Montana and northern Idaho and the supply of labor rapidly being drained, the forest fire situation excites serious alarm among federal forest service officials.

Rains Rescue Towns

Detroit, Mich., July 26.—Heavy rains fell throughout the forest fire region in northern Michigan yesterday afternoon and last night, ending much of the danger to smaller towns and farmhouses, according to reports here today.

WEST THRILLS AS MESCE IS HOIST BY STEER'S PETAR

Chicago Expert Stands on His Nose to Study Cheyenne Realty.

BY CHARLES MacARTHUR.

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 26.—[Special.] Mayor Thompson and his party were still the leading attractions of a wild and woolly west this afternoon. Although he sat very quietly in the stand without any of his cowboy adornment the hosts strained their necks to get a look at him and cracked the welkin with their loud hallelujas.

There were cheers for Chicago, cheers for Big Bill, and cheers without stint for any one who moved in the mayor's stand, led by the Rev. John P. Brushingham. The mayor's party replied warmly and won much applause.

Daredevil Frank Thrills 'Em.

The greatest enthusiasm of the entire celebration was manifested when Frank H. Mesce announced he would ride the most ornery steer in the corral. His intentions were relayed to the crowd through a megaphone and while a dozen ambulances moved toward the corral Mr. Mesce basked in the fulsome cheers of the throng.

The steer was started by a neurasthenic cowboy who yearned for a thrill and a spill. He was an athletic animal with a bad temper and Mr. Mesce wore a flaming red shirt.

The Chicago cowboy climbed on the steer's back and the chute was opened. For a second nothing happened. Then the steer batted his eye in Mesce's direction and beheld his crimson getup. There was a wild snort and in the same instant Mesce was directing a charge across the arena.

A Bodyguard of Clowns.

For twenty seconds he went through every hairraising exploit of the air, looping the loop, diving, and going into spirals wonderful to behold. He finally landed in a spinning nose dive, dislocating his shoulder. Two clowns bore him off the field, while the multitude cheered.

The big political issue that threatens to put brother against brother in Cheyenne is the proposed sewer system of the city.

To avert bloodshed, M. J. Fahey, commissioner of public improvements, was consulted today by representatives of both factions, and it is likely that Cheyenne will have a new sewer system as a result. Mr. Faherty also suggested a boulevard link and widening of the main streets.

The mayor established a precedent for future roundups when he and his party arose and proclaimed a seventh inning stretch. All the spectators, most of them under the impression that the national anthem was being played, arose with him.

At the conclusion of the afternoon's events Mayor Thompson was asked to bring his friends to the Pendleton roundup in Oregon next year. He said he might.

In the evening the mayor's party again were guests of Brig. Gen. Charles C. O'Neil at Fort Russell. On behalf of the enlisted men of the fort Mayor Thompson presented Gen. O'Neil with a loving cup.

The Thompson special will leave early tomorrow morning for Chicago, arriving home at 8:30 Monday morning, in time for work. Only one stop will be made on the trip—an hour in Omaha.

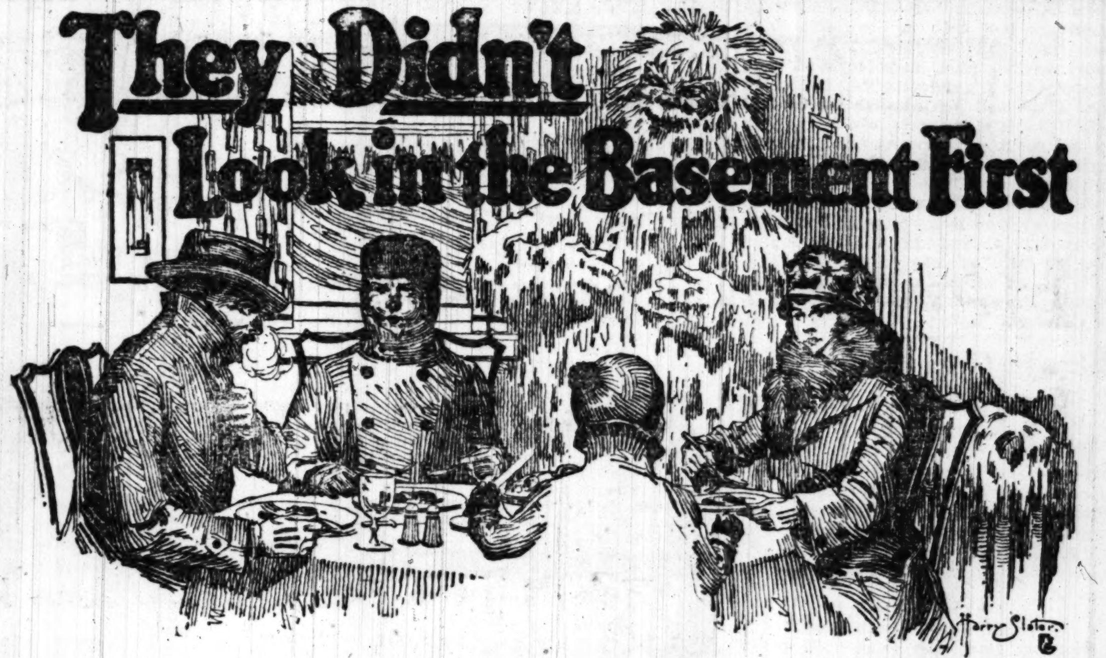
They Didn't Look in the Basement First



It was warm weather when they rented this flat. So they didn't look in the basement to find out what boiler was there. They were like the fiddling old Arkansas Traveler who said he couldn't shingle his house when it rained, and when it wasn't raining he didn't need shingles.

So, they're eating breakfast with their furs on. Why? Because the humorous old cast-iron boiler cracked wide open during the night and all the heat escaped through the crack. Jack Frost has no more influence with the Kewanee All-Steel Firebox Boiler than a non-voter has with a candidate.

If you will look in the basement first, before you swallow the honied words of the renting agent, and be sure that the Kewanee Boiler is there, you can eat your breakfast in your Pajamas without suffering chills and fever. It's the sensible way to rent a flat, or as some of you more cultured folks would say, an apartment.

You needn't be afraid to take children in any apartment, or flat, that is heated with the Kewanee Boiler. Let 'em wallow over the floor as much as they please and there won't be any draughts to freeze their little seats. Don't consider any flat unless you find this boiler in the basement. Follow this advice and you'll be warm all Winter. Forget it, and you'll eat more Aspirin than you will meat.

Look in the Basement First

Write to the Old Man Behind the Boiler and ask him how many times the Kewanee Firebox Boiler has increased the renting value of flat and apartment buildings.

CUTLER
A Symbol of SAVING and SATISFACTION

CUTLER SERVICE

Means much more than even the courteous, intelligent selling of shoes; it means, besides, the ever-active ability to offer Quality Merchandise at CONSISTENTLY — Not Occasionally — LowER Prices. It is a Service deep, permanent and progressive, that impresses itself indelibly on the mind, both in the store—and OUT.

Positions for Salesmen Co-Operators!

Because of constantly increasing "Friendship-Volume" the CUTLER SHOE COMPANY offers now, to men of high character, experienced in the fitting and selling of fashionable footwear, numerous opportunities to make connections of the most advantageous nature. These connections can only be made by men who are as sure of their courtesy and tact as they are of a thorough knowledge of shoes.

It is our desire, also, to secure a number of younger men, between the ages of 17 and 20, of ambition and refinement, who are anxious to school themselves in the art of Cutler-Service, and who will receive excellent pay while learning.

If you feel of qualifying calibre, communicate in confidence, either in person or by letter, with Mr. J. E. Wicks.

JUDGE H. P. DOLAN LEAPS TO DEATH FROM CHAMBERS

Woman Sees Plunge of Eleven Stories at City Hall.

Two women saw Judge Harry P. Dolan, 43 years old, for two terms an associate justice of the Municipal court, leap eleven floors to his death in the court of the city hall shortly after noon yesterday. The suicide, according to friends, relatives, and close associates, is the result of a nervous breakdown caused by the intensive business of the city courts.

Shortly after 1 o'clock, as the clerks were leaving the office of the city collector, a man's body crashed through the skylight, dropped on top of a clerk's cage, rolled off, dropped to a desk, and then to the floor.

Michael Haggenjos, former city detective, now on duty guarding the collector's office, rushed to the body and turned it over. It was that of Judge Dolan. The jurist groaned heavily and expired in the policeman's arms.

Friends in Outer Office.

Newspaper men raced to the judge's courtroom on the eleventh floor. There they found Bailiff Charles A. Timlin and Attorney Eugene O'Riley, who were waiting for the judge to leave his rooms.

"Where is Judge Dolan?" the bailiff was asked.

"Inside," he said. On being informed of the suicide the bailiff forced open the chamber door. The jurist's coat was hanging over a chair and the window was open.

"He left me five minutes ago," said Attorney O'Riley. "I was waiting to go home with him and he asked to be excused for a moment. Then he went into his chambers and locked the door. He did not seem especially downcast."

Bailiff Timlin told the same story.

Women See Death Leap.

Two women, Mrs. Mary Thorne, 2517 Coyne street, and Miss Esther Thorfeldt, 5509 Leland avenue, who were standing near the elevators on the eleventh floor of the city hall, asserted that they had seen a man appear on the window ledge of the court and leap.

"He had no coat on," said Mrs. Thorne. "He stepped up on the ledge and without any hesitation jumped off. I saw the body flash down and then heard the crash."

This story was corroborated by Miss Thorfeldt. The two women did not view the body.

Dr. John Dill Robertson, who was in his office in the city hall, was summoned immediately to attend the jurist when it was believed that there was a chance for life. Judge Dolan was dead when the doctor arrived.

Had Had Trying Morning.

Judge Dolan had just finished an exceedingly trying morning in the boys' court. Bad boys, juvenile bandits, had been before him. He had sent some to the boys' home at the bridewell, others to their own homes with their parents.

The last trial on the docket was that of two youthful motor bandits, who had stolen a car and after running it all over the city had wrecked it. These two boys were put on probation and their mothers signed their bonds.

The bailiff rapped, the court closed for the day, and the judge descended from the bench. His death followed a moment later.

Born in Boston.

Judge Dolan was born in Boston, Mass., on May 16, 1875, and he came to Chicago in 1880. The LL. B. degree from Lake Forest university was conferred upon him in 1904. He was admitted to the bar in 1904.

Judge Dolan had just returned from a vacation of a month. For the last two weeks he had been in the Postel sanitarium in Wisconsin and prior to that he had been home under the care of a physician for several weeks.

Judge Dolan leaves a widow, Mrs. Irene M. Dolan, and three sons, Harry P. Jr., Thomas D., and Richard J. Dolan.

Associates Praise Judge.

The Lawyers' Association of Illinois, through its president, Harry W. Standidge, last night issued a statement praising the character of Judge Dolan and expressing regret at his death. It follows:

"Judge Harry P. Dolan was one of the most beloved members of the Lawyers' Association of Illinois, and its members feel that in his death they and the public at large have lost a most useful, able, broad-minded, and conscientious public servant, a judge who dispensed justice with mercy and charity, and a friend whose heart beat in beautiful unison with the heart of humanity as it throbbed with love for his fellow man."

A committee comprising a dozen judges and as many lawyers was appointed to attend the funeral, which will be held at 9:30 a. m., Tuesday, July 29, at St. Matthew's church, Albany avenue and Walnut street. Burial at Calvary.

COPS MUST TELL WHAT WON THEM BOOST IN RANK

Aldermen Take Up Charge Promotions Went by Favoritism.

Charges that favoritism was shown by Chief of Police Garrity in promoting six patrolmen to the rank of detective sergeant recently caused Ald. Walter P. Steffen, chairman of the council police committee, to order an investigation of the men's records yesterday.

Ald. Steffen sent summonses to the six men, who were promoted by the chief "for conspicuously fine work," directing them to appear before the police committee at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Several patrolmen are understood to have presented their records to Ald. Steffen, with the declaration that if these records do not show that they are better thief catchers than the six promoted by the chief the complaining ones are willing "to eat their hats and shirts, too."

Men Who Are Called.

Those summoned to the committee meeting are: Christian Sloier of headquarters, James C. Moran of Central station, James W. Hamilton of North Halsted street station, William J. Hass of Central station, C F. Reeder of Warren avenue station, and George Meinhardt of Town Hall station. Examination of their civil service records shows that of these Hamilton has been twice fined by the police trial board, though the first fine was later rescinded.

In addition to the investigation the committee will take up the question of rewarding policemen with temporary promotions for good work, and an effort will be made to devise a plan under which favoritism can play no part in such promotions.

New Grade Planned.

If the committee approves Ald. Steffen expects to ask the finance committee to create a new type of patrolman. These men are to be paid $2,200 a year instead of the $1,800 paid ordinary policemen.

"I will ask the committee to approve a plan whereby these positions could be given to patrolmen who can show records of good hard work and results," said Ald. Steffen. "I propose that they should hold the places for one year as reward for good work and that those who continue to do exceptionally good work should go on drawing the $400 increase.

Man Who Made Charges to Clyne Held as Fraud

Garrett W. Woodward, ex-policeman and former saloonkeeper, was held to the grand jury yesterday on a $1,500 bond by Judge Wells on charges of forgery and operating a confidence game. Woodward gained considerable notoriety a short time ago when he went to District Attorney Clyne and told a remarkable story about J. H. Benjamin, president of the American Steel Spring company and a number of government inspectors. The district attorney turned the case over to the department of justice, and so far no proceeding has been instituted.

Benjamin procured the warrant and caused Woodward's arrest.

HONOR CADETS TO GET COLORS

Camp Roosevelt, Mich., July 26.—[Special.]—Tomorrow evening the regimental and national colors will be turned over to Company G, 2d battalion, as that unit brought honor to its battalion by winning the competitive drill over Company D this week.

The cadets were given a half holiday and all those not on guard or being disciplined were allowed to go to town. For the first time guards were stationed on the bridge leading from camp, and all students were forced to show passes. The action was taken because some cadets have been absent without leave. Outside of the special events in the evening, tomorrow will be a quiet day at camp.

Cadet officers will be given an opportunity to show their ability as officers during the last training period, being placed in command of various units.

Training in the use of wireless will begin next week.

Judge Landis, Reported Dead, Says He Is Not

There was much unhappiness around the federal building yesterday, and many rumors. They said federal Judge K. M. Landis had died.

"Heat was too much for him," said they lacrimosely. "Poor old judge!"

Yes, everybody mourned except the judge himself, who is up at Burt Lake, Mich., where those cold, cold breezes blow. The judge gave it as his decision that he was still alive. He expects to spend an indefinite sentence on earth.

The Most for Your Money

IN urging your purchase of the 1920 "Victory" Model, New Light-Six MOON, we ask only this—that you make a comparison, value for value, dollar for dollar, of this car with all other cars sold in this city of all "classes" and at all prices. We are willing to rest our case on what you find.

Consider, please, what sort of car you receive in this new 1920 "Victory" Moon.

The chassis of this car is of absolutely known value and known performance. Fedders Radiator; Timken Axles and Bearings; Parish and Bingham Frame; Red Seal Continental Motor; Delco Two-Unit Starting and Lighting; Borg & Beck Clutch; Brown-Lipe Transmission; Spicer Universals; every unit is the best this country can produce.

Upon this 118-inch wheel-base Chassis has been mounted a body of the utmost luxury.

It is the sort of body you would hope to receive from the most costly custom builder, were you to spend say twice the cost of this car.

Long, low-hung, deep, every line reflects the very latest mode of custom motor car style. Here is a car of SPORT MODEL SMARTNESS, yet so designed as to give the utmost comfort.

MOON
A Standard Chassis—A Luxurious Body

In every detail it is the sort of car that makes the man in the street stop for a second inspection. The radiator shell is of polished "Liberty Silver." In this car you will find upholstery of GENUINE SPANISH LEATHER, Walnut instrument board and walnut rear panel. Every detail is of a character to reflect your own good taste and judgment. And the price, we repeat, is but $1785 (F. O. B. St. Louis). Surely indeed, here is the most for your money. Wire wheels extra.

NOTE—Those of you who are waiting long for delivery of cars of lesser values, bear this fact in mind, that Quinlan organization and Quinlan foresight of present conditions have provided for IMMEDIATE DELIVERY—you can drive this car away the day you buy.

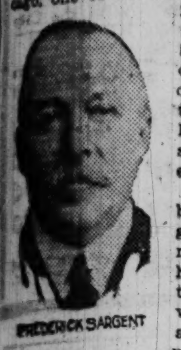
SARGENT, FAMOUS POWER ENGINEER, DIES IN GLENCOE

Taken Ill While Abroad with Insull, Friend of Many Years.

Frederick Sargent, senior member of the firm of Sargent & Lundy of Chicago, one of the best known consulting engineers in the United States, who specialized in electrical generating stations, died at his home, 70 Harbor street, Glencoe, early yesterday.



FREDERICK SARGENT

An Englishman by birth, Mr. Sargent had made numerous trips to his native country. One of these was made in April and May, in company with his friend, Samuel Insull. Mr. Sargent was taken ill while abroad. His son Chester met him at New York and brought him to Chicago.

Mr. Sargent was born in Liskeard, Cornwall, England, Nov. 11, 1859, also the date of the birth of Mr. Insull. Young Sargent developed a decided mechanical bent, as a result of which eight years of his youth were spent in the works of John Elder & Co., shipbuilders on the River Clyde.

Rises Rapidly in U. S.

Coming to the United State about 1880, the young man found ready employment in eastern shipbuilding yards as a designer of steam engines. He then came west as a designer for the Sioux City Engine company, and later accepted a position with E. P. Allis & Co., engine builders, Milwaukee, predecessors of the Allis-Chalmers company. Here he attracted the attention of the Western Edison Light company, organized in Chicago in 1882 to exploit in the west the electric lighting inventions of Thomas A. Edison. In 1884 Mr. Sargent came to Chicago.

Succeeding the Western Edison company, the Chicago Edison company was formed in 1887 and Sargent became its consulting engineer. He had been consulting engineer of that company and its successor, the Commonwealth Edison company, practically ever since.

World's Fair Expert.

The firm of Sargent & Lundy was formed in 1891.

In 1891 and 1892 Mr. Sargent was consulting electrical engineer for the World's Columbian exposition of Chicago and had much to do with designing its mechanical and electrical features. He was one of the first to recognize the great part the steam turbine was destined to play in electrical generating stations and built in Chicago the pioneer station of this type.

During the war Mr. Sargent was consulting engineer for the power station of the Edgewood arsenal, Edgewood, Md., and for the United States government in other war projects demanding application of power on a large scale.

U. S. ENGINEER EXPLAINS HIS HARBOR REPORT

Col. William V. Judson, United States district engineer, yesterday gave out a statement explaining and amplifying the report on harbors which he permitted a TRIBUNE reporter to read and copy in part.

"I do not believe and have never expressed to any one the opinion that a harbor extending from Eighteenth street to Thirty-first street would suffice for possible future harbor requirements along this position of Chicago's shore line," he said. "I have said and I have written many times in the past that in this locality a much greater extension along the shore might in the future be required for harbor purposes.

"Referring to the matter covered by the city ordinance relating to the proposed lake shore development, I am studying the subject as carefully as I am able, and am, naturally enough, blocking out my report, but as yet I have not prepared any recommendations.

"Yesterday I gave an interview to a TRIBUNE reporter. In the course of this interview I made no allusion to a harbor district extending from Eighteenth street to Thirty-first street and no reference to any recommendations I expect to make with regard to the shore line between Twelfth street and Jackson park."

College Student Drops Dead After Starting Race

Chester Baird, 21 years old, a University of Illinois senior; his brother, Robert, and Arthur Sanders, all of Park Ridge, were walking through the city park Friday night.

"I'll bet I can beat both of you in a race from here to the road," Chester challenged.

"It's a go," was the reply, and they were off.

They had run about a hundred feet when Chester fell. His companions finished the race. Then, when they saw Chester still lying where he fell, they ran back to him and found him dead.

Loses River Marathon and Then His Watch

William McNichol of 3323 North Monticello avenue lost the river Marathon race yesterday—he came in eleventh—but that isn't all he lost. When he got back to the U. S. Commodore, where he had left his clothing, he found he had lost his gold watch, on the cover of which his wife's picture had been burned in.

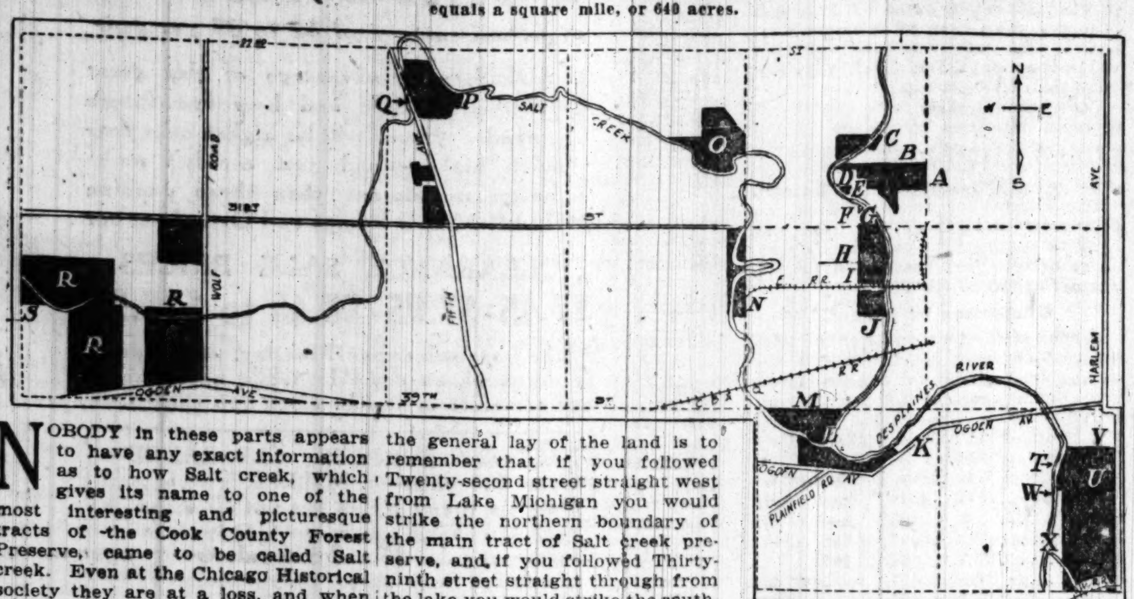
THE SIGHTS OF THE FOREST PRESERVE AND HOW TO FIND THEM

BY EYE WITNESS.

II: SALT CREEK PRESERVE; NEARLY 1,000 ACRES.

Here You Have the Land of the "Lovely Little River," as the Indians Called It, with Its Camping Grounds, "Ole Swimmin' Holes," Fishing, Picnic Groves, and Oak Openings.

[Forest Preserve tracts shown on this map in black. Each large square on the map represents a township section, which equals a square mile, or 640 acres.



NOBODY in these parts appears to have any exact information as to how Salt creek, which gives its name to one of the most interesting and picturesque tracts of the Cook County Forest Preserve, came to be called Salt creek. Even at the Chicago Historical society they are at a loss, and when they asked the preserve officials at the county building those specialists also confessed ignorance.

It might be that somewhere along its extensive and whimsical course, which runs from Palatine township, in the extreme northwest of the county, to a point in Lyons township, twenty-five miles to the south, there are, or once were, salt springs. Such springs in the early days of our statehood were an important asset to the pioneers. They were more or less under state control and were the subject of frequent and lengthy debates in the legislature.

The Indians, less matter of fact than the pioneers, were, and with a genius for felicitous nomenclature, are said to have called the stream "Lovely Little River." It is curious, though, that, despite this happy knack in bestowing poetic names, the Indians—certain tribes of them, at least, and notably those up Lake Superior way—had only one name for flowers. The various species they did not distinguish by name, though when it came to trees they gave to each a name.

Prized by Chief Shabbona.

All the Pottowatomies loved the region of the "Lovely Little River," but especially their chief, Shabbona, a leader who was greatly liked and trusted by the early white settlers of these parts. 'Tis said that he prized this tract, both for its beauty and its copious game, above any other region in the land of the Illini, and that always when he and his braves journeyed to the fort at the mouth of the Chicago river he would have them make their toilsome portage through the present Dupage county so that they could cross the Salt creek valley.

Hence it is that some of our antiquarians are in favor of changing the name of the Salt creek preserve to Shabbona valley preserve. Others, for the purposes of convenient identification, would call it Riverside preserve, because the beautiful villa town of Riverside is near its eastern entrance.

This preserve lies in the southerly third of Proviso township, with three considerable sections in Lyons township. The principal villages convenient to it are Riverside, Lyons, and La Grange. Its area is nearly a thousand acres, though in the matter of acreage naught very definite can be set down about any preserve tract, because, by constant new purchases, these areas always are increasing. A 1918, and even an early 1919, map of the preserve is now out of date.

Many Scenic Surprises.

Salt creek preserve is notable for its two rivers, the Desplaines and Salt creek, its spaces for campers, and its scenic surprises created by the numerous turns of the creek.

To reach this preserve from Chicago:

By electric cars: Twenty-second street car to Forty-sixth avenue; thence by Chicago and La Grange trolley to the preserve. Or take Metropolitan "L" to Austin avenue; thence by La Grange trolley.

By steam cars: Chicago, Burlington and Quincy trains to Hollywood; thence walk north to Salt creek.

By auto: Jackson boulevard to Oak Park avenue, thence south to Harrison street, west on Harrison to Desplaines avenue, or Washington boulevard to Desplaines avenue, south to Twelfth street, west to Fifth avenue, Maywood, south to Salt creek and La Grange, or continue south on Desplaines avenue to Riverside, thence to Salt creek.

How to Get Your Bearings.

If you are going to Salt creek preserve, the easiest method of getting your bearings and fixing in your mind the general lay of the land is to remember that if you followed Twenty-second street straight west from Lake Michigan you would strike the northern boundary of the main tract of Salt creek preserve, and if you followed Thirty-ninth street straight through from the lake you would strike the southern boundary of this main tract. That gives you the north and south of the lay of the land. To get the east and west of it you have only to remember that the Desplaines river is practically the eastern boundary of the tract, and that from the Desplaines the tract follows the winding course of Salt creek, now north, now west by north, now south again, and finally west to the western boundary of Cook county. Altogether some five miles as the crow flies, but much more as the creek winds.

With this in mind, here is what's to see and do, and where to go after you get into the main tract of Salt creek preserve:

A—Riverside woods. Eastern entrance to Sale creek preserve. It is six blocks south of Twenty-second street on Desplaines avenue.

B—Site of old Indian village. Arrowheads often are found on the surface here and excavating brings forth skulls.

C—Optimates Canoe club.

D—Picnic grove and dancing platform.

E—Second dancing platform.

F—Social Workers' Country club.

G—Picnic grove and parking space.

H—McCormick woods. Fire pits for steaks and wienies. Caretaker's house nearby. Delightful boating along here on the Desplaines. Water overhung with foliage and all that sort of thing. The caretaker a very pleasant, sturdy sort of man. Used to sail the high seas.

I—La Grange cars stop here. They connect at Forty-sixth avenue with street cars leaving Chicago via Twenty-second street.

J—Forest avenue bridge over Desplaines river.

K—Two old stone houses, and stop of Lyons cars, which connect with all the lines crossing Twenty-second street in Chicago.

L—Junction of Salt creek and Desplaines river. Fine picnic grove for family parties.

M—Rustic bridge leading into choice tract of woodland and dells.

N—Woods and fishing. Crossed by La Grange car. Favorite camping ground.

O—Natural playgrounds. The children will love it and be safe there.

P—The Ole Swimmin' Hole.

Q—Entrance to so-called Covell tract of Salt Creek preserve. Here another swimming hole. Note that the creek flows north along here. The cartographers are quoted as saying that it's the only river in Illinois that does. This is probably one of those statements everybody accepts and that probably is not strictly true.

R—R—R—Banks of Salt Creek. Fishing and beautiful sites for camps. Camping privileges for the asking at room 547 county building.

T—Now you move way over to the southeast to a detached tract known as Portage Woods. The Desplaines skirts it, and the beautiful village of Lyons, once a famous cattle mart but now a sleepy idys, is near it. At T are comfort stations and drinking water. At Chateau Desplaines in Lyons you can get a good meal. The kitchens are immaculate—I saw them—and the place, as the times go, no robbers' den. The chicken dinner is a daisy.

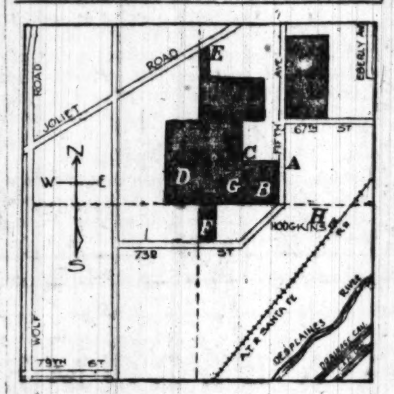
U—Road through woods.

V—Public baseball diamonds [two].

W—Drill grounds.

X—Lily pond.

HAZEL WOODS TRACT OF DISTRICT 5



TO complete your survey of District 5 of the Cook county forest preserve, of which district Salt creek preserve is the main tract, you now have to drop way down to a detached tract on the Joliet road in the southwestern part of Lyons township. It is two miles south of the south line of the town of La Grange and is called Hazel woods, though Oak openings would be as exact a name. It is a beautiful, clean, rolling, softly wooded stretch, answering well to Cooper's descriptions of the Michigan oak opening that he so loved. I don't know a finer destination for a good country road walk than Hazel woods, after you have reached La Grange by trolley from Chicago.

Here are the points within and near the tract:

A—Entrance and parking space.

B—District Forester Breen's house. This is the man who said of his forest trust: "We love all this. It's our life!

C—Spring for picknickers.

D—The Hazel woods, that give the tract its name.

E—Entrance from Joliet road.

F—Another entrance.

G—Curious thornapple trees; some in shapes so fantastic they give the place the look of an Italian garden. Blooming time in May.

H—Village of Hodgkins on the Santa Fé railroad.

To get the general lay of Hazel woods tract, remember that if Sixty-third street ran straight west from Lake Michigan it would strike the northern boundary of Hazel woods. But remember also that the lake is some eighteen miles distant.

Note: I made a mistake in saying, under last week's map of Palos Hills preserve, that Swallow cliff is five miles from the village of Palos Springs, where the Wabash railroad's suburban trains stop. It is nearer two and one-half miles.

Also, on that map, Keene avenue should have been shown as running straight through to One Hundred and Nineteenth street instead of stopping just below One Hundred and Eleventh street, but that omission was not my fault.

Salesman Drops Dead as He Starts on Tour

Ferdinand Newhouse, 60 years old, of 861 George street, a salesman for the Imperial Broom works, 172 North May street, dropped dead yesterday as he was leaving the office of the broom factory.

1,000 WOMEN TO TAKE UP COURSE IN HOME NURSING

Health Chief Robertson Says Number May Exceed 3,000.

Indications were yesterday that 1,000 Chicago women will take the health department course in home nursing which will begin in the Loyola university building, 1358 West Fulton street, Aug. 4.

The actual matriculations passed the 300 mark yesterday. Health Commissioner Robertson announced that he has received the promise of 140 registered nurses to bring in ten women each to take the course. He said the number of students may reach 3,000.

Dr. Robertson yesterday named Annie McKenzie, R. N., dean of the nursing school which, the commissioner says, will develop so many nurses in Chicago homes that another "flu" epidemic will have a hard time getting a start.

"Any woman who takes the eight weeks' course we are offering will be absolutely equipped to take care of any ordinary case of sickness," Dr. Robertson said.

Even men have asked for the right to take the training. Dr. Robertson said, however, that they will not be accepted. If enough men want the course the health commissioner offers to give one for them in the city hall.

WIDOW, 3 GIRLS, AND SON DIE IN MILWAUKEE FIRE

Milwaukee, Wis., July 26.—Five members of the family of Mrs. Anna Gump, a widow, were suffocated in a fire early today in their home here.

The dead are: Mrs. Anna Gump, 51; Theresa, 20; Louise, 16; George, 14; Carolina, 17.

Two other children, Anna, 26, and Louis, 21, revived.

The fire was discovered by a neighbor. He turned in an alarm and managed to save Anna. He again entered the building and met Louis. The cause of the fire was unknown. The monetary loss was only $600.

Claims Height Record by Flying Up 31,100 Feet

Garden City, N. Y., July 26.—Claiming to have established a new American altitude record, Roland Rohlfs announced tonight that yesterday he climbed to a height of 31,100 feet in a triplane, flying over Long Island between Mineola and Montauk. This mark is 2,200 feet better than the figure chalked up by Maj. E. W. Schroeder at Dayton, Ohio, last September, in establishing the world's record for that time. The present world's record is 33,136 feet, made by Adjt. Casale of the French army, in a flight from Villacoublay, France.

"Just Visiting My Sister," Gertrude Hoffman Says

New York, July 26.—Gertrude Hoffman, dancer, returned to her home here today after an absence of three days. She was visiting a sister and forgot to tell her husband, it was stated.

FRATERNAL ORDER TO MEET.

The twenty-first annual convention of the Progressive Order of the West, a fraternal organization, with about 20,000 members in this country, starts a three day session today at the Hotel Sherman. Annual elections and other business matters fill the greater part of the program.

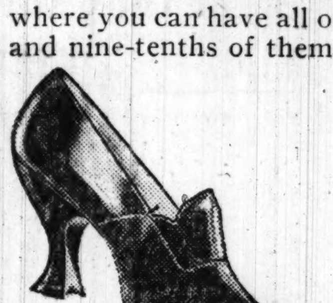
DR. PINKSTON
The Eminent Foot Specialist

has an institution the world has long needed. A place where you can have all of your foot troubles relieved, and nine-tenths of them cured regardless of the nature or condition of the ailment.

Dr. Pinkston also has an exclusive Shoe Shop of Combination Last Shoes, Oxfords and Pumps for perfect and imperfect feet, for street and dress wear, for men, women and growing girls, in connection with his foot specialty work.



Cannot slip at heel. Sizes 2-11 Widths AAAAAA-EEE

Why Dr. Pinkston's Combination Last Shoes Are Better than the standard shoes is because they are two widths narrower in the heel, one width narrower in the arch and two widths wider through the ball of the foot than any shoe that has ever been made. The narrow heel prevents the shoe from slipping up and down. The narrow arch keeps the foot from sliding forward. The broad ball gives perfect freedom of the toes. The entire comfort and grace of walking depend upon the proper articulation of the ball of the foot.

Cannot slip at heel. Sizes 2-11, widths AAAAAA-EEE

Woman Said Kill Kaber; Man with Cap Obeyed Her

Cleveland, O., July 26.—Arrest of "a man with a cap" shortly was expected by the police here tonight to clear the mystery of the killing of Daniel Kaber, a local publisher, eight days ago. Two or three women are connected with the case, the police say. Kaber believed a woman ordered his death.

"Revenge did not enter into the case, but the motive was equally strong," Prosecutor Doerfter said.

Before Kaber died he told his male nurse, according to the latter's testimony, that "a man with a cap" did the killing and that "it was ordered by a woman."

CAPT. A. H. EVANS, IOWA G. A. R., DIES. Keokuk, Ia., July 26.—Capt. Amos H. Evans, former department commander of the G. A. R. of Iowa and registrar of the Iowa commandery of the Loyal Legion, died here last night.

PUZZLE: WHY IS A COP? CITY CRIME INCREASES 40%

And, Worst Blow of All, First Dry Month Shows a Jump.

Chicago has had 91 per cent more robberies this year than in the first seven months of last year.

The number of murders has nearly doubled.

Burglaries have jumped 56 per cent.

Confidence games have increased 21 per cent.

Larceny has gone up a trifle less.

The average increase in crime generally is 40 per cent.

This information comes from the police department itself. The percentages were reckoned on official reports to the council police committee. They indicate one or more branches of the crime suppressing organization has laid down on the job.

Jump Despite Day Era.

In each of the last four months there have been three times as many robberies as in the corresponding month of last year, and in this statement, as in other comparisons, only twenty-five days of this month are compared with the whole of last July.

Various efforts have been made to show crime has decreased in Chicago since liquor has been banished.

The police records show to date this month there have been 430 burglaries, as against 261 for all of last July. There have been 177 robberies this month, as compared with 56 last July. There have been 14 pockets picked, as against 5 last July. There have been 556 larcenies, as against 446 last July. Confidence men have turned twelve tricks this month, as against half that number last July. An even dozen murders are credited to this month, as against 4 last July.

Increase 40 Per Cent.

In a word, the police crime table shows 1,214 crimes in the first 25 days of this month, as compared with 814 during the 31 days of last July. That is an increase of 40 per cent.

Last month the police reported 1,316 crimes. It will be noticed this month averages more than 47 crimes a day, and, if this rate continues until the end of the month, July, 1919, will show more than 1,450 crimes.

Other communities have reported a decrease in crime by reason of the closing of the saloons. If those reports are trustworthy, then the showing in Chicago is all the more to its discredit.

The number of crimes during the first seven months of last year was 6,009, as against 8,471 to date this year. Total arrests last year were 105,632, against 31,820 so far this year.

Comparison by Months.

A comparison by months of the principal crimes give conclusive evidence of the ineffectiveness of the crime suppressing agencies this year as compared with a like period of 1918. The contrast on burglary and robbery follows:

	Burglaries		Robberies
Month—	1918	1919	1918	1919
January	258	403	266	151
February	272	417	136	191
March	327	471	100	245
April	292	417	85	257
May	265	464	58	236
June	282	451	53	186
July	261	430	56	177
Total	1,957	3,053	754	1,443

Last year the council crime committee started work the latter part of January and appears to have had some effect in aiding in a reduction in the amount of crime. The crusade this year was started the latter part of May, but its influence has been much smaller.

Action Looms Tomorrow.

The police committee meets tomorrow morning. Some of its members are peeved at the lack of results and desire drastic action.

SUICIDE BRIDGE FALTERS TOWARD GHOSTS IT MADE

Lincoln Park Death Span, Creaking with Age, Is Closed to Public.

Drop a tear for Chicago's bridge of sighs. The famous old Lincoln park arch, over which thousands of holiday merrymakers have passed on a single Sunday and where hundreds of weary mortals paused to think of death, is showing the rust of age. Suicide bridge seems doomed to go.

"We blocked up the approaches," explained John C. Cannon, superintendent of Lincoln park, "because the old bridge is no longer safe. When the board meets in October it will decide whether it is to be wrecked. I don't think it ever will be used again."

A Place for Ghosts.

Meanwhile the ghosts of those restless souls who faltered at the guard rail then leaped, continue to haunt the famous arch. Ever since it was built in 1892 the bridge has been a trysting place for those who had a rendezvous with death. Disappointed old men and girls who were crossed in love, despondent youths, and the sordid ladies from the streets—all have sought the mysteries of the beyond from its heights. One man hanged himself from its girders, but all the rest chose to jump.

"The fall and spring of the year are the suicide seasons," said Charles Shaw, chief of the park police.

Then the reminiscences began. Lieut. Charles Thoren recalled the heartbroken young German woman who took the leap, more than twenty years ago. It was midwinter and the bridge was frosted over with ice. Not 200 feet away lay the lake, already booming a requiem for the girl hesitating at the railing. Then she jumped. They found her with her head in the ice, her feet pointing toward the sky.

He Leaps and Lives.

Sergt. Samuel Pincus told a less somber tale of the professional diver from Barnum & Bailey's circus.

"They came in carriages," he said. "That was before the day of automobiles—and got on the bridge before we knew what they were about. Then this circus person slips off his overcoat and dives into the lagoon.

"I was stationed at the west end of the bridge, and Fred Schwindler—poor Fred isn't with us any more—was at the other. Well, the circus man swims to one bank of the lagoon, and there was I, ready to grab him. So he navigates to the other bank, where Fred was right on the job. Back he swims to my end, and then returns again. Finally he gets tired out and we haul him off to the Sheffield avenue station. I think they fined him $1, but that didn't break Barnum's heart."

Foils Half Dozen Suicides.

Joseph Langlois, who for eighteen years has patrolled the narrow stretch of ground between the lagoon and Lake Michigan, has rescued at least half a dozen would-be suicides from the waterway beneath the bridge. He has a boat moored ready for that purpose.

"The majority involve these love affairs," he explained, in discussing why people wish to die. But he told of an old woman, 65 years old, who did not crave death because of Cupid.

"I found her standing on the bridge all by herself," he said, "and at her feet was a pint bottle of whisky that had slipped from her dress and broken on the cement. I asked her what it was for, and, do you know, that poor old woman was going to use it to give her courage enough to jump. I felt sorry for that woman."

Saved by Wide Skirts.

In the old days when feminine dresses were full and wide many women were saved after suicidal leaps because of the air which caught under their skirts. More than one woman has sailed screaming from the other world, buoyed by the blimpy fashions of the day. More than one fair unfortunate has continued to live because circumstances bade her jump in 1899 instead of 1919.

But suicides have been on the decrease, until now there hasn't been an attempt from the bridge in twelve months.

"For several years," said Lieut. Thoren, "it was a fad. There used to be as many as two suicides a week.

About twenty years ago it got so bad the papers suggested covering the bridge with a screen, like a bird cage, and there was even some talk of closing it to the public."

The Whistling Madman.

Suicide bridge was not the rendezvous for the world-wearied only, however. Strange mortals used to frequent the place. One old woman was wont to seek its heights with a bottle of whisky and there proceed to intoxicate herself. A demented young man liked to come at night and whistle to the moon in a loud, weird tone. More than one member of the Lincoln park force owns having shivered with fright when that uncanny siren drilled suddenly through his ears.

Then there was an inmate of the old soldiers' home in Milwaukee, who would visit the bridge every time he got a furlough and there sing martial songs at the top of his voice. And if you failed to stand at attention during his recital, he—

But all these episodes are things of yesteryear. The famous arch, which rises forty-two feet above the lagoon, is closed to the happy and the forlorn alike, and the hand of death is upon it. Perhaps it will not even wait for the wrecker. It may heed the whispers of those restless ghosts and disappear, like the house of Usher, into the waters below.

PLAN $2,500,000 MEMORIAL TO U. S. BUSINESS IN WAR

A delegation of thirty financial and industrial leaders, officers or directors in the United States Chamber of Commerce, visited Chicago yesterday surveying economic and industrial conditions in the middle west. The party is en route to Seattle, Wash., where the annual directors' meeting will be held Aug. 8 and 9, and will stop at a number of the principal cities of the west and on the Pacific coast. They were guests of Harry A. Wheeler of Chicago, former president of the organization, at luncheon at the Union League club.

Plans for the erection of a $2,500,000 building in Washington, D. C., to serve as national headquarters of the organization and to be a memorial to American business in the world war were discussed and will be brought up for final action in Seattle. Mr. Wheeler was given authorization to begin a campaign to raise through subscription the amount needed. The board authorized the expenditure of $30,000 to finance the campaign, in addition to $15,000 which was appropriated for the same purpose some months ago. The delegation left last night for Omaha.

E. Greenebaum, Banker, to Be Buried Tomorrow

Funeral services for Elias Greenebaum, founder of the banking house bearing his name, who died Friday at his residence, 4510 Grand boulevard, will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from Sinai temple, Forty-sixth street and Grand boulevard.

There is to be no display and the family has requested flowers be omitted, that the last rites may be as simple as the financier's life.

The active pall bearers are his grandsons and include the following: Walter J. Greenebaum, John Greenebaum, M. Earnest Greenebaum Jr., Edgar N. Greenebaum, Frederick J. Greenebaum, Samuel Nast, Percy L. Deutsch, and Eugene Heller.

OBITUARY.

BIOGRAPHER PAYS FINAL TRIBUTE TO L. W. NOYES

Following a simple service at his home on Lake Shore drive yesterday, La Verne W. Noyes, millionaire inventor and philanthropist, was buried in Graceland cemetery. The Rev. Samuel M. Gibson, assistant pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, was in charge, and the Rev. Thomas W. Goodspeed, the inventor's friend and biographer, gave the funeral address.

"Mr. Noyes' life was a romance of genius and business," said Dr. Goodspeed. "He grew up as a poor farmer boy. His father had a shop where they mended machinery. Perhaps the inventor in Mr. Noyes was first awakened there. He took out more than 100 patents.

"He was much interested in the war, out of which grew one of his greatest philanthropies, the gift to the University of Chicago of approximately $2,500,000 to pay the tuition of men and women who had served in the war and of their descendants."

Dr. Goodspeed asserted Mr. Noyes had similar benevolent plans which were maturing when he died Thursday. It is thought provision is made for them in the will.

At the close of the service Dr. Gibson read the same prayer that was said at the funeral of Mrs. Noyes several years ago. The pallbearers were F. L. Dole, J. J. Fraser, G. A. Williams, G. A. Oliver, W. P. Gooding, and N. R. Stephen.

JAMES ARNOLD, old time building contractor, died in Palos Park yesterday as the result of an automobile accident earlier in the day. He was born in County Louth, Ireland, Feb. 14, 1838. The Chicago Historical society, public library, and several earlier buildings of the University of Chicago were built by him. He was superintendent of construction of the Croton Aqueduct, New York. Mr. Adnold is survived by his widow and three children. Funeral services will be from his Palos Park residence this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment at Mount Greenwood.

CHESTER BAIRD, manager-elect of the 1920 track team of the University of Illinois, is dead at Park Ridge. He and his brother Robert were returning from the Park Ridge Country club yesterday when it was suggested that they race for one block. After running only a few steps Chester fell to the gruond and was dead within a few minutes, according to word received at Champaign. He was a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity and one of the leading golf players of the university.

THE REV. AUGUST PISTOR, for thirty-nine years a Baptist minister, died yesterday at his residence, 123 Elgin avenue, Forest Park, at the age of 63 years. He is survived by a widow, six daughters, and two sons. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Forest Park German Baptist church, Harlem avenue and Dixon street, where he served as pastor for eleven years. Interment will be at Forest Home cemetery.

WILLIAM C. OAKLEY, for years a national bank examiner in Chicago and a director in several corporations, died at his home, 550 Surf street, Friday. Funeral services will be held at the home tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. He was a member of the Chicago Stock exchange.

DEATH NOTICES.

IN MEMORIAM.

COURTNEY—Dennis Courtney—In sad and loving memory of our dear husband and father, who died one year ago today. Anniversary high mass at St. Mel's and Holy Family church. May his soul rest in peace. FROM HIS WIFE AND FAMILY.

MARY GALLAGHER—In loving memory of my dear mother, who passed away three years ago, July 27. IRENE GALLAGHER.

HEIST—John Wrayburn Heist, in loving memory of "Buddy," who passed away one year ago today, July 27, 1918.

Ask us, do we miss him.
It's such a lonely place.
Oft we think we hear his footsteps
Or see his smiling face.
Around his grave we linger
When the sun is setting low,
Thinking of the home that's lonely
Without the boy we treasured so.
He was too pure for this world,
Too beautiful to stay,
So the angels came and bore
Our precious darling away.
His sweet red lips and big blue eyes
Are smiling at us from the sky.
When we leave this land for that one so fair,
Our own Buddy will welcome us over there.

BROKEN HEARTED MAMMA, PAPA, BROTHERS, NURSE, AND PAL CARRIE ULRICH.

HYMAN—In fond memory of my beloved husband, Henry Hyman, who died 7 years ago today. May his soul rest in peace. His loving wife. PEARLE HYMAN.

ARNOLD—James Arnold, 82 years, husband of Bessie Arnold, father of Charlotte E. and Oswald J. Arnold and Mrs. H. A. McKenzie. Funeral from his home in Palos Park, 3 Sunday afternoon. Interment at Mount Greenwood.

OBITUARY.

Itagaki, Ex-Leader of Japanese Liberals, Dies

TOKIO, July 23.—[By the Associated Press.] — Delayed. — Count Taisuke Itagaki, founder of the Japanese liberal party, died today.

EUGENE A. BARTELME, 24, son of Alfred E. Bartelme of River Forest, died at Torch Lake, Mich., yesterday following an illness of several months. He was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1917 and immediately enlisted in the army. While at Camp Vail, N. Y., last fall he contracted influenza, from which he never fully recovered. He was discharged from the service last February, and since that time had been home in an effort to regain his health.

SISTER SEEKS LOST BROTHER.

High Grade Travel Miles at Low Cost

The individual or family group that rides in an Oakland Sensible Six rides comfortably, rides quickly, rides equipped for every condition that confronts the motor car user.

Because of the high-power and light weight construction of the Sensible Six, the owner is prepared for hard, continuous driving, and may well expect to use his car for long periods of time without need of expensive mechanical attention.

Consider the main reasons for Oakland popularity: this is the highest-powered automobile built, figuring horsepower to car weight, excepting one $4,000 motor car; each model is roomy, convenient and attractively equipped; the cost of ownership, operation and maintenance is the lowest possible.

It is this combination of advantages that makes the Oakland appeal both to the man who can afford costly cars and the man who lays much emphasis on economy.

The New Four Door Sedan and the Coupe

The new Oakland Sensible Six Four Door Sedan and the Coupe offer all the advantages mentioned above plus full provision for all-weather service.

The enormous manufacturing resources that produce them make it possible for you to own and operate a truly fine sedan or coupe at minimum cost.

"Your tires are good for at least 20,000 miles."—Wm. Dunbar Company.

Owen Performance

In every line of industry Owen Tires are giving excess mileage that earns the enthusiastic approval of users. The William Dunbar Company, doing general construction, alterations, special mill work, etc., is another company that knows and appreciates Owen Truck Tire dependability and wearability. The following letter shows the reason for their enthusiasm:

The Owen Tire & Rubber Company,
Cleveland, O.
Gentlemen:

Early in April we applied two of your tires on the rear wheels of our two-ton White truck and they have been in continuous service since. We are exceptionally well pleased with their performance and can say without hesitancy that they are the best tires we have ever used.

In the three and one-half months' service they show no appreciable wear and we believe that your tires are good for at least 20,000 miles and shall equip our other trucks with your product.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) C. CLAY NIMS,
Treasurer.

Owen Tire specialists will analyze your transportation problems and advise whether you need Owen "Standard," "Titan" or "Titan Grooved" type of tires.

THE SOLUTION OF THE HIGH COST OF RENT

This Britigan Announcement Is Very Important to You

In a Recent Bulletin Put Out by the U. S. Department of Labor the Following Sentences Occur:

> "The wage earner is realizing that high wages alone cannot provide for his family a comfortable house, a wholesome neighborhood, adequate schooling, and protection against the disadvantages of city life. Increasing land values, increasing cost of construction, increasing cost of transportation, are rendering more and more difficult the problem of the working man's providing adequate shelter for his family within a reasonable distance of his work.

The Solution for North Side People

In the very heart of the North Side, just two blocks from a Park, surrounded on every side by extraordinary surface line transportation, the Wm. H. Britigan Organization has prepared and is now offering to the public a great home property of wonderful beauty and exceptional investment value. Here, for less than $30.00 a front foot, you can secure a lot, and when it is paid for you can borrow enough to build a bungalow, a two-flat or a larger apartment building. This indeed is the only way to solve the high rent problem and at the same time to provide for yourself and your family an investment that will be continually a source of dividends in contentment, happiness and substantial income.

Belmont Terrace

"A North Side Property"

Located Between Belmont Ave. and Diversey Blvd., and Between Kostner and Kolmar Aves.

The northern boundary of this subdivision is Belmont Ave., and the southern boundary is Diversey Blvd. It is just two blocks from Kelvyn Park, one of the smaller but very beautiful new city parks of Chicago. Across the road from the park is a fine grade school that has just been completed, and a few blocks away is the Carl Schurz High School, one of the finest in Chicago. For miles on every side of Belmont Terrace there are great residence and business districts. This is one of the few close-in properties in Chicago that has not been sold and developed. Never again will you have the opportunity to purchase such property miles within the city limits and with such exceptional transportation facilities. Belmont Terrace is highly restricted. No frame buildings can be erected in this subdivision, no business on residence streets; there is a sensible building line and only buildings costing over $3,500.00 can be erected in this subdivision. There is speculative property on Belmont Ave., Kostner Ave. and Diversey Blvd.

Send in the coupon at the bottom of this page properly filled out and this organization will show you how you can purchase one of these lots and handle your building proposition on such easy terms as will make it an extraordinarily attractive proposition.

This is an opportunity for you to provide a home in a very fine section where values are constantly improving, on practically the same monthly outlay that you now make for your rent.

HOW TO GET TO BELMONT TERRACE

Take Milwaukee Ave. line, or any north and south car line, and transfer to Belmont Ave., going west to our office on the property on Belmont near Kostner Ave. Should you desire to drive out to the property, take Milwaukee Ave. to Belmont Ave., then go west to our office on the property.

The Solution for South Side People

Most of Chicago's industry is located south of Madison Street. It is therefore highly essential that the South Side of Chicago shall provide adequate facilities for the workingman in this district where he will be near his work and where he can live in open spaces with parks, playgrounds, good transportation, schools, stores, and other institutions necessary to community life.

Foreseeing this necessity, the Wm. H. Britigan Organization has, during the last three years, prepared and marketed over 5,000 lots in the heart of the Southwest Side. We are now offering to the people on easy terms the last lots in this great district, two blocks from the third largest park on the South Side, and we are offering these lots at prices that never again will be equaled.

Westwood

"A South Side Property"

Located Principally Between 67th (Marquette Blvd.) and 71st Sts., and Between Western Ave. and Rockwell St.

This great property, located only two blocks from Marquette Park, is in the heart of Chicago's great Southwest Side. Its northern boundary is a beautiful boulevard; its southern boundary is a principal cross-town street which runs along the southern edge of the subdivision and of Marquette Park; its eastern boundary is Western Ave., a car line street with a through route service from our property to the northern city limits (Howard Ave.); its western boundary is Rockwell St. Westwood is essentially home property. Its restrictions include a 15-foot building line on residence streets, no frame buildings, no buildings costing less than $3,500.00.

Westwood is improved with sewer, water, gas and cement sidewalks, all included in the price of each lot. Public and parochial schools are in the neighborhood, denominational churches, stores and shops of high character. There are also banks in the district, garages and every facility for the man who desires to build his home at once and enjoy every city advantage. The business property on Western Ave., on 71st St. and on 69th St. is an exceptionally fine investment with speculative features. This property should advance in value in proportion to the influx of population, and its history should be one of profits.

The Wm. H. Britigan Organization will show you the way in which you can have a home in this beautiful subdivision and solve the high rent problem.

Mail in the coupon for this information.

HOW TO GET TO WESTWOOD

Take 69th St. car line or any east or west line and transfer to Western Ave. to our offices on the property at 67th St. and Western Ave., and 70th and Western. Should you desire to drive out by yourself, take Marquette Blvd. to Western Ave., then south on Western Ave. to one of our offices.

BROWNS POUND FABER TO TRIM WHITE SOX BY 5 TO 2 COUNT

WALLEN OF I. A. C. FINISHES FIRST IN RIVER SWIM

Five Girls Start Before Men and All Complete the Course.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

W. L. [Buddy] Wallen Jr. won the Chicago river swim for the third time, leading a field of twenty-eight finishers, in the eleventh annual contest yesterday. He covered the course, which was shortened a bit from that of former years, in 30:28 4-5. Herman (Zeke) Laubis of the Missouri A. A., St. Louis, was second, sixty yards behind. His time was 31:10.

Thirty-five men started and twenty-eight finished. Thousands watched the progress of the race, dotting the river banks, the bridges, and the docks.

Five Girls Finish Course.

A bevy of five girl natators started about ten minutes in advance of the men, and all finished. Miss Florence Gaither, a slip of a girl, was the first to climb aboard the flatboat at the south end of the Wells street bridge, which denoted the finish. She is a member of the Illinois A. C. swimming classes, but entered from Wilson beach. John Reitz, 65 years old, started with the women and finished with the men in 47:45.

The field of thirty-five leaped into the lake at the foot of Randolph street promptly at 2 o'clock to Starter Roy E. Davis' gun. Their course was straight out in the yacht harbor for more than 200 yards, to a white stake planted there, then a turn directly north to the mouth of the river.

Wallen Takes Early Lead.

At the stake Wallen had built up a slight lead with his powerful trudgeon crawl stroke. Pickel was second and Laubis third. Laubis drew up quickly after that, being pressed by Arthur Thomsen, 17 year old swimmer from the Milwaukee A. C.

At the turn from the harbor north toward the river the swimmers were "picked up" by a fleet of protecting small craft, each swimmer having one row boat or canoe assigned to him. The small boats were to haul aboard any contestant who had to drop out or showed signs of weakness. Only a few were hauled aboard before the finish.

Half way to the river mouth, Laubis had shot into second place and Thomsen took third, leaving Pickel fourth and Scherer fifth. The latter two engaged in a tussle for the fourth place honor all the rest of the way, while Wallen, Laubis and Thomsen gradually lengthened the distance between them and the rest of the field.

Same Order Entering River.

At the turn into the river Buddie led every one by twenty yards, with Laubis about ten yards in front of Thomsen. At the Rush street bridge, Wallen had stroked farther in front, until he led by a good thirty yards. Laubis also lengthened the vacant strip between him and Thomsen, while the Milwaukee boy forged farther ahead of the two Cherry Circle contestants, Pickel and Scherer.

The first three held their positions unchanged, except that each gradually added more to his margin over the nearest follower until the finish line was reached at the flatboat at Wells street. Scherer wrested fourth place away from Pickel in the last 100 yards, while D. T. Bolden of Great Lakes, and Oliver Horn, St. Louis youth, were leaving the ruck of the field behind, and annexing sixth and seventh places.

Crowd Interested in Women.

The race of the girl swimmers, all of whom except the fifth finisher, Bettey Rohden, ended the race before the men came into sight down the river, attracted considerable interest among the crowd around the finish. Three of the five girls were members of the class started at the Illinois A. C. a year ago to equip girls of the city for water sports.

Coach Bill Bachrach of the Illinois A. C., Perry McGillivray, four time winner of the event, and Archie Wallen, a brother of the winner, manned the rowboat which covered the course with Buddie Wallen. They took a position a little ahead of the winner, and beckoned him on, even when Laubis was fifty yards behind. Coach Karl Bauer of the Missouri A. A. took care of Laubis' rowboat, and Thomsen's craft, a canoe, was handled by Former Swimming Coach Zimmerman of the Chicago A. A.

WOMEN GOLFERS OPEN CITY TITLE PLAY TOMORROW

BY J. G. DAVIS.

With one of the best fields in its history, play for the Chicago championship of the Women's Western golf association will start tomorrow at the Skokie country club, Glencoe.

Up to last night 120 entries had been received and these include Mrs. F. C. Letts, Jr., the present title holder, who won the last tournament at Midlothian in 1917; Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson of Onwentsia, twice former national champion; Mrs. F. S. Colburn of Glen View, Mrs. Melvin Jones of Glen Oak, former city champion; and Miss Marjorie Edwards.

Miss Pearce Not Entered.

Three of the best of the younger school of players are Miss Elizabeth Klotz of Indian Hill, Miss Dorothy Klotz, and Miss Edith Cummings of Onwentsia.

It is a matter of regret that Miss Ernestine Pearce of the home club will not be able to play, but she is planning to compete in the western championship at the Detroit golf club.

Mrs. Letts will compete in the qualifying round as there is a special medal offered for low gross.

Look For Low Scores.

With the course in its present fast condition the scores should be low. Pairings are as follows:

Mrs. H. A. Jackson, Onw., vs. Mrs. F. S. Colburn, Glenw.
Miss E. Klotz, I. H., vs. Miss C. Kuhnert, S. S.
Mrs. F. C. Letts Jr., I. H., vs. Mrs. L. E. Rein, Ridgem.

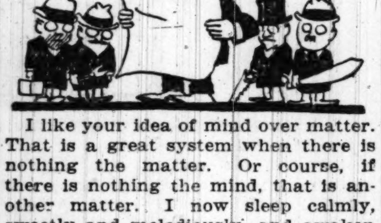
In the Wake of the News

By JACK LAIT

Old Doc. Evans,
Oh, doc, oh, Doc:

Thanks for the prescription in answer to my squawk of a fortnight ago, and for your scholarly diagnosis of my biffling ailment.

For a moment I was alarmed when you said that I was suffering from severe humorages. But I pinned faith to your prescription and already I am a better man.



I like your idea of mind over matter. That is a great system when there is nothing the matter. Or course, if there is nothing the mind, that is another matter. I now sleep calmly, sweetly and melodiously, and awaken with an appalling appetite that spells woe to flannel cakes and toast.

You are uncannily correct in stating that my condition was due largely to a sudden change in habits after a lifetime of custom. The sudden change occurred on the morning of July 1.

Though I know your aversion against blended medicines, may I not plead with you that you write me a supplemental prescription, negotiable at any cut rate drug store, to relieve the local condition of which I complain? I trust you will not doubt my good faith when I assure you that I am really sick. I have been sick ever since the president refused to declare mobilization.

I find that, through your advice against unnecessary strain on the wit nerves, I feel much easier. The congested feeling which I at first experienced about the brain has gradually worn away and the cold chill which always possessed me when sitting down to the typewriter has almost completely vanished. When you assure me that this is due to gradual atrophy of the artistic conscience I cannot give you an argument, you being probably a graduated physician. But I preserve the right to file a minority report to the effect that this happy change is due to hardening of the nerves and elephantiasis of the gall.

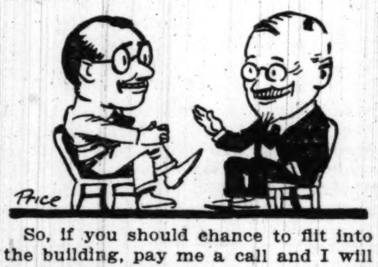
Of course, I am nobody when compared to you, your stuff running on an important page and mine only being kicked around the sporting suburbs among golf shorts and the standing of the clubs, but, just the same, a worm can have an opinion. I guess this is still a free country so to speak.

I would like to call on you for further examination in spite of my rapid convalescence. What are your office hours? I never see you. I inquired of the elevator starter in the building regarding where I could find you and he said he never heard of you. I was amazed. I knew that the starter was not one of the literati, but I had given him credit for being one of the cognoscenti.



So, if you should chance to flit into the building, pay me a call and I will be glad to compensate you with prodigal hand. Or, I being a newspaper man, couldn't you recognize the profession this once? I would have no objection to your writing a brochure on my case or would be willing to appear before a clysmic as an exhibit in such case. Anyway, drop in some time and tell me about some comical operations and the like. I am always in the market for snappy material. Why do you shun me as you have? I don't eat an apple a day, as the guy says.

BRITTON READY FOR TITLE BOUT WITH TED LEWIS

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—Jack Britton, recognized world's welterweight champion, finished his training today for his fight with Ted [Kid] Lewis Monday night at the Armory A. A., Jersey City. The champion wound up his strenuous work at Grupp's gymnasium and as he left the ring Britton remarked to the admiring coterie:

"Well, I'm fit to knock out Ted Lewis once again just to show him I'm his master."

Britton has spent the last ten days working hard for this battle. It is the first real fight he has been signed up for since he wrested the title from Lewis. The champion realizes that Lewis will fight bitterly, for the latter feels he lost his crown through taking matters too lightly. Lewis always felt positive he could beat Britton, and now that he has a championship to battle for will work just that much harder.

Lewis finished his work at Jimmy De Forrest's quarters at Long Branch and wired his manager, Charley Harvey, that he was at the top of his form and ready to fight for his life. Lewis will be glad to hear that Britton intends to make it a slugging match, for Ted figures that he will surely recover the title if Britton dares to exchange blows.

JACK JOHNSON, DRIVEN FROM MEXICAN SOIL, ON WAY BACK TO SPAIN

LAREDO, Tex., July 26.—Jack Johnson, former Negro heavyweight champion, was reported en route to Spain tonight. Travelers from Mexico City who arrived here today said the Mexican government on July 16 notified Johnson he must be outside of Mexico inside of ten days. Telegrams from Monterey today said the Negro left Mexico City Thursday.

Johnson's fondness for champagne and women and trouble with the Mexican police brought the government's action. On two occasions police attempted to quiet champagne parties where Johnson was chief celebrator, according to the reports, and each time the police were ejected by the pugilist. Finally the government applied "Article 33," which enables it to expel any undesirable foreigner without hearing.

YANKS COLLECT FOUR IN NINTH TO COP BY 8-5

Boston, Mass., July 26.—The Yankees got back into winning stride today and defeated the Red Sox, 8 to 5. A ninth inning rally, scoring four runs off Sam Jones, gave them the game. Manager Huggins used almost all of his pitchers in his struggle to cop. Score:

MOUND DISCARD SHUTS OUT CUBS AT ST. LOUIS, 3-0

Errors with Timely Hits Enable Cards to Beat Carter.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

St. Louis, Mo., July 26.—[Special.]—Still another season for the Robertson-Douglas deal was uncovered today when Elmer Jacobs, a two time discard, shut out the Cubs with four hits, and enabled the lowly Cardinals to break their losing streak with a 3 to 0 victory.

Nick Carter, grieving over the loss of his buddy, Phil Douglas, took Phil's turn and turned out a job that would have been plenty good enough with a little more punch behind him. Neither team gave its slabmen perfect support, but only one of the bobbles figured in the run column. Carter was replaced by a hitless pitcher in the seventh and the Cards grouped their hits for one run off Bailey in the eighth.

Error Helps St. Louis.

A wild chuck by Hollocher after making a brilliant stop of a base hit helped the Cards to one of their runs, but the Cubs could not take advantage of the two fielding slips of the Cards or the wild pitch of Jacobs.

Aside from the pitching the battle was featureless, most of the chances being easy except for a half gale of wind which blew against the batsmen and made tall flies hard to judge.

Cut Off Run at Plate.

The Cub outfielders came to Carter's rescue with their throwing arms, one runner being cut off at the plate by Mann. Another perished at third trying to make two cushions on a one cushion shot to center. Magee made a perfect peg to Deal, who finished the play finely.

The first bobble was in favor of the Cubs in the first inning. Magee was on first after a walk with two gone. Merkle popped a high boy close to third, and Hornsby juggled, then dropped it. Magee made third on it, but Merkle went down on first, otherwise Magee would not have fallen a victim to the old bluff throw trick when Merkle started to double steal. Clemons did not throw the ball, but Magee did not notice that until he was so near home that the catcher tagged him out unassisted.

Hornsby Drives In Tally.

The Cards scored in their first. Heathcote poked a double to right with one gone. Stock was passed and Hornsby crashed a single to center, driving in Heathcote. Stock was nipped at third by Magee's throw, and McHenry rolled out. The same McHenry did considerable damage later.

In the third, with one Card down, Hollocher's throw gave Heathcote a life. Stock singled and was forced out by Hornsby. McHenry delivered a pinch hit that registered Heathcote. Mann stopped a tally in the fourth when Miller walked and made second on Lavan's out. Jacobs whaled a single to left on which Miller tried to count, but the ball was waiting for him at the pan.

Bluff Throw Halts Enemy.

Lear was sent to bat for Carter in the seventh when the Cubs had a man on first with two out, and skied. That brought in Bailey, who pitched two rounds to the Cards and was tagged for two singles and a double in the eighth, but allowed only one run because Killefer worked the bluff throw trick on McHenry.

The Cubs had only one real chance to break up the game. That was in the second round when Deal and Mann singled with only one out. Carter fanned and Flack flied.

WILLARD IS BUSY PLANNING MOVE TO HIS BIG RANCH

Lawrence, Kas., July 26.—[Special.]—Jess Willard, who lost the heavyweight title to Jack Dempsey at Toledo July 4, announced today that he intends to move to his 700 acre ranch about twenty-five miles west of this city, some time next fall. He is now buying tractors, trucks, and the necessary horses with which to stock the ranch. He also will keep a large number of cattle and horses for the market.

Jess was a horse trader by profession before he entered the prize fighting game, and took occasion here today to tell a local farmer a few pointers on determining the age of horses. The farmer attempted to sell Jess a span of mares for 8 and 9 years old, and Jess told him they were beyond 11 years old.

NOTES

The final game of the "crucial" Sox-Browns series will take place today.

It looks as if Carl Wellman and Claude Williams, two up to date south paws, will hook up in the combat. Wellman is primed for it. Williams has recovered from the blow on the head received early in Friday's game when Severeid caromed a two-bagger off his brow.

Bill Gleason was mad after the game was over and it wasn't because the Sox lost, because he admitted he did not have much chance to win. It was something regarding the two doubles hit by Hank Severeid. Both of them were just a little to the right of center field and both were made possible because Felsch was playing wel lover toward left field. Everybody knows that Severeid is supposed to hit to left field.

Hap Felsch muffed a ball in the eighth and gave the Browns two runs they didn't need. Sisler hit the ball. Gedeon was on second. Hap figured on a peg to third to prevent Gedeon sneaking a base after the out. He dropped the ball and Umpire Chill, behind the plate, called Sisler out. There was a row, and Ump. Chill left it to Ump. Dinneen, who was near second and closer to the play. Ump. Dinneen reversed the decision. It looked like Dinneen was right, but why was it passed up to him?

Ray Schalk wasn't in the game because he has a strained muscle in his left leg. Here's how THE TRIBUNE reporter first heard that Ray wasn't to be in: A half hour before game, the reporter was standing in the lower part of the grand stand. A bunch of five or six well dressers were there. One of them said, "Who do you like?" Another said, "I like St. Louis." "So do I," said another. And it was followed with: "You can get all your money covered over in box—if you offer 11 to 10, and of course you know, Schalk is not in the game." A few moments later the reporter verified the words of the well dressers that Schalk was out.

Notes

St. Louis, Mo., July 26.—[Special.]—Two more games, tomorrow and Monday.

If it rains either day here, the Cubs may have to stay over and play on the open date Tuesday, instead of exhibiting in Bloomington.

Manager Mitchell says Alexander will try his hand at beating the Cards tomorrow, although it won't do any good to shut them out, unless the Cubs can make a run.

Flack gave the Cubs a chance by opening the eighth with a single. Hollocher flied, then a wild pitch let Max to second, but Magee fouled out, and Merkle's pop fell to Lavan's lot.

Clemons was up in the third with two Cards on and two out. He hit at a curve, which landed on the nose of his bat and squizzled off along the foul line. It rolled just inside all the way to Merkle, then caromed of Fred's mitt, but as Clemons thought it was going foul all the time, Merkle had plenty of time to recover and retire the side.

Manager Mitchell received the signed contract of a budding outfielder by the name of Barney Freiberg of Lynn, Mass. He will report in Chicago on Wednesday. He is only 19 and has had only school and semi-pro experience, but Mitchell saw him two years ago and tried to get him in tow then. Freiberg, in adition to his baseball ability, is an all round athlete, good in the dashes, the pole vault, and the shotput.

SIX YACHTS OFF FOR MILWAUKEE; FAVORITE LAST

With smooth water and a spanking breeze at their backs, five sloops and a schooner started a race to Milwaukee at 6 o'clock last night. The schooner Briar and the sloop Chaperon were fighting for the lead, with the others trailing soon after the start. The favorite, Intrepid, was last in the line as the racing boats took up the breeze, sailing almost due north on Lake Michigan.

All of the boats are owned by members of the Jackson Park Yacht club, from whose harbor the start was made. Besides the craft mentioned, the other starters were the Prairie, Yendys, and Pilot.

SHOCKER KEEPS LEADERS' SWATS WELL SCATTERED

Hose Aid in Their Own Downfall by Erring at Critical Periods.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

There were about 15,000 fans out at Comiskey park yesterday and saw the St. Louis Browns lick the White Sox, 5 to 2, in the third game of the series. Not one of that number seemed greatly hurt over the defeat of the south siders. All present realized the Sox should have been trimmed more decisively than they were.

It was Urban Shocker against Urban "Red" Faber. The former is a 1919 star. The latter is a 1917 star. That seems to be the only difference between the two. However, this Shocker person from St. Louis had some unlucky breaks in the early part of the game and had to pitch considerable ball to win. The other fellow got by nicely in the first part of the game but was lammed at the finish.

Browns Got a Dozen Blows.

The Browns made a dozen swats off Faber, some of them for extra bases, and if they hadn't been so foolish or so daring or something in their base running they might have made the affair more decisive. On the other hand, the Sox poled seven blows off Shocker and made quite a fight of the game until the eighth inning, when it looked all the time as if they had no chance.

Shocker is supposed to be a spitball pitcher. So is Faber. Both of them get their hands up to their mouths and do funny things before they deliver the ball. Apparently that is done for the benefit of the grandstand. Anyway, their bluffing doesn't seem to have much effect upon the boys who are in the game.

Faber Not the Faber of 1917.

Whatever they are throwing these days, this Shocker person has been much more successful this season than this Faber person, who was our hero in the world's series of 1917. Maybe Faber is a bit old fashioned. Maybe he refuses to do some of the things the up to date hurlers pull. At least Red hasn't won many games this year, and if he doesn't start pretty soon, Cascade, Ia., is liable to drop off the map again.

Shocker is a humdinger with something new. He's said to be a smart fellow who knows what to do with a baseball, just as Eddie Cicotte knows. And here was our old fashioned "Red Faber" out there trying to best him with an Iowa strong arm. The strong arm went along beautifully for more than half the ball game, and actually got some of the fans excited. The wise ones wagered 11 to 10 or better on the Browns before the game began. The Sox enthusiasts covered the wagers.

Felsch's Triple Starts Sox.

When Hap Felsch opened the second round with a triple and got home on Lynn's infield out, the enthusiasts cheered. The wise ones were willing to wait. Then, in the fourth, Jacobson opened with a triple, and got home in a hurry on a sacrifice fly, and the wise ones felt content in their wisdom. The score was tied.

In the last half of the fourth Felsch got a scratch single, and Risberg got a regular one, and McMullin sacrificed and Lynn produced a sacrifice fly that sent a second Sox run home, and the wise ones began to wonder if they hadn't better start laying off their bets.

Browns Tie It in Sixth.

However, in the sixth, the Browns tied the score again in bangup style on a base on balls, a sacrifice and a couple of regular hits, and the wise ones wouldn't have laid off their bets for anything.

They were right, for in the seventh singles by Smith and Gerber and a two base blow by Severeid gave the Browns a run to the good. That was all they needed, but in the eighth they poled home two more with the help of a couple of errors by the Sox. The errors didn't beat the Sox. They simply made it a good beating.

STUDY OF CLUBS WOULD PREVENT ERRORS IN GOLF

O'Neil Says Upright Swing Should Be Used in Play with Midiron.

BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

If players would study the construction of each club carefully and consider the reasons for its differences from the other clubs, they would avoid many of the commonest errors in play.

Take the midiron, for example. It has a shorter shaft and a more upright lie than the wooden club—features which suggest as plainly as possible that the player should stand nearer to his ball and more over it and should use a more upright swing. Yet many players persist in standing far away from the ball, reaching for it, and swinging as if they were using a driver.

Midiron Not For Distance.

The midiron is not intended for use when distance is required. It is constructed with special reference to giving accuracy of direction for medium distances only. If a long shot is needed, the player should not try to press with the midiron, but should choose a driving iron or a brassie, as the situation requires.

In playing the midiron, the ball should lie half way between the median line of the body and a parallel line through the left heel. It should also lie close enough to the player to allow the lower edge of the club head to be parallel with the surface of the ground. The player's right foot should be considerably nearer the line of direction than his left, in order to give a fairly open stance. This will help to limit the backswing and consequently to contribute accuracy to the forward swing and the flight of the ball.

Grip Firm, Not Tense.

The grip, as in all iron shots, should be very firm, though not tense. The player's body and head should be kept steady throughout the stroke. The weight should rest slightly more upon the right foot than the left and there should be no shifting of the weight except the slight shifting that necessarily accompanies the pivoting of the body at the hips.

The commonest shot with the midiron is that which gives a long carry ending with a run. To make it correctly is comparatively simple.

Carry the club back with the left arm straight, at the same time rolling the wrists so as to turn the toe of the club backward and upward. Be careful not to go back too far or the accuracy of the swing will be seriously interfered with. As soon as the top of the swing is reached, begin the downward swing with a throw of the club head and let the roll of the wrists continue until at the top of the forward swing the toe of the club is pointing forward and upward in the line of flight.

Care in Clubhead Throw.

In making this shot the throw of the clubhead should be strong and positive, but not quite so snappy as in playing the wooden clubs. Too great an effort at snappiness of throw is apt to result in an inaccurate swing.

If the player feels a tendency to finish the stroke over the left shoulder instead of forward in the line of flight, he is probably overplaying his club and sacrificing accuracy to distance. The remedy for this—as for so many other faults—is to shorten the swing until perfect control is reëstablished.

YOUNG CUMMINGS SETS MARK OF 71 TO BEAT SISTER

Young Dexter Cummings turned in the best score ever made by a junior golfer at Onwentsia, beating par of 73 with a card of 71.

Cummings, who is 16 years old, set out after his low score in an effort to beat the season's women's record card of net 79, turned in by his sister.

Miss Edith Cummings, 20 year old daughter of D. M. Cummings, went out in 37 and came in in 46, getting gross of 83 and a card of 83—4—79, Tuesday afternoon.

That night Master Cummings was "ragged" about his game in comparison to his sister's showing, and challenged another junior member for a match. They took George McLaughlin Jr. along to keep official score, and Dexter Cummings was out in 34 and in in 37 for his star card of 71.

ON OTHER COURSES.

WINDSOR.

Results of the qualifying round and pairings for the Carl Smith trophy follow:

SOUTH SHORE.

W. C. Trainor, who took the lead four weeks ago at the end of the first eighteen holes in the Brown trophy competition, wound up the seventy-two hole effort yesterday with a total of 23 up on the colonel and captured the coveted prize. Trainor on the four rounds was 3, 9, 4, and 7 up, respectively. M. P. Fitzmaurice finished the long jounrney 10 up for second place, while E. I. Stephen was third, 9 up. Trainor also won the ball sweepstakes, match play handicap against bogey, with yesterday's card. R. E. Hughes, 5 up, was second.

BEVERLY.

J. H. Levis was in championship form and chalked up 36—38—74 for low gross. A card of 93—27—66 gave J. B. Tuthill the low net prize. Numerous defaults marked the second round for the Levis trophy, C. R. Terry conceding to J. A. Mudd, Dr. B. A. Duffy saving W. C. Cook from a tough match through the heat, and J. D. Butt defaulting to H. R. Shollenberger. Dr. W. D. Mahoney improved his standing by defeating E. H. Guertin, 3 and 2. Results in the second round for the Uffendell trophy were as follows: Scratch players: M. A. Donohue defeated J. A. Middleton, 1 up, 19 holes; C. Kingsbury defeated S. K. Milligan, 3 and 2; J. H. Levis defeated W. F. Nielson, 4 and 3; E. F. Olson defeated A. H. Haigh, 1 up. Allowance players: H. E. Class D—G. Guston, 269; J. Buslee, 275.

Ninety-four players competed in the qualifying round for the class medals.

MAYWOOD.

W. H. Muttera and R. J. Schupp notched 79—13—66 for the low net score in the best ball foursome, three-eighth combined handicap applied. A. A. Luttrell and J. G. Geiger and J. Lane and C. Ross tied as runners up with identical cards of 88—19—69. A two ball mixed foursome will be played this afternoon.

EDGEBROOK.

With all play from scratch, A. O. Young led the field in the qualifying round for the club championship, the last event of the like before the club passes into the forest preserve at the end of the present season. Qualifiers: A. O. Young, 70; H. Uhleman, 80; H. H. Conway, 82; William Young, 82; J. J. Mullen, 85; E. Von Herman, 85; D. Petrie, 88; P. J. Feipel, 89; A. B. Lemmon, 89; M. M. Culver, 90; J. A. Maxwell, 91; F. W. Kasenhagen, 91; W. W. Hogle, 96; W. J. Maloney, 97; W. G. Diederich, 97; C. E. Gaumett, 97.

CALUMET.

Playing consistent golf, H. L. Garrison and C. E. Ingram won the best ball foursome match play handicap again par by finishing 4 up. R. O'Hare and C. L. Overaker were second, 1 down. D. C. Wing and J. L. McElroy finished third, 1 down. In the blind bogey handicap Wing, 99—13—86, and W. H. Leonard, 98—12—86, tied for the major portion of the spoils.

EXMOOR.

The class B team, composed of J. R. Washburn and T. C. Butz, took the class championship at Exmoor. Washburn had 86—16—70, Butz getting 82—10—72, making a total of 142.

OLYMPIA FIELDS.

H. F. Barndt won the E. E. Peter trophy at Olympia Fields 5 up on par. E. E. Harwood was runner up, 3 up. The two ball sweepstakes went to D. R. Richberg, C. W. Beilfuss being second and J. G. Drennan third.

EDGEWOOD.

L. E. Bunning won the W. H. Millard prize at Edgewood, 11 up on bogey. He also won low gross for the day with a fine card of 72, two over par.

DEMPSEY LIKELY TO LEAD CHAMPS AS COIN GETTER

Public Flocks to Bannar of a Real Fighter; Jack's All That.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Jack Dempsey, recently crowned heavyweight champion of the world, has been called the "submarine destroyer," the "wild wildcat," and a few other names that denote he is a ripping, tearing, ferocious, vicious, mauling fighter who sinks his foes into pugilistic oblivion. Now that he's the champon, these fellows who tack on the monickers are likely to call him something else—"Get Rich Quick" Dempsey.

Here's Dempsey, just past his twenty-fourth birthday and brimful of youth, a specimen of mankind that is a joy to look on, a man with a pleasing personality—outside the ring.

Champions of Past Fighters.

Few heavyweights of championship class of the past were boxers—that is, men who depended on clever manipulation of the mitts, both offensively and defensively, to land them on the winning end of a contest. Most all of them were hitters, mostly one-handed hitters, to be sure, but nearly all carried the wallop that produced sleep.

Going back to the first heavyweight glove champion, John L. Sullivan, the reign of hitters began. John L. wasn't a boxer. He was a puncher and no one disputes that. The next reigning champion was the only simon pure boxer that deserved that title. His name was James J. Corbett. No one ever credited Corbett with being a fighter, for that's what the fans like to call the punchers. Corbett did not knock Sullivan out with a punch. He punched him into exhaustion and defeat in twenty-one rounds.

Along Comes More Hitters.

Along came a lot more hitters. There was Bob Fitzsimmons, who rocked Corbett to sleep with a lusty solar plexus wallop; then Jim Jeffries, who hit a fellow in the ring the way he pounded a boiler with a hammer, which had been his occupation before going into pugilism. Marvin Hart depended on his punch and so did Tommy Burns, who followed the Kentuckian as titleholder. Jack Johnson was a good puncher when he wanted to win that way, and Jess Willard was a right handed walloper of merit.

Now we have Dempsey, the fightingest of 'em all. Jack isn't a one handed walloper. He cracks his foes to sleep just as easily with his left hand as he does with his right. He doesn't box. He moves so fast that boxing is unnecessary. He speeds into high, lets go with left and right, and the result—oh, well, Jess Willard explained that after his unpleasant three round afternoon at Toledo, O., July 4.

Two Possible Opponents Abroad.

Judged from a pugilistic standpoint, Dempsey isn't in line to make any considerable amount of money as a fighter, for prospective opponents at the present time are very few. He might do a little hooking to the chin of Mr. Georges Carpentier, champion of France, and he might be induced to go to London to unpack a hook or two on the jaw of Mr. Joe Beckett, who not so long ago hopped into the limelight as champion of England when he toppled Bombardier Wells to the canvas.

For these two matches Dempsey might pick up a nice piece of jack, for they're willing to cough up the stuff across the water to see a champion the same as they are on this side. As for the outlook in this country, it is decidedly dismal, for there "ain't nobody" for the champion to hit.

Public Wants to See Jack.

But Dempsey should worry. All he has to do to grab off the jack as fast as they can slip it to him, is to appear before the public. There's a reason for this. He bids fair to be probably the most popular champion that ever copped the title. He's built that way. No sooner had he swatted Willard into defeat than promoters theatrical, circus, and movie, swamped down on him.

BRAVES DEFEAT NEW YORK, 6-5; 4 GAMES IN 27

Two Hits and Error Bring Fourth Victory in Two Seasons.

New York, July 26.—Boston defeated New York in the third game of the series, 6 to 5. It was only the fourth time Boston has defeated the Giants in the last two years in twenty-seven games played.

The Giants made a rally, tying the score with four runs in the seventh, but Boston won in the eighth on hits by Smith and Holke and an error by Doyle. Herzog and Boeckel were put out of the game for strenuously questioning decisions by the umpire. Score:

PHILS AND ROBINS SPLIT.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 26.—Philadelphia and Brooklyn divided a double header today, the Phillies winning the first, 2 to 0, mainly through the pitching of Meadows, and losing the second, 11 to 5. Meadows allowed only four hits and was given sensational support. It was his third straight victory since joining the Philadelphia club. Rixey and Murray were hit hard in the second game. Scores:

CHICAGO GIANTS COP IN 10TH.

It took the Chicago Giants until the tenth inning to defeat the Romeos, 6 to 5, at Gunther park. Walter Ball, twirling for the colored stars, won his own game in the tenth session, scoring Joe Green with a single. Green, first up in the tenth, reached first on Burns' fumble and went all the way to third on Peters' sacrifice. Score:

Baseball Games

THE Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago defeated the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, 6 to 0, at Cub park yesterday in the interdistrict series for the federal reserve bank championship of the United States.

Eddie Stack was responsible for the whitewash by holding the Clevelanders to two scattered hits. The home boys backed him up with heavy hitting and almost perfect support.

As a curtain raiser the Federal Reserve team of Chicago defeated the U. S. Gypsum, 10 to 5, in a five inning game. Cleveland and Chicago play again this afternoon. Score:

GUNTHERS PICK SWEET REVENGE; BEAT LOGANS, 3-2

Square Up for Previous Defeat with Joe Benz on Hurling Mound.

Gunthers avenged a previous defeat at the hands of the Logan Squares at Callahan's grounds yesterday, emerging on the tall end of a 3 to 3 score. Jacobs' Texas leaguer, a pass, two infield hits by Gunkel and Harley, and Forman's solid drive to left scored two runs for the Logans in the fourth.

The Gunthers got their first run on a pass and Hank Butcher's bounder over third in the first round. Another walk and Reilly's drive to left tied the count in the sixth. The visiting team won in the ninth on Kavanaugh's double that hit the top board of the right fence, but stayed in the park, and Wright's single. The Logans expired in their half with men on second and third, Driscoll saving the game by fielding Ginger's smart rap.

Benz pitched good ball after several weeks' layoff, due to injuries. Score:

300,000 Maxwells Have Made This New-Day Maxwell a Greater Car

TO date there have been 300,000 Maxwells of one model built. Some of these have run more than 50,000 miles; many 25,000.

Their total mileage makes a staggering figure, which even in these days of large figures is sensational.

Consider what a wealth of experience is supplied by such a record—what a fund of information upon which to formulate the improvements to go into this new-day Maxwell.

Year after year of elimination; year after year of refinements, new values—but all developed from one original chassis, made better and better as more and more were built.

Obviously, this Maxwell of today is a greater car.

It is made better; it is made of better materials; it is made in better plants; by better automatics, better forges, better manufacturing methods.

It costs many hundred dollars more to make this car today than it did five years ago. There is far more value there.

In making more and more of them the aim has been to make them better and better; and there is more satisfaction in driving a Maxwell today than ever before.

—for a Maxwell is well nigh trouble proof.

—for it seldom takes on the aspect of old age.

—for it is everlastingly a dollar saver.

There is no car of the day that offers so much for so little.

AUSTIN NET MEN WIN TEAM TITLE FOR THIRD TIME

Club Which Averages 38 Years Beats Phone by 5 to 0 Score.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

The veterans' team of Austin Tennis club nailed up the trophy in the five court division of the Chicago Tennis association for the third straight year yesterday, winning its concluding division C match of the season from Chicago Telephone Co., 5 matches to 0. The Austin team averages thirty-eight years of age.

Austin is the only unbeaten team, having won from all six opponents in its class. The other six clubs play Saturday, finishing a week later than the leaders, but none can displace the champs. Austin won twenty-three individual contests for the season and lost seven.

Hammel Defeats Weston.

Dan Hammel of Austin and Walter Weston had a hard fight in singles yesterday, to see whether the visitors could not snatch one match from the fire, but Hammel won it, 4-6, 6-2, 9-7. Summaries:

SINGLES—Charles Moore [A.] beat A. E. Whitman [P.], 6—0, 6—3; D. Hammel [A.] beat Walter Weston [P.], 4—6, 6—2, 9—7; W. H. O'Conor [A.] beat C. A. Perz [P.], 6—0, 6—1.

DOUBLES—W. H. O'Conor and W. T. Bassett [A.] beat A. E. Whitman and R. Mehringer [P.], 6—3, 6—3; D. Hammel and J. Kane [A.] beat W. Weston and C. A. Perz [P.], 6—1, 6—2.

W. ELECTRICS [2] AT BERWYN [3].

The new Berwyn team took a Division C team victory from Western Electric company, 3 to 2, at Berwyn. Most of the matches were not decided until the final point, and victory or defeat for the day hinged on the final doubles match, in which R. W. Peters and O. I. Iver of Berwyn came back after dropping the first set, and defeated C. A. Cook and W. M. Bond, 4—6, 6—4, 6—1. Summaries:

SINGLES—F. Myers [B.] beat J. H. Latane [W. E.], 6—8, 6—3, 6—3; H. W. Ellinwood [B.] beat J. H. Biggar [W. E.], 7—5, 6—3; C. A. Cook [W. E.] beat R. W. Peters [B.], 6—0, 6—2.

DOUBLES—J. H. Biggar and J. H. Latane [W. E.] beat F. Myers and C. Morris [B.], 6—1, 6—3; R. W. Peters and O. I. Ivor [B.] beat C. A. Cook and W. M. Bond [W. E.], 4—6, 6—4, 6—1.

Division A.

SHERWOOD [3] AT CHICAGO [6].

Chicago Tennis club, champ for several years, stepped out in front in division A, the "big league" of local tennisdom, by winning from Sherwood, 6 to 3, on the 1918 champions' courts. Sherwood had been disputing the issue of leadership until yesterday, and the match was the first defeat for that team. When South Park, the only other unbeaten outfit, meets Sherwood this afternoon, fans will have the first good chance to compare the strength of Chicago and South Park as prospective opponents for the 1919 title. Summaries:

SINGLES—W. S. Miller [C.] beat R. F. Woods [S.], 4—6, 6—1, 6—3; D. F. Wiley [C.] beat C. G. Hill [S.], 6—1, 6—4; J. F. Day [S.] beat J. F. Kenfield [C.], 6—1, 4—6, 6—4; Maurice James [C.] beat H. McLaughlin [S.], 6—2, 6—1; Harry Fox [S.] beat C. O. Carlstrom [C.], 6—3, 3—6, 6—4; L. B. Walton [S.] beat Erwin Gut [C.], 6—3, 6—4.

DOUBLES—W. S. Miller and J. F. Kenfield [C.] beat C. G. Hill and R. F. Woods [S.], 6—1, 6—3; D. F. Wiley and M. James [C.] beat J. F. Daly and L. B. Walton [S.], 3—6, 6—4, 6—2; C. O. Carlstrom and George Neeves [C.] beat H. McLaughlin and H. Fox [S.], 6—2, 6—4.

UNATRE [0] AT SOUTH PARK [9].

SINGLES—Harold Forster [S. P.] beat A. M. Steelhammer [U.], 6—3, 6—1. Harry Holbrook [S. P.] beat W. Moller [U.], 6—3, 8—6. Allen Wylie [S. P.] beat A. H. Hausske [U.], 6—4, 6—2. L. R. Campbell [S. MINOCQUA [1] AT CHICAGO [8].

Chicago's second team took unchallenged lead in the north section of division B, beating Minocqua's skeleton team, 8 to 1. The losers had only four players, consequently they lost two single matches and one in doubles by forfeit, to begin with. Summaries:

SINGLES—G. G. Grenz [C] beat Hugo Wolff [M], 6—0, 6—0. William Wilkins [C] beat R. I. Adams [M], 1—6, 7—5, 7—5. J. A. Anderson [C] beat John Rohner [M], 6—0, 6—1. W. Futterer [C] beat Baasil [M], 6—1, 6—3. Chicago won two other singles matches by default.

DOUBLES—R. I. Adams and Hugo Wolff [M] beat E. H. Fabrice and Norman Browne [C], 6—1, 6—3. J. A. Anderson and W. Futterer [C] beat John Rohner and Baasil [M], 6—0, 6—3. The third doubles match went to Chicago by default.

ROGERS PARK [5] AT WILSON [4].

SINGLES—Ed. Spear [W.] beat M. B. Joyce, [R. P.], 1—6, 7—5, 6—0. F. O. Ebeling, [R. P.], beat P. Thompson, [W.], 6—0, 6—4. C. Capp, [W.], beat L. J. Lawrence, [R. P.], 6—3, 6—1. F. Suttle, [R. ALEXANDER AND VOSHELL SECURE TRI-STATE TITLE

Cleveland, O., July 26.—In the finals of the tri-state championship tennis doubles today Fred Alexander of New York and S. Howard Voshell of Brooklyn defeated Alex Gravem and Robert Kinsey of California in straight sets, 6—2, 6—2, and 6—1.

The Californians took the aggressive at the start, seemingly attempting to break the air tight defense of the veterans. Alexander and Voshell soon tired the Californians, however, with long lobs to the far corners of the court and hard smashes near the net.

R. Lindley Murray of Niagara Falls, N. Y., national tennis champion, defeated Ichiya Kumagae of New York in an exhibition contest on the clay courts, 4—6, 6—2, 7—5, 0—6, and 7—5.

In the first set Murray took the defensive and lost. He won the next two with smashes and volleys. The fifth went to Murray after twelve hard fought games, ten of which went to a deuce score.

BIDDLE, GARLAND DEFEAT WRIGHTS IN A RAINSTORM

Newton, Mass., July 26.—Tennis enthusiasts braved two hard thunderstorms today to watch play in the semi-finals of the New England sectional doubles championships at the Longwood courts. Craig Biddle, Philadelphia, and C. S. Garland, Pittsburgh, playing the steadiest game they have shown thus far, defeated Wright Brothers, Irving and Beals, in straight sets, 6-0, 6-3, 6-2.

R. Norris Williams, II, and W. M. Washburn had more difficulty in disposing of Richard Harte and C. Caner, 4-6, 7-5, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3. The final will be played Monday.

JOHNSTON TAKES TENNIS HONORS

Minneapolis, Minn., July 26.—William M. Johnston of San Francisco added the title of northwestern sectional tennis champion to his honors this afternoon, defeating Phil S. Brain of Minneapolis in the challenge round, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3. Johnston never was in trouble.

Miss Marguerite Davis of St. Paul captured the women's singles title, defeating Miss Ethel Lee of Minneapolis, 6—4, 6—0.

Johnston and Clarence Griffin of San Francisco had little trouble taking the northwestern doubles title from Brain and Trafford Jayne, Minneapolis, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—1, 6—3.

BICYCLE RIDE TO NEW YORK.

Henry Newfeldt and Martin Bromstad will start tomorrow morning to ride the Nelson tandem, which holds the record between New York and San Francisco, from Chicago to New York. The start will be made from the Masonic temple at 8 o'clock.

HOOSIER GIRL SHOWS THE WAY IN SWIMS AT EDGEWATER BEACH

Frances Bilsbarrow, 16 year old girl swimmer of the Independent A. C. of Indianapolis, carried off two firsts, a second, and a third place in the swims for women held yesterday at Edgewater beach. Three events in which the Hoosier school girl competed were Central A. A. U. junior women's championship contests.

The 100 yard breast stroke was the closest race, Lillian Miller of Chicago getting off to a bad start which gave her opponents a lead of about eight yards. Miss Miller overcame this handicap, and won the race in a close finish, Miss Frederica Moore of Indianapolis being second and Miss Bilsbarrow third.

Rough water made conditions unsatisfactory in the senior men's Central A. A. U. plunge for distance, and only two contestants took part, the event resulting in a tie between Richard Delmar, Illinois A. C., and Ray White, Hamilton club. Delmar won the toss for first place medal. Time was not kept in the women's events. Summaries:

Central A. A. U. Junior Women's Events.

100 yard free style—Won by Frances Bilsbarrow, Indianapolis Independent A. C.; Euphrasia Donnelly, Indianapolis Independent A. C., second; Frederica Moore, Northwestern U. summer school, third.

100 yard breast stroke—Won by Lillian Miller; Frederica Moore, Northwestern, second; Frances Bilsbarrow, Indianapolis, third.

FOREIGN WOMEN TO APPEAR HERE IN LOCAL SWIM

Misses Fannie Durack and Mina Wiley, the noted Australian swimmers, will appear in the Chicago Athletic association's two day water carnival at Lincoln park, Aug. 9 and 10, as a result of the action of President Dallas of the National A. A. U. in lifting the ban rfom the Australians.

Martin Delaney, physical director of the C. A. A., announced last night that he had reopened negotiations to bring the aquatic stars to Chicago.

Coach Delaney has extended an invitation to every girl swimmer in Chicago to enter the carnival. Races and events are being arranged for girls of every description. He expects to have 200 or more in the competition.

In addition to the swimming races there will be races between boat crews. The Duluth Rowing club will send its crack crews to the carnival, and it is possible St. Louis will send a four oared crew. The Lincoln Park Boat club also will be represented.

AMMANN SHOOTS PERFECT SCORE

A. H. Ammann, professional, broke 50 straight targets at Lincoln Park Gun club traps yesterday, but was not eligible for a leg on the 1919 championship event, of which series the contest was a part. Three amateurs tied at 48 for the right to a leg in the title race. They were C. G. Burmeister, L. B. Clarke and Dr. W. N. Senn. A strong off shore wind made shooting difficult. Leading scores with handicaps:

A. H. Ammann [18], 50; C. G. Burmeister [20], 48; L. B. Clarke [18], 48; W. N. Senn [16], 48; D. E. Thomas [16], 46; G. A. Smith [20], 46; S. H. Sharman [20], 46; J. Edwards [18], 46; H. A. Woods and Waters

by LARRY ST. JOHN

YE GODS AND LITTLE FISHES.

THOSE who race hither and yon in mad pursuit of big game fishes need not read this, for today is devoted to little fishes—fishes for which no one offers prizes, but which bulk large in the eyes of ye pier gods.

Whether he fishes for tom cods in the Atlantic, sand dabs in the Pacific, saugers on the lower lakes, or perch and ciscos in Lake Michigan, ye pier god is a serene soul and sociable—a philosopher who takes things as they come and whose general attitude is: "I ain't mad at nobody."

Of all the fresh water fishes pursued by pier fishermen, the yellow perch easily leads the list, and being sweet flavored and willing biters, they deserve all the attention they receive. They travel about in great schools and do most of their feeding in daylight around piers, cribs, and pilings. These circumstances make perch fishing "duck soup" for those who do not scorn little fishes and are sociably inclined, for unlike other fishing, the more baited hooks there are in the water the better the chances of a big string.

The schemes devised to add perch to one's string are numerous. For instance, there is the trolley. First a long line is anchored out in the water, and the trolley, provided with wheels, rolls down this line, carrying baited hooks attached to short lines. The throwline works on a similar principle, except that no trolley is used. However, the majority of perch fishers prefer a cane pole, stout line, a sinker, possibly a bobber, and a hook—sometimes more than one.

The best size hook for straight perch fishing is a No. 8, but where ciscos and other small fish with weak mouths are to be taken a size or two smaller is to be preferred. A No. 10 Aberdeen or Carlisle, which are made of fine wire, make a great perch and cisco hook. If snelled hooks are not used, a few feet of silk worm gut leader will be a great help. This leader should be soaked a little before being used, but some stiffness helps to set the hook.

Beyond doubt the best perch bait is a live minnow, such as a lake shiner. Hook it lightly under the back fin, takin care not to pierce the backbone. Dead minnows may be used, but they should be more firmly hooked.

Sometimes minnows are plentiful and can either be bought at the piers or caught in the shallows with dip net or minnow seine, but every season there is a minnow famine, when they are hard to find. For this reason it is a good plan to "pickle" or preserve a few for a rainy day.

The best formula we know for preserving minnows is two parts of boiled water to one of formaldehyde. Let the boiled water cool, add the formaldehye, pack the minnows in a jar or jelly glass, pour the solution over them, and seal tightly. Boiled water with all the salt or boric acid it will take up is also good.

Minnows can also be put up dry by packing them in jars. First put down a layer of salt, then a layer of minnows, and so on until the receptacle is filled. Preserved minnows are always best threaded on the hook and used with a small spinner and kept moving a little while in the water.

For that matter, the use of a small spinner when the water is roily is a mighty good stunt. Let it be the smallest obtainable—not larger than a dime. The Colorado style is good because it is equipped with a hook that spins as well as the spinner. For this reason it works well with a dead minnow when it is jiggled up and down in the water. The flash of the spinner attracts fish from a distance and directs attention to the bait.

Next best bait for perch is a small soft shell crab or crawfish. These are sometimes hard to get, but large ones are always plentiful. They can be used as follows: Peel the horny shell from the tail and use the nice piece of light colored meat you find there—this is a bully bait for all small fish.

The best cut bait is a small piece from the belly of another fish, including a bit of fin. This makes a tough bait and it is not necessary to renew it very often. Angleworms may also be used in a pinch. Scoured worms are best, but big fat night crawlers often bring home the bacon.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

West secured nine tricks.

The declarer's play for the first eight tricks appeared quite stylish. In reality it was very poor.

The first good play in the deal occurred at trick seven, when north discarded a trump rather than either of the plain suits. South knew from this that north and west must each have two hearts remaining and also that north was guarding the jack of clubs. South, therefore, played easily.

South could also have saved the game by discarding a club at trick eight and another club when east trumped the fourth round of hearts. Then by leading the ace of trumps, after winning the first club trick, south could have forced the last trump in the west hand and the five of spades would have been the thirteener.

The correct play of the deal is given in the next diagram.

West secured ten tricks.

In this case the declarer refused to consider the cross-ruff and began at once to establish the long club suit in dummy. Had it developed that the clubs were distributed unfavorably he could always have fallen back on the trumping program.

After the two clubs were established in dummy the game was assured, regardless of the adversaries' play.

The method used in the second deal was far more effective and less complicated than that of the original declarer.

SWEITZER CUP COMMITTEE PICKED.

President Tearney of the Amateur Base Ball Managers' league has appointed the following Sweitzer cup commission: Chas. Weil, chairman; Gus Hendricks, secretary; A. R. SIME CHAMPION IN ROQUE EVENT WITH HIGH MARK

Scores 379 in 384 Points with Only One More Match to Play.

As indicated in his play during the last two days, H. Sime, the local star, emerged champion in the contest for the first division title in the American Roque league tournament, staged at the Washington park courts. Sime has won eleven of his twelve games and has scored a total of 379 points in 384. He still has one more match to play, but a defeat would not affect his standing.

In the second division the battle is raging warm between L. A. Carr and A. P. Goodhue, both Chicago players, and it will take the final games to determine the winner. W. Meyer of Newport, Ind., a 15 year old player, appears to have the best chance of winning in the third division.

Schedule a Heavy One.

The tournament was not finished last night, as expected, because a heavy grist of matches had to be run off. In the effort to clean up the schedule matches were played at Washington Park, at Lincoln park, and at Garfield park, but even this failed to complete the schedule of matches. It was said last night that the tournament will close today.

Joseph Kennedy of Chicago retained his place at the top of the standing in the contest for the diamond medal, the score sheet last night showing the following figures:

	W.	L.		W.	L.
J. Kennedy, Chi..	5	2	H. Walker, Chi...	3	3
F. C. Turner, Pas.	4	4	H. E. Lyman, Top.	2	5

One Match a Tie.

Only a few matches were reported in the division play. Two of these were halted at the expiration of the time limit of one hour and a half. In one of these matches the result was a tie, C. G. Carlson and H. O. Hinds finishing with a count of 24 all. The matches reported were:

FIRST DIVISION.

C. G. Carlson, Chicago, tied with H. O. Hines, Le Mars, Ia., at 24 points; A. B. Argenbright, Kansas City, beat W. H. Hoagland, Peoria, 26 to 15; J. C. Lathrop, Chicago, beat F. C. Koch, Chicago, 32 to 7; H. Sime, Chicago, beat W. H. Hoagland, Peoria, 32 to 0; H. Sime, Chicago, beat F. C. Jones, Chicago, 32 to 17.

SECOND DIVISION.

L. A. Carr, Chicago, beat W. O. Smith, Chicago, 27 to 9.

THIRD DIVISION.

SALEM CAPTURES ROWING CONTEST AT ST. LOUIS MEET

St. Louis, Mo., July 26.—[Special.]—James Salem and Oliver Palm, rowing for the Lincoln Park Boat club of Chicago, won a first and second in the two races in which they were entered in the junior events of the Central States Regatta today. Salem won the singles event from a field of four, negotiating the mile and a half in 12:09.

In the doubles race the Chicago men pushed Central of St. Louis hard for first place, but lost water in executing the turn.

Salem was entered in the one-quarter mile dash for single sculls, but, saving himself in anticipation of a hard race in the doubles, he declined to row in the dash, which went to Western Rowing club's crack sculler, Harry Vogler, in 1:34.

Central oarsmen captured the meet with a total of 20 points, with Mound City in second place with 9 points, while Lincoln Park finished third with 8. Other scores were: St. Louis, 6; Western, 6, and North End, 5.

Six oared barge—Won by North End; Central, second; St. Louis, third. Time, 4:20 1-5.

Single sculls—Won by Lincoln Park Boat club, Chicago; Central, second; Mound City, third. Time, 12:09.

Four-oared shells—Won by Central; Mound City, second; Western, third. Time, 10:26.

One-fourth mile dash, singles—Won by Western; Central, second; Mound City, third. Time, 1:34.

Eight oared shell—Won by St. Louis; North End, second; Central, third. Time, 7:14.

Double sculls—Won by Central; Lincoln Park, second; Mound City, third. No time.

Scouts of Major League Eye Griesbaum Today

Fred Griesbaum, local strikeout king, who fanned twenty Rogers Park batters last Sunday, will be scrutinized this afternoon at Cicero, where the home team tackles Pinky Grey's Ideals. Three big league scouts will be on hand to get a line on his curving ability. Otto Knabe of the Cubs has orders to give him the up and down. Bill Connery, an ivory hunter from the St. Louis Browns, and Joe Tinker of the Columbus club of the American association also are after the services of the young phenom.

SURGEON WANTS SEVEN DOCTORS

We represent a leading Chicago surgeon who is too busy to attend to preliminary organization work. He holds an option on a 20% Dividend-Earning CHICAGO HOSPITAL from the owner, whose health compels him to seek a more congenial location and climate.

Our client wants seven more good Doctors—from the city or country—to join him and other Doctors, already "committed," on an EQUAL FOOTING on the medical staff and in the purchase and management of said Hospital.

It's a 100-bed, modern, fireproof, beautiful building, located "far-distant" from other hospitals now, and probably always will be—because of the impossibility of securing hospital building permits in its territory, which is THE BEST and most exclusive residential district in Chicago, near the lake and beautiful parks and boulevards.

CENTENNIAL OF STATE MARKED BY MEMORIAL

Begin Building Beautiful Structure at Springfield, Ill.

The big excavation just made south of the capitol building in Springfield marks the beginning of work on the Illinois centennial memorial building. Gov. Lowden and the members of the centennial commission recently approved the plans for this structure prepared by Edgar Martin, supervising architect, and Schmidt, Garden & Martin of Chicago, associate architects. Members of the commission besides the governor are: Louis L. Emmerson, secretary of state; John G. Oglesby, lieutenant governor; David E. Shanahan, speaker of the house; Thomas Rinaker, Edward W. Payne; and W. D. McHenry. The work will be under the personal direction of Frank I. Bennett, director, and Thomas G. Vennum, assistant director of public works and buildings.

Built with Future in Mind.

Gov. Lowden impressed on the architect that the idea of future development must be kept in mind, so that the error of building a structure which becomes outgrown and crowded after a decade may be avoided.

Inspection of the plans will reveal that the building is capable of expansion by the construction of wings extending to the south, thus affording an economical source of supply for office space for state departments. This possibility results from locating the stairs and elevators of the building toward its rear on short corridors, which will extend on into the additions and by adopting story heights at these points which will line with practical office story heights in the future portions.

Located south of the Capitol building, but far enough north of Edwards street to leave room for these additions, the new edifice, facing north, will extend about 300 feet east and west, and 100 feet north and south, not including a wing on the south that will run to Edwards street.

Five Stories High.

The building will be five stories in height, faced with Indiana limestone with a base course of granite, and will rise a hundred feet above the surrounding terrace. The exterior design expresses the monumental character of the structure, and in scale and general detail is in harmony with the Capitol building. The north front is featured by a Corinthian portico of twelve columns, flanked by pavilions with pilasters of the same order; below the portico the ground story forms a massive rusticated stone base, in which high arched windows light the Memorial hall, the most important feature of this story.

Between the arches are large stone panels which are to be carved in low relief with sculptural representations of incidents from the history of the state; flanking each of the two main entrance doorways are symbolical figures in bronze, of heroic size.

Embodies State's History.

Carved panels in the spandrels of the arches and in the minor cornice just below the columns will embody details illustrative of the history of the state.

A connecting terrace will extend north from the west entrance of the new building to the front portico of the Capitol building. This will form the roof of a double subway, one portion of which will be a pipe and service tunnel, and the other a finished corridor leading directly from the elevators of the Capitol building to those of the Centennial building.

Beyond each entrance doorway is a monumental entrance hall serving as a vestibule to the entire building in general and to the Memorial Hall in particular. This important room, 150 feet long, with a high coffered ceiling and a line of marble columns on each side, will house the Civil War collections now in the Capitol building. The impressive style of the Memorial hall will be followed in the entrance halls, so that the three spaces will form parts of a consistent whole; the vista in each direction will end in a large semi-circular niche, one of which will inclose a sculptured figure representing peace and the other a companion figure of victory.

Above the Memorial hall and occupying the same area in plan are the reading rooms for the State library and State Historical library. The reading room comunicates directly with the book stack, a specially designed unit for the compact storage of books, with an ultimate capacity of about 700,000 volumes.

In the east wing, opening from the ante-room of the State Historical library, will be located the Lincoln room, where will be housed historical momentos associated with the life of Springfield's greatest citizen.

JUBILEE DRIVE NETS $386,887 FOR CHARITIES

he latest phase in the jubilee drive for funds for the Catholic charities is the campaign among the trades organizations, conducted by the women's auxiliary. So far the trades have given generous response. The members of the women's auxiliary are pleased with the courtesies they have received from the firms they have solicited.

Subscriptions to date total $386,887, or about 53 per cent of the total amount required. The parish drive for funds is still forging ahead. Many parishes have oversubscribed their quotas and continue to send in subscriptions.

Recent parishes that have fulfilled their quotas are: St. Lucy's, 440 North Mayfield avenue; St. Lawrence O'Toole, Essex, Ill., and St. Attracta, Cicero.

Fire in Grocery Drives Five Families to Street

Thhe interior of a two story brick building housing a grocery, feed store, and drug store, above which were the homes of five families, was destroyed by fire yesterday when a blaze, starting in the barn in the rear of Dekker Bros.' grocery at 10648 South Michigan avenue, spread to the grocery and other stores. All members of the families who were in the rooms above the stores and all employés of the stores are reported to have escaped uninjured.

BOY KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE.

Maurice Rothstein, 5 years old, was fatally injured at Twenty-ninth street and Wabash avenue Friday by an automobile owned and driven by Isaac A. Stern, 5153 Vernon avenue. The boy died yesterday.

ALDERMAN FOR NEW AUTOMATIC PHONE COMPANY

Establishment of an independent automatic telephone company is the solution of the present telephone rate tangle in Chicago, is the belief of Ald. Thomas J. Lynch, chairman of the special council subcommittee on telephones.

"I agree with Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester Cleveland, who says that the biggest cry in years about telephone rates will be forthcoming when the people begin to get the bills under the new rates approved by Postmaster General Burleson," said Ald. Lynch. "There is a fine field right now for starting an independent company. It could obtain all the customers it would need.

"The situation now differs from the one which confronted us when we had the old automatic company. Then the Bell company had a 5 cent charge for all calls and a flat service rate. Now the price of the single call to the home user is 6½ cents. The Bell company helped kill off the old automatic company. Its experts said the automatic system was not practical. Now the Bell people are installing an automatic system of their own."

Death Hovers to Add His Side to War "Quadrangle"

It's an old story. She has a husband in France, but she was lonesome. He has a wife, but she was ill. They worked together at the Stewart-Warner Speedometer plant—Mrs. Elsie Stegbauer of 2256 Monroe street and August J. Ptacek, 2441 Warren avenue.

Mrs. Stegbauer was taken to the Norwegian Deaconess hospital last night and physicians say she cannot recover. She told the police she thought Ptacek was single. The midwife's name she would not divulge.

Ptacek is under arrest. He says Mrs. Stegbauer knew he was married and the father of two children. He said he didn't know what midwife she had seen.

CHICAGOANS TO GIVE NEW IRISH FLAG TO PRIEST

Miss Alice Delahunty of 6548 Ellis avenue will present the Very Rev. Augustine Hayden, Francescan Capuchin of Dublin, Ireland, with a new flag of the Irish republic at a celebration at the Auditorium theater this evening under the auspices of the Chicago Sinn Fein club. He says he will take the flag back to Ireland next month and present it personally to Mrs. Eamonn De Valera.

The Rev. Mr. Hayden will speak on "The Irish Martyrs of Easter Week—Why They Rose and How They Fell."

Other speakers will be Former Governor Dunne, the Rev. J. K. Fielding and Patrick H. O'Donnell. A program of Sinn Fein songs, music and dances will be staged.

GEN. WOOD TAKES HIGH DEGREE.

Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Col. Chauncey Brooks Baker, and George Hudson Cowan received the Royal Arch degree in Normal Park chapter, No. 210, R. A. M., meeting in Englewood Masonic temple, 6734 Wentworth avenue, last night.

Exceptional Opportunity for Production Manager

A rapidly-expanding Chicago manufacturing concern of national reputation seeks a man experienced in factory organization and supervision, to take full charge of production.

This man, as far as production is concerned, will rank next in authority to the president of the company. He will have several hundred employees under his charge. The selling organization of this concern is constantly outstripping production, and it will be the responsibility of the Production Manager to keep output up to sales. One of his first jobs will be that of rearranging the layout of the factory and moving part of the equipment to an additional floor with a minimum reduction in output.

This position is an exceptional one and offers an unusual opportunity for growth and advancement. Submit in your first letter complete details relative to your past experience and qualifications for the work. All replies will be held strictly confidential.

There's a Touch of Tomorrow In All Cole Does Today

THOSE who think only in the present, live in the past. It's the touch of tomorrow in what is done today that identifies advancement.

To sense the trend of the future and be the first to give it tangible expression has been Cole's aim.

Season after season—year after year, his advanced creations in motor car design have forecast the styles of the future.

The Aero-EIGHT became instantly the forerunner of a new vogue. It established new standards of design and performance.

For ten years Cole had been laying the foundations for this epoch-making creation, devoting the last five years exclusively to the Eight.

He was one of the first two American manufacturers to build an eight-cylinder car—the first to apply to it the principles of aerotype engineering.

Satisfied only with that which others had not yet achieved, Cole has put a touch of tomorrow in all that he has done.

It is that which gives the Aero-EIGHT the prestige of advanced achievement. It is that which has given the Cole product its distinction from the very beginning.

Latest Creations in All-Season Cars

THE SPORTSEDAN—Model 878

THE SPORTOSINE—Model 879

THE SPORTCOUPÉ—Model 883

SO it is that the new Aero-EIGHT All-Season models again introduce striking innovations in motor car design.

They anticipate, as usual, the styles of the future and bring with their ownership a feeling of pride in the possession of that which others have not yet attained.

Original—even to their names—the Aero-EIGHT Sportsedan, Sportcoupé, Sportosine, Toursedan, Tourosine and Towncar are authoritative examples of advanced coach building.

They introduce flush panel construction—a new development in enclosed car design.

They eliminate permanently those features which in the past have so definitely restricted the use of enclosed equipages.

Their individuality of design, their pleasing harmony of color, the dignity and refinement of their appointments bear the hallmark of superior craftsmanship.

There's a touch of tomorrow in the new Aero-EIGHT All-Season Cars; a note of futurity that fortifies the confidence which the public has placed in Cole as the producer of advanced motor cars.

EARL OF LYTTON SLATED FOR U. S. AMBASSADOR

"Almost Certain to Be Named," According to London Opinion.

The Earl of Lytton, according to dispatches from London, is most often mentioned as Ambassador to the United States, to succeed Lord Reading. Earl Lytton, according to one correspondent, is "almost certain to be named." His full name, as listed in Burke's, is Victor Alexander George Robert Bulwer-Lytton, but he is of the new generation and insists on the elimination of the hyphen. He is "Lytton." He is 42 years old, a forceful speaker, an athlete, and a non-partisan in politics.

The Countess of Lytton, who was Lady Pamela Plowden of Sussex before her marriage in 1902, is one of the leaders of court society at Windsor Castle. She dances Grecian dances, writes verse and scorns the dictates of conventional fashion. At one opening of parliament, when the peeresses assembled, she appeared in a little cap of lace, breaking a tradition old custom by appearing without her tiara.

There are two sons and two daughters in the Lytton household, Viscount Knebworth, born in 1903; the Hon. Alexander Bulwer-Lytton, in 1910; Lady Margaret, in 1905, and Lady Katherine, in 1909.

Lord Lytton is a suffragist. On the rock of woman's rights he split with Winston Churchill. He is a deep student of economic conditions and lends his name to a society for food reform. The Lytton home is Knebworth house, in London.

Every one in the Lytton family, according to the London Sketch, does something extremely well. Lord Lytton is an expert skater and Neville Lytton, a brother, plays an unusual game of tennis and pursues a most rigorous vegetarianism. Mrs. Neville Lytton's toy dogs take all the blues at the shows in London. Lady Constance Lytton, a sister, went to jail rather than alter her opinions on suffrage. And Lady Lytton, says the Sketch, "is extremely beautiful."

TELLS JUDGE OF FINDING "OTHER WOMAN" IN HOME

Returning to her apartment five or six years ago, Mrs. Clara Trams, now living at 840 Lyle avenue, found Otto Trams with "another woman," she told Judge Oscar M. Torrison in the Circuit court yesterday.

"My husband yelled, 'Get out of here,'" said Mrs. Trams. "I looked again to see if he really meant it and found out he did. He threatened me with a revolver and threw me out."

The other woman, Mrs. Trams said, was Mrs. Minnie Bayles. The latter's husband, Samuel Thomas Bayles, corroborated the testimony of Mrs. Trams regarding his wife, and said he had obtained a divorce from her eighteen months ago, naming Trams.

Judge Torrison indicated that he would grant Mrs. Trams a divorce.

Fort Sheridan Hospital Forced to Lay Off Men

The army hospital at Fort Sheridan has been forced to lay off most of its mechanical force owing to lack of funds. Of fifteen electricians all except three have been dropped, and the number of plumbers, steamfitters and painters has been cut in five. Only six of the thirty carpenters have been retained and the number of laborers has been cut one-half. The fire department will also be reduced.

I, M. MAC LANE'S EPIGRAMS FAIL IN POLICE COURT

"Mary MacLane," called the voice of the bailiff in the Harrison street court yesterday. From a row of stooped, fidgeting forms shuffled a figure beneath a feathered hat that cast its shadows over a silken mandarin coat.

"It is I, Mary MacLane," she whispered.

Yes, it was Mary MacLane—whose epigrammatical brain and writing had won her fame, who had starred on the screen in "Men Who Have Made Love to Me."

Miss MacLane was arrested Friday night at her apartment, 420 Wrightwood avenue. Mme. Alla Ripley, a modiste, charged she had failed to return gowns, hats, and furs borrowed for her appearance in the movies.

"If I tried to think epigrams about this place; the ride in the wagon, or the cloisterlike detention home, I'm afraid I'd faint on this warm day," Mary replied to a questioner when she learned her case had been continued to Aug. 12 at the request of her lawyer.

Find Two Safety Deposit Boxes in Open Field

The discovery of two safety deposit boxes in an open field near Sycamore, yesterday morning, caused officials of the De Kalb county seat to send wires to various cities in an attempt to locate their origin.

The boxes are No. 72 and 73, the latter carrying also a brass plate with the name "Anton Arnt." No other marks were found and, although the vicinity was searched by officers, no papers of value were discovered. The boxes were of regulation bank size, and were evidently left on the road some time Friday night. The Chicago city directory gives no "Anton Arnt" as resident here.

YANK TELLS OF "HARDBOILED" PRISON STUFF

Seized on Leave, His Pay Stopped, and Deprived of His Rank.

Corroborative of the charges of cruelty to American army prisoners in American prison camps in France is the letter appearing below. It is written by Dr. L. A. Beard, president of the Ogle county, Ill., tuberculosis sanitarium, concerning the experience of a former Polo boy, who, after his release from the army, went back to his present home in Sioux Falls, S. D. The letter, addressed to THE TRIBUNE from Polo is as follows:

"Clifford F. Smith, a former Polo boy, was here on his way home and astounded me with his stories. It seems that a visit to Paris was reserved to the commissioned men and no others were permitted to visit Paris on his leave of absence. This was the universal ambition of every man who was in the army and Smith, like many others after the armistice was signed and he was given a few days off, went into Paris.

Stripped of Rank—Pay Stopped.

"He had bought a few things for his mother and was picked up by a M. P. man, court martialed, reduced in rank—he was either corporal or sergeant—his pay stopped and sentenced to prison. Smith had been in an engineers regiment and had been doing plumbing in refitting a large chateau into a modern hospital and had charge of about twenty-one men all the time he was there.

"He said that all of their money was taken from them. Most of it was kept. They had no beds, no chance for a bath. Poor food, nothing but their hands to eat with, and no remedies if they were sick. He told of one man who had a picture of his mother in his pocket and the officer, taking it out, said 'What damn —— is this the picture of?'

"The man replied, 'Why, that is a picture of my mother,' whereupon the officer tore the picture into scraps and threw them into his face.

Inspector Sent to Prison.

"After he had about three months of this, and about seventy-five were coming in every day, about seventy-five would be discharged daily. When these men reached their commands or ranks they would complain to their officers. The matter was reported to headquarters and the inspector was sent to the prison.

"The boys were lined up and told to tell their story. It resulted in a court martial of the officers of the prison. Smith said he was in attendance at the court martial at Tours for nine weeks and the sergeants got from a year up at Fort Leavenworth and the commander ten years.

"One thing that made a man furious to hear him tell of was that the men of the camp were lined up for inspection often and held at strict attention for fifteen minutes to forty-five. The least waver or faltering was punished by beating the men in an unmerciful manner.

Restored to Rank.

"The clipping inclosed tells of Smith going back to business and shows the character of man that Smith is. Every word that he will tell you is truthful.

"After the court martial he was restored to former rank, etc. His discharge removed all taint of arrest or infraction of orders. I think that Loy Maloney will recall Clifford Smith."

BONDS FOR "BIG BILL" HAYWOOD ARE ACCEPTED

After several months of waiting, William (Big Bill) Haywood, secretary of the I. W. W., yesterday learned that bonds for his release from the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., have been accepted in Chicago. He probably will obtain his liberty tomorrow, pending hearings on appeals taken by the ninety-three I. W. W. convicted last year before Judge Landis.

The bonds for the release of Haywood include $10,330 in cash, war savings stamps and Liberty bonds, real estate valued at $6,000, scheduled by Mary Marcy, a journalist living at 5365 Bowmanville avenue, and property valued at $30,000 offered by William Bross Lloyd, millionaire Socialist.

RELEASE DUE TODAY.

Leavenworth, Kas., July 26.—William D. Haywood, Ralph Chaplin, and Francis Miller, three of the ninety-three I. W. W.'s sent to the federal prison in 1918, will be released on Sunday, if the papers ordering their release are not delayed, it was said this afternoon. Clyde Hough, another I. W. W., was released this afternoon. He said he intended going direct to Chicago. Hough was granted an appeal recently.

Uncle Thinks Jail Term Will Do Nephew Good

His uncle thinks it will be a good thing for Dr. Ernest Kline, 26 years old, of 1641 West Roosevelt road, to stay in jail a few days, so yesterday he refused to furnish bonds for his release, pending a hearing Aug. 1 of three charges of operating a confidence game lodged against the prisoner. The uncle is Eich Wecker, president of the Wecker Furniture company of 1437 Milwaukee avenue. Kline was arraigned before Judge Irwin. R. Hazen in the Maxwell street court charged with having passed several bogus checks on Roosevelt road merchants and business men aggregating $200.

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST

The official forecast for today and tomorrow and yesterday's table of records follow:

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS ARE SAVED ANNUALLY BY THRIFTY HOUSEWIVES WHO BUY FROM TRIBUNE ADS.

YOU Can Earn $500.00 to $2000.00 a month Profit

Here is a real opportunity for a man with $1,850 to $2,500 and average common sense and industry to make big profits in a new business.

We want men to open up Local Bakeries of the U. S. System of Bakeries everywhere. We will establish such men in business. We will finance them in this new business of making, baking and selling the one staple food of all mankind—bread—in a unique, original, modern, sanitary, appetizing, commercially successful manner. You can own and operate a U. S. System Local Bakery and make a profit of from $500 to $2,000 a month.

Or, what is better still, operate a chain of these local U. S. System Bakeries in one large city or in as many different towns as you wish, employing managers for each one, and increase your profits accordingly. Invest in one for a beginning—it will finance the establishment of others.

Volume Business—Cash Sales—No Deliveries

This is one of the very few lines of business in which manufacturing, advertising and selling are all in one unit. From the very first day of opening, a profitable business is yours. The U. S. Self-Advertising Revolving Oven, placed in your display window, just pulls people in. It has a glass front. Every passerby can see the bread baking. The big loaves, turning to a golden brown, attract crowds. They create a strong desire to purchase. The crowds stop, look, enter, buy—the high quality, appetizing flavor of "Bread for the Nation" brings them back daily for more.

This Self-Advertising Revolving U.S. Oven Brings Crowds To Your Store

Only Small Investment Needed—Part May Be Taken From Profits

The franchise to operate one or more of these local bakeries is granted only after the applicant has fully satisfied us that he is the best man available in that territory. He need not be a practical baker or technical expert—merely a business man with ordinary "horse-sense," capable of visualizing the unusual opportunity now calling to him.

To those who acquire our valuable franchise we furnish complete equipment—plan of operation and everything necessary to unlock the door and begin a profitable, self-advertising business that at once marks the lucky possessor as a progressive business man.

The total investment required for a one-oven bakery establishment, complete, with a capacity of about 1,000 loaves daily, is $3,750—for a two-oven establishment, complete, with a capacity of about 2,000 loaves daily, $5,000.

If you are the man we seek for your territory—if you have $1,850 to $2,500 with which to start in business, we have a mighty helpful plan whereby you may meet the balance of the investment out of the profits of your business.

The volume of business is great in comparison with the capital invested—you turn your money over a great many times every year.

Four Special Profit Earning Features

Self-Advertising U. S. Revolving Oven Attractive, gas heated, electrically operated, Self-Advertising. Placed in your store window. Bread baked in sight of admiring crowds. Creates a desire to buy. Each batch its own best ad.

Exclusive U. S. Bread Recipe Furnishes the foundation for a wholesome, nourishing, appetizing loaf of "Bread for the Nation"—a sensational repeater.

U. S. Superior Dough Mixer Exclusive U. S. feature. Distinct departure from any of the small batch mixers now in use. Saves time. Fullest development of gluten. Makes stiffer dough and whiter, lighter loaf.

U. S. Service Department Experts in commercial baking and business management. Always at your command—without cost—to advise and co-operate for your greater success.

TAX SUITS FOR DELINQUENTS ARE PILING UP

Ten Aids of Hoyne Are Making Collection Drive.

Tax suits for delinquents are piling up in the Circuit court, twenty-five having been started yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Michael F. Sullivan, who, with nine assistants, represent State's Attorney Hoyne in his tax collection drive.

The docketing of cases against personal property delinquents will be followed by action against individuals, firms and corporations in arrears for real estate taxes—some of them four or five years. County Treasurer Harry R. Gibbons is supplying the data.

New Suits.

The docket yesterday showed the following new suits, together with the amounts alleged to be in arrears for personal taxes:

Cooke Brewing company	$3,201
Federal Huber company	3,326
Wilson Novelty Works	1,704
R. W. Stewart	1,156
A. J. Lichstern	2,226
George Berry	3,872
Cecil E. Bryan	1,108
L. Gould & Co.	8,564
James Davis	1,062
Charles Emerich & Co.	3,013
Glendear S. Birmingham	6,882
W. C. Grey	1,230
J. E. Rustman, administrator estate E. Rustman	1,256
Mandarin Inn company	1,062
Keeley Brewing company	5,766
E. Simon company	2,622
American Extract company	1,007
Chicago Cold Storage Warehouse company	2,260

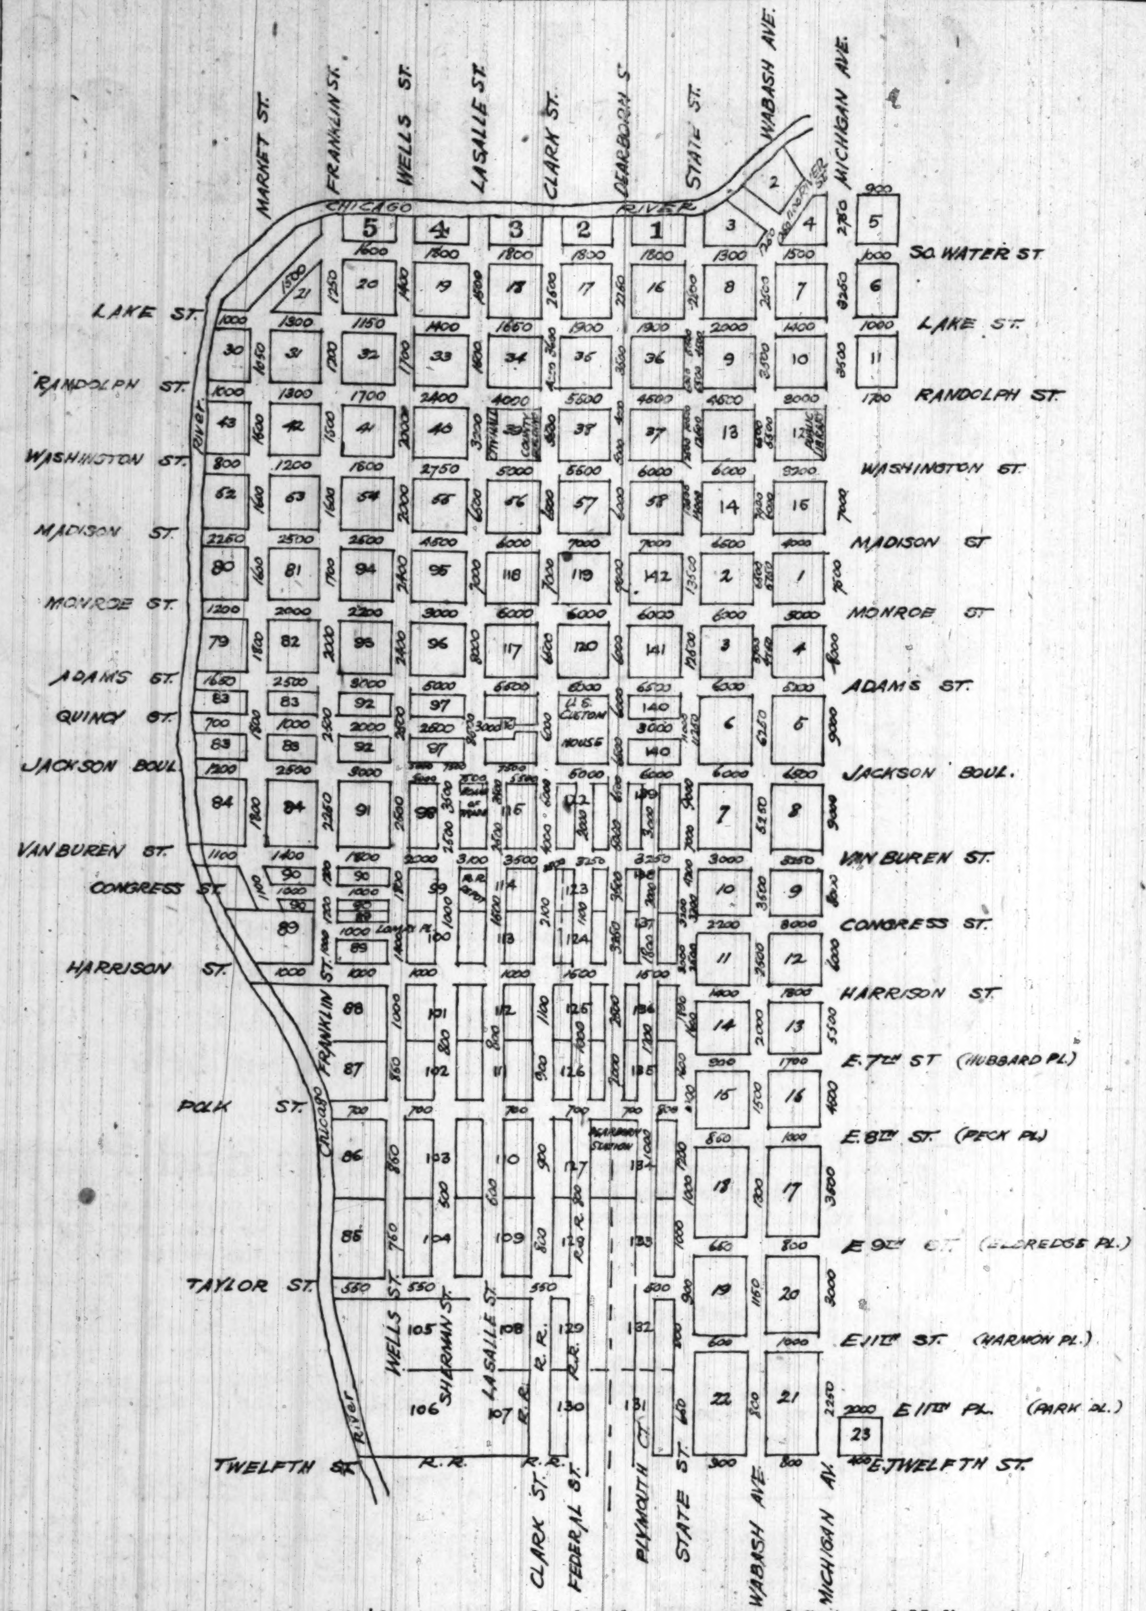
Special Notice.

The board of county commissioners, under a recently enacted law, will stand the expense of sending special delivery notices to delinquents and these are said to number 300,000, the cost being 20 cents a letter. In the end the county is expected to get this $60,000 back, together with costs of all suits begun. These costs will be added to the amount of judgment entered against delinquents.

Aug. 11 is the date fixed for the sale of real estate throughout the county upon which the 1918 taxes have not been paid, but this year the members of the "tax shark alliance" will find that Treasurer Gibbons, as county collector, has thrown a monkey wrench into any plans which they may have formulated. A new provision of the law authorizes the collector to mail registered notices to all delinquents. Mailing of these notices will begin tomorrow and the law compels the collector to have made all sales by Nov. 1. However, only one or two pieces of property will be offered for sale on the first day and thus the tax sharks will be unable to pick them off in considerable parcels.

THERE'S BILLIONS IN IT!

Realty Values in the Loop and Surrounding Vicinity Fixed by Board of Assessors.



Real estate values running into many millions of dollars have been fixed by the board of assessors for that part of Chicago bounded on the south by Twelfth street, the east by Michigan avenue, and the north and west by the river. The figures are for 1919 and are for full valuation, the tax levy, as extended by the assessors, being on a third valuation.

The plat prepared by the assessors shows valuations within the described district running all the way from $300 at Michigan and Wabash avenues to $14,000, the latter being the State street frontage of the northeast corner of State and Madison streets.

Marshall Field & Co.'s State street frontage is set down by the assessors at a valuation of $14,000 a front foot.

The figures on the map beside each block show the value per front foot. The figures within the squares are the block numbers on the assessment rolls.

PROFIT SHARING CONCERN HALED BEFORE COURT

Minority Stockholders in Mail Order Syndicate Seek Accounting.

War has broken out between the stockholders of the American Merchants' Syndicate, a Chicago mail order merchandising concern incorporated in Nebraska, the capital stock of which, beginning at $50,000 in 1910, jumped by leaps and bounds to $10,000,000, divided into 10,000 shares of common stock at $10 a share and 990,000 shares of preferred at the same par value.

The tangled skein was taken before Judge Pinckney yesterday with the request he unravel it. He didn't do it. Instead he appointed Jacob Goldman receiver upon the request of Attorneys Allen, Ward & Myers, representing a group of minority stockholders, some of whom talk of "blue sky" manipulation.

John Baskerville, of E. H. Moore & Co., Otis building, is the president of the syndicate.

Old Grange Plan Used.

The ostensible business of the concern is to buy merchandise and sell to stockholders, dividing the profits—something on the order of the old time grange idea. It is charged Baskerville, together with T. F. Golden, C. J. Hanley, Henry Karsch, and W. S. Traenkle, as directors, has profited by hundreds of thousands of dollars, and that the firm of Moore & Co., Moore being deceased, has absorbed the money or a great part of it. Furthermore, it is alleged Baskerville is all there is to Moore & Co.

Stock in the syndicate has been sold in a number of state in the middle west, and about thirty plaintiffs, men and women, want to know what they are going to get for their investment. The assertion is made in the bill of complaint that Baskerville has "caused the corporation to issue to him a large number of shares of the preferred stock of said company in the approximate amount of $1,394,950, and that the said John Baskerville has at no time paid the said corporation a valid consideration for said stock." An additional charge is made that Baskerville issued common and preferred stock to unknown persons without valid consideration.

Waste of Assets Charged.

Farther along in the voluminous bill is the allegation that he has wasted assets, has absented himself from duty, and that he has paid himself $1,000 a month. Also, the bills sets up that many orders for goods have not been filled and, in short, that the business is a losing game. Then, too, it is charged that Baskerville accommodated certain friends with large sums of money belonging to the corporation and a return of these advances is demanded.

The books of the concern have been kept "under cover," it is charged. It is argued the concern has been losing from $25,000 to about $100,000 annually.

Dividends have been declared, but it is charged that they were fraudulent. An equity in real estate amounting to $100,000 is said to comprise the company's assets, and it is charged an attempt was about to be made to convert this into cash.

PUBLIC MOVES TO PUT DE VRY BACK IN ZOO JOB

If public sentiment can place Cy De Vry back in the job he has held for thirty-one years, director of Lincoln park zoo, he will be leading his famed chimpanzees among the kiddies within a week. The Lincoln park board may not want him there, but the public, especially the zoo patrons, apparently does.

J. V. Piazza, "the banana king," telephoned yesterday that he was circulating a petition among South Water street commission men for Cy's reinstatement and had yet to hear a refusal to sign. The Lion club, the Red Men, and numerous women and children have joined the Elks in obtaining signatures to a petition to the park commissioners asking them to reconsider their sentence of dismissal passed on Cy.

The Elks are having 500 copies of their petition printed, and plan to distribute copies to all who ask for them. They will be delivered Monday afternoon.

ALIENS PAY $1 EACH YEAR THEY LIVED IN U. S.

Six men arraigned before Judge Hazin yesterday were seemingly so indifferent to the fact that they were not citizens that the jurist's wrath was aroused and he fined them $1 and costs for each year they have resided in this country. The charge against them was gambling. A seventh man, who declared that it "was too much trouble" to take out his second papers, was fined similarly.

The sextet are Sam Kochnek, Andrew Worvnshuk, Philip Condochuk, William Buttman, John Holuke and Alfred Telonek, all of 644 Liberty street. Kochnek paid $6 fine and $18 costs, while the rest each paidi $7 as a fine and $21 costs. They were arrested Friday night at 742 S. Halsted street.

Chicago Band to Play for Audience of Bathers

Weil's Chicago band will concertize before an audience garbed in bathing suits this afternoon at West End park, south of the Fifty-first street beach. The concert is for the benefit of residents of the Sixth ward and will be the eighth community gathering in the plan of the Chicago Band association to visit every ward in the city this summer. There are eight numbers on the program, the first being rendered at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Charles Robbins is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements.

WHAT CAUSES UNREST, BEER OR BOLSHEVISM?

Labor Leaders Split Over Now Popular Controversy.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

"What causes unrest?" seems to have backed off the boards these days that other popular favorite, "Who won the war?" One answer conservative labor leaders appear agreed upon is that "industrial revolutionaries," reds, pinks, violets, or mauves have only a sporadic following. Beer is quite as great a factor as bolshevism, they declare, and even over prohibition their theories are split. Some hold with Samuel Gompers that much discontent is caused by abolition of the workingman's glass; others count the Demon Rum out as a brewer of trouble. But one and all they harp on high cost.

One rumor they knocked on the head yesterday was that the Federal union, into which the Crane company and International Harvester strikers are being organized, is an offshoot of the "one big union" idea, which was at the basis of Canada's sympathetic strike. They said that in organizing a new plant it is quite a general procedure for the American Federation of Labor to effect a preliminary organization. This goes under the name of Federal union—it is a sort of "holding concern." After the workers are signed up they are then sorted out and organized according to crafts in regular unions. The unskilled and unclassified remain as the Federal union.

Condemn "Mystery Strikes."

But the process of calling the workers out without registering any demands or grievances in a "mystery strike" of the Crane company and Harvester type, is something new, and the conservatives say it is counter to trades union principles.

Ald. Thomas Byrne, for twenty-seven years a labor leader and union organizer, analyzed the situation yesterday.

"The problem confronting the country," he said, "is to devise some way of getting the cost of living down and then placing wages on a fair and equitable level. I believe high cost of living, which is quite different from high prices, is a fundamental trouble. The worker sees his wages higher, but he finds himself unable to save anything out of the higher schedules. Naturally he gets restless. He sees where some group like the bricklayers, for example, is getting a dollar an hour, and he says he ought to get as much. But he doesn't know that the bricklayer is able to work only about 155 days a year, while the other fellow can put in a full year's work.

Got to Stop Somewhere.

"This continuous pushing up of prices and wages has got to stop somewhere—any fool can see that—and the great need is for some instrumentality that will effect some sort of balance between what a man is able to earn and what he has to pay to live. In the long run all this stuff reverts to the workingman and the high collar worker in the form of higher costs—for the consumer pays. Readjustments are vital—everybody will concede that—but some way it needs revising to bring about equilibrium. The community has got to trim ship, that's all. Too much of the present unrest is a simple case of robbing Peter to pay Paul, and vice versa.

"Another thing, industrial establishments all over ought to establish some sort of works committee that will enable any worker to take any grievance he may have right up to headquarters. I know the harvester company has such a system and it doesn't seem to have stopped a walkout at some plants, but here's a point worth considering: the plant where the trouble started did not have the works committee system. Another plant where the system was established had a one day walkout, the men going back and putting the wage question up to the committee.

Big Union Idea Not Popular.

"This Federal union organization has nothing to do with the one big union stuff which some tried to pull in Canada. The one big union would never work here. It's a dead duck. Years ago it was tried out in Pennsylvania. The railroads were organized under one big union, but it didn't last. The engineers wouldn't stand for letting the roundhouse oilers and wipers and the section gangs having any voice over them. They split into groups; the result was the formation of the regular brotherhood unions. No skilled mechanic is going to stand for the idea of letting the unskilled laborer, who is largest in numbers, run the craftsman's affairs. Anybody who fancies American trade unionism is traveling in that direction has bunions on the brain. It's against human nature.

"I think the high cost of living is a vital trouble, but I don't think prohibition has anything to do with it. If it had, why didn't similar conditions arise in dry states long ago?

"It's hard to put your finger on the real cause. The four years of war was a strain on everybody. Now there's a relaxing, a tendency to slow up, maybe, and take things a bit easy. So much water has gone under the wheel that the loss of a job looks like rather a small thing.

"We are seeing one new spectacle, that of men walking out without placing any demands or complaints before the employing company. It's a strike simply to organize, and it is not in keeping with the recognized trades-union priciples that the strike should be the last resort—to be used only after efforts to get an adjustment have failed."

As to any success the ultra-extremists are meeting in Chicago, it was pointed out by labor leaders that Sunday was advertized as the time for a great "reds'" gathering on the west side. But it was nipped by a July frost. A corporal's guard showed up, while the workers took their day's outing in the city parks instead.

Hinky Dink Talks.

Ald. Michael Kenna, who knows the thought processes of the laboringman through long experience at his Workingman's Exchange, which July 1 put on the necrology roster, gave a few interesting views:

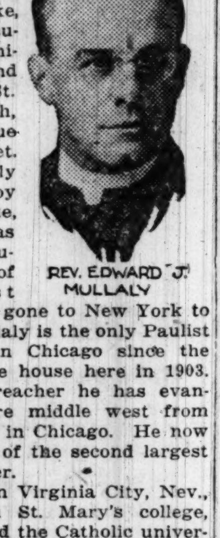
"It's funny to hear men like the postal clerks and the workingmen say they want a 'free country,'" he said. "They keep harping on it—you'd think, behind the blind, a bunch of Russians were talking. But they don't mean it that way—they aren't bullsheviks. They say they've been helping on Liberty bonds, Red Cross, Salvation Army, Y. M. C. A., all for freedom, and the minute the war's over Uncle Sam takes away their freedom to drink a glass of beer. You see, first the drys peddled sob stuff over prohibition and slammed it on a morality basis. When that didn't land them anything, they put it on an economic argument and said how much money a drinker could save by going without.

Beer More than Bull.

"But when the camel blew in the issue took another slant, and now the common view I hear is that the men look at it as an infringement of their freedom. So they are discontented. Unrest? Beer has more to do with it than bull. These 2.75 bolshevists haven't enough kick to do any damage, not if they lived on raisins."

One labor insider spoke of the Crane company strike. "It came after July 1," he said darkly. "Before that the organizers hadn't a chance with the common workingman. They couldn't be stirred up in a mass. July 1 brought discontent, and, beerless, the workers were easy meat for the organizers."

FATHER MULLALY NAMED SUPERIOR OF THE PAULISTS



REV. EDWARD J. MULLALY

The Rev. Edward J. Mullaly, C. S. P., was appointed yesterday afternoon by Archbishop Mundelein to succeed the Rev. Thomas F. Burke, C. S. P., as superior of the Chicago Paulists and rector of Old St. Mary's church, Wabash avenue and Ninth street.

Father Mullaly was nominated by Father Burke, who recently has been elected Superior General of the Paulist Fathers and has gone to New York to live. Father Mullaly is the only Paulist who has been in Chicago since the foundation of the house here in 1903. As a mission preacher he has evangelized the entire middle west from his headquarters in Chicago. He now takes possession of the second largest house of the order.

He was born in Virginia City, Nev., and educated in St. Mary's college, Oakland, Cal., and the Catholic university, Washington, D. C. He was ordained at Baltimore in 1903 by Cardinal Gibbons.

CARBON-O

THE VALVE SEAT PISTON RINGS

THE ONLY PISTON RING MADE THAT HOLDS COMPRESSION AND PREVENTS OIL PUMPING IN A WORN RING GROOVE

No. B—Piston Rings do not leak through the cut in the Ring nor past the outside, but leak in behind the ring. If the ring fills the ring groove it cannot leak.

No. B—A motor that has run 5,000 to 10,000 miles will show as high as 1-32 of an inch wear in the ring Grooves. One thirty-second of an inch wear all around a 3½-inch piston is equal in loss of power to running with the priming cups open.

No. A—Shows how the compression leaks past the ring, because it does not fill the ring Groove. This is just as true of a new ring as of an old one.

No. C—Shows how the inside half of a CARBON-O ring, being cut on a bevel, acts as a wedge pressing against the top side of the ring groove and holding D, the outside half, against the wall of the cylinder and pressing it down against the bottom side of the Ring Groove, absolutely preventing oil pumping or loss of compression.

CARBON-O rings have sufficient spring to eliminate considerable piston slap in badly worn cylinders.

In cars that have run 5,000 miles do not use more than two CARBON-O rings, but on oil pumpers it is well to put in a complete set and fit them to the cylinder carefully.

CARBON-O rings will prevent oil pumping when the ring grooves are worn 1-32 of an inch oversize.

The only ring on the market that will prevent oil pumping and hold compression in a worn ring groove in automobile, gas engine or tractor.

OUR GUARANTEE

If, after using a set of CARBON-O piston rings 30 days, you are in any way dissatisfied, you may return the rings and we will refund not only the cost of the rings, but a reasonable amount of the cost of installing them. You are to be the judge. Our Motto: "Your money's worth or your money back."

Dealers and Garage Men, our proposition will interest you. Call or write.

"Industrial Peace—with JUSTICE —Founded on a Square Deal to All"

You owe it to yourself to become a member of the League for Industrial Justice for the good it can accomplish. Read its principles and purposes, as a fair minded man or woman. We ALL need the aid, assistance and co-operation of each other. Mail the enrollment coupon below today.

1:—The true interest of both Employers and Employees rests in mutual understanding and closer relations of genuine co-operation.

2:—The time has come to raise the status of the laborer from that of a wage-earner to a partner in the business. It must be generally recognized that all men who work together are in a real sense partners.

3:—The large element of Alien Labor in American industry, which prior to the war numbered nine million, must be assimilated and made loyal to American Institutions. The Anarchists and fanatical followers of the red flag shall find no opportunity of undermining American Freedom by the criminal and poisonous dissemination of their disloyal propaganda.

4:—It is the proper function and duty of the government to provide the ways and means of insuring a just and peaceful conduct of industry. Not government ownership but government regulation, within proper limits, is the need for the present industrial situation.

5:—We must complete the labors of the founders of our Republic by adding the Constitution of Industry to the Constitution of the United States, in the same spirit that has made and preserved us as a Nation.

6:—We must oppose Socialism and Bolshevism in every form as contrary to the spirit and purpose of our Republic and as injurious to the best interests of the workingmen. To do this effectively we must establish the antidote for Socialism—Private Enterprise founded upon Justice.

7:—We must establish the principle of Justice to Women in industry and to see that women are compensated upon the same basis as men where they perform like services.

Aims and Purposes

The aims, objects and purposes of this League are to bring within its fold all those who favor the purposes for which it stands, and to secure the names and addresses of all men and women who would like to become members of this League.

To bring home to all citizens a recognition of the fact that the true interest of the PUBLIC and both employers and employees rests in mutual understanding and genuine co-operation; that all men who work together are in a real sense partners. To uphold at all times the Constitution of the United States of America.

True Interest of Public Employers and Employees

Any method for the solution of the problems of our best industrial welfare must be founded upon justice and a square deal to all of the elements involved. The average American citizen is so fundamentally fair-minded and is so devoted to the practice of fair play that no considerable part of our population can be won to the endorsement of any program that is not just. Private enterprise must adjust itself to the basis of the square deal and then go triumphantly forward to greater rewards than have ever come in the past.

Just as the people joined hands in the formation of our National Constitution, "in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity," it is now necessary that we again join hands for the purpose of securing the prosperity and regeneration of American business.

In this new Constitution of Industry will be set forth the organic principles that must govern the relations that should exist between employers, employees and the public. The founders of the League for Industrial Justice believe that under this law administrative officers, equally representative of employers and employees, will determine what is the proper proportion of stock which should be set aside for the wage-earners, subject to purchase by them alone, upon favorable terms, and to the end that the wage-earners may become co-owners as well as co-workers in the industries. It is entirely possible to detrmine what this proportion should be, and by such provision the path will be freely opened to the obtaining of industrial justice, and sure knowledge of this fact will rest in the minds of the wage-earners. There would be no disturbance of existing methods for the payment of wages, and to insure a continuance of the American standard of living, a living and wholesome wage must be paid.

Through the unions the wage scale should be regulated equitably and independently of any profits in which the workers may share.

We ask the co-operation and support of ALL for the enactment into law of the plan, "Industrial Peace with Justice," which, briefly stated, has for its object the establishment of a genuine comprehensive profit-sharing plan in industry and a National Law making such plan applicable to the railroads and large interstate corporations, with a National Commission representing equally both employers and employees, to determine what will be a fair proportion of the stock to be set aside for the wage-earners collectively, so that they can share in the profits and become co-owners, as well as co-workers, in the business of their employers, or similar plan having a like object. Send your name today, NOW.

BUSINESS BOOMS DESPITE RECORD VACATION RUSH

Dun's Review of Chicago Trade, published by R. G. Dun & Co., says:

"Records for retail distribution of merchandise made in one week have repeatedly been set aside by the figures of the next in the astonishing development of business activity in 1919, and the seven day period now closing is no exception to this recital of progressive gains. This continued expansion of trade is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that at no other time in five years has there been such a rush of people to vacation grounds. The release from wartime restraint, from economy imposed by necessity or patriotism, and from difficulties of transportation is most noticeable in this exodus to pleasure resorts.

"New advance in the prices of textiles have failed to check buying. On the contrary, there is observed a disposition on the part of some merchants to order more goods than they really need, evidently with the idea that when the orders are scaled down by allotment they may be able to obtain what they require. This is not regarded as a healthy development.

"The paralysis of building caused by the lockout of the trades has been accentuated by the refusal of lumber dealers to sell materials, thus shutting off any operations that might have been continued by those independent of the conflict between the large contractors and the unions.

"Wholesale orders and distribution are ahead of last year and there is growing difficulty in obtaining goods despite the fact that Chicago wholesale stocks are among the largest in the country. Merchants are in the city markets in large numbers. Collections are uniformly good."

HAY AND STRAW

Only 11 cars of timothy were in yesterday, of which 7 cars were new and sold at $24.00@32.00. The demand for both old and new is good. Old No. 1 timothy, $36.00@37.00; No. 2 timothy and No. 1 clover mixed, $32.00@34.00, and No. 3 timothy, $27.00@31.00. There was 1 car southwestern prairie hay in with no other arrival reported. The southwestern was quoted at $25.00@28.00 and Illinois $16.00@21.00. Some inquiry for straw with no arrivals.

CHICAGO CURB QUOTATIONS

Sugar stocks continue to be the feature of the local curb market, Holland-St. Louis advancing some two points upon the announcement of its being listed on the Chicago stock exchange. Stock changed hands at 21⅝. Columbia Sugar was also in strong demand at 18½, with stock offered at 20. Michigan advanced to sales at 12⅛. At the close stock was offered at 12¼, with bids of 12. Utah-Idaho was unchanged at 7½ to 8¼.

Briscoe Motor monopolized the trading in the motor shares, sales being made as high as 52. At the close 50 was bid, with little stock offered around current quotations. The preferred was wanted at 81, with offerings at 83. National Motors was traded in at 30. This price was bid at the close, with stock offered at 31. Paige-Detroit was steady at 39 to 40 and Reo Motor Car at 92½ to 30½. Hup was quoted 12 to 13. Continental Motors advanced to 12½ on rumors of extra dividends, and that same would be taken over by the General Motors corporation.

In the rubber group Firestone Tire and Rubber was the leader, advancing to 180, but reacted at the close to 175 bid, offered at 179. Miller sold as high as 222, but eased off at the close to 215 bid, offered at 225. Goodyear common was quiet at 325 to 350. The preferred issues were in good demand, however, the first preferred at 106¾ to 107½ and the second preferred at 106½ to 108½, ex-dividend. Fisk reacted to sales at 45, but closed stronger at 47 to 49.

Butler Brothers was quiet at 239 to 242, ex-dividend. Kellogg was neglected at 225 to 230. Gossard Corset common was unchanged at 69 to 71 and Linderman Steel at 18 to 20.

In the implement list Avery common advanced to sales at 120, closing at 118 bid, with no stock offered. The preferred was quoted 99½ to 101. Emerson Brantingham common was traded in at 36, the preferred was quoted 96 to 99. Moline Plow preferred was neglected at 96½ to 97½. Some inquiry existed for American Fork and Hoe common around 114. Stock was offered at 122.

GRAIN SHIPPERS COMPLAIN OF CAR SHORTAGE

Grain shippers in central Illinois are sending in their usual complaints about the scarcity of cars to move wheat. Many elevators are said to be full of grain. Farmers' deliveries have increased materially within the last few weeks and the smaller roads as usual are unable to furnish cars, and the government is coming to their relief and will give a sufficient number of box cars in the near future to move the grain.

The rush of wheat has been greater than in recent years because of the increased crop, while other grains, with the exception of oats, barley, and rye, are moving in reduced volume, as compared with the average. The extent of the demand for cars and the movement of grain is shown by loadings on the Illinois Central, which brought in 16 per cent of the grain delivered at Chicago last week. On Friday it had 1,100 cars at elevators, orders for 650 cars, with 520 cars available, and 320 cars loaded. An official of the road said there is a shortage in spots.

The government is to give the Illinois Central 2,000 new box cars that were built months ago and have been held on side tracks. There are said to be 6,000 of these cars at Chicago terminals, which are being stenciled and divided among the various roads. Repair shops are being worked to capacity to make every car available for use.

Grain receipts at Chicago last week were 8,238,000 bu, of which 3,476,000 bu were wheat, the largest run at this time in recent years, and 3,010,000 bu were oats, far above the average, while the deliveries of corn were only 985,000 bu, materially under the average. Despite the big movement of wheat, which increased 2,148,000 bu in a week, the gain over last year was only 356,000 bu, and the total receipts of all grains increased 2,632,000 bu, or 40 per cent, for the week, but were 432,000 bu, or 5 per cent, short of last year's and 1,472,000 bu, or 21.6 per cent, in excess of the five year average.

Make money making bread

The two things people most need are money and bread. There's a way to make both at once.

This advertisement is intended for the man who wants to get into a decent, clean, wholesome business, where he can make good profit for himself and good bread for other folks. And it's a business which does not require a large amount of capital.

We sell the equipment for a Day Time baking establishment; makes fresh bread every hour: good bread perfectly baked in a special oven of our own designing. The bread is placed on a slowly revolving drum; it bakes in about 40 minutes.

Your housekeeper customer can get it fresh from the oven at any hour of the day. You'll find a lot of them who want it that way.

The oven bakes all sorts of bread or rolls equally well.

Our plan includes the furnishing of a complete outfit; ovens, bread mixer, cabinets for the bread to "rise" in, counters, 2 cash registers; the entire equipment for a business of 1600 loaves a day.

It's a real way to make a business that's profitable to you and your customers; they get the best bread they ever ate, fresh from the oven; you get the money for it.

We want to hear from any man who is interested. Better do it at once; there will be a lot of others.

BUNTE BROTHERS
PREFERRED STOCK
Tax Exempt in Illinois

The candy business—always a consistent money maker with a record remarkably free from failure—is today enjoying unparalleled prosperity. Prohibition has given great stimulus to the naturally increasing consumption of sweets. It is estimated that approximately a billion dollars was spent by the American public for candy during the year 1918. Altogether no other industry enjoys a brighter outlook for continued high earnings. Bunte Brothers are one of the leaders in this field. Bunte Brothers Preferred 7% Cumulative stock is a high-grade, seasoned issue, with liberal sinking fund and retiring provisions. Safety of principal, coupled with a liberal interest yield, make the preferred shares of this concern an unusually sound and attractive investment. Write for particulars.

STORM FORECAST IN THE CORN BELT BRINGS SELLING

Rye and Barley Climb Higher on Export Buying.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Excitement and higher prices for rye and barley on export buying and prospects of a large business drew attention of traders from the weather and corn situation. There was little in the corn and oats markets other than watching the weather and the lighter trading and evening up for the week. Closings were at gains of 3@4c on rye and 4@6½c on barley. Corn finished irregular with July ⅛c lower, September ⅛c lower and December ½c higher. Oats were up ⅛@⅜c.

Outside corn markets were slightly higher and oats unsettled, Kansas City losing ¼c, while St. Louis gained ¼@⅜c. Minneapolis oats were unchanged to ⅝c higher, and Winnipeg ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower. Wheat at Winnipeg closed 1c higher on December. Beneficial rains were reported over the three western provinces which induced selling of the distant delivery, but trading was not large.

Provisions advanced and closed 40c higher on pork, 15@20c higher on lard, and unchanged to 2½c lower on short ribs.

Corn prices are 4½@5c higher than a week ago, while oats are ½@⅞c lower for the near deliveries, and ¼c higher on December. Rye is 2¼@2½c higher and barley up 8½@14½c.

Gains on pork were $1.05@1.60, lard 65@85c, and short ribs 60@95c above a week ago.

Strong Undertone in Corn.

Forecast for thunder showers over the corn belt led to scattered selling and a decline of ½c early, but the undertone was decidedly strong. There was persistent buying by commission houses that have recently been on the selling side, and the general tenor of reports from the country showed a marked change. Apprehension of damage was expressed from many states unless the drought is quickly relieved. Week end evening up made a reaction from the top, but December closed at a fair gain at $1.66⅛, while the old crop deliveries were easier, July, $1.95, and September, 1.95½.

Strong local professionals were on the buying side of oats, and a good domestic shipping demand with sales of 100,000 bu and lighter country offerings more than offset all bearish conditions, and the close was firm. July finished at 79⅞c, September at 80¼c, and December at 83c.

Cash handlers generally talked bearish, due to the liberal run of old grain, the large visible supply, and the poor export demand. Prices fluctuated rapidly within a range of about 1c, but the undertone was firm, and some change in sentiment was noted, as thrashing reports are showing great disappointment in many sections. Average yield in Indiana is said to be around 25 bu per acre.

The car situation showed no improvement, and is still very tight in parts of Illinois. Prospects of a settlement of the seaman's strike at the seaboard had some effect on sentiment. Argentine prices have advanced sharply, with September quoted at 62c. Sample values unchanged to ½c lower.

Keen Demand for Barley.

Barley advanced 3@5c in Chicago, with sales at $1.32@1.40, the latter being a new high on the crop. Demand was keen and offerings light. California bought futures here and at Minneapolis, and asked for offers of cash grain. Exporters were in the market and took 110,000 bu in all positions. Crop news bullish. Receipts, 28 cars.

A belief that Germany would be a big buyer of rye and barley in the United States as the result of negotiations for a loan in New York, combined with free buying by cash houses and export sales of 100,000 bu in the northwest, made an active and higher market, with futures 3@4c higher. No. 2 on spot sold at August price at $162.@163. Sales of 65,000 bu were made to go to store. Receipts, 21 cars.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed 3@10c higher; July and September, $6.11; October, $6.00. Winnipeg, 1@3c higher; July, $6.12; October, $5.80.

Standard Oil to List $100,000,000 Common

Further details of the financial program of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey were made known yesterday. Following the listing on the New York stock exchange of the new $100,000,000 7 per cent preferred stock, it was said that the $100,000,000 common stock also will be listed.

Prior to listing of the common stock there may be a reduction in its par value or a subdivision into shares of no par value. An amendment to be made in the company's certificate of incorporation states that either class of stock may be increased or decreased, or additional classes of stock may be created. Stockholders must exercise their option on the new preferred stock by Sept. 15.

The new preferred stock is subject to redemption at the option of the company at any time after three years from date of issue at 115 and accrued dividends.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The general belief of the trade, as expressed by many operators, is that should rains come over Sunday, corn prices might have a sharp decline, and there is disposition to buy on any good breaks. The markets have been bulled for a week and the outside trade has not followed the advance as freely as local bulls expected. Until there is something new to trade on, a comparatively small market is expected. Should corn break a recession in oats is expected.

H. T. Johnson, now a member of the Board of Trade, and formerly observer of the weather bureau, says, "The trade would save themselves many uneasy moments if they would see the daily weather conditions as they actually exist on the weather map instead of being continually biased by their market position. The principal crops will begin to show depreciation, as a rule, after fourteen days of no rainfall, the rapidity of deterioration being dependent on the wind velocity during the heated period of the day, velocities of 20 to 30 miles per hour being especially destructive. The present corn crop is now losing ground and rainfall is urgently needed to prevent serious deterioration."

Minneapolis reports that the country is offering oats freely at ½c under September for new. At Chicago the new are 1c to 1¼c under. The country is offering no corn and the movement is far below the average.

European countries buying all grain in Argentina and Japan buying wheat in Australia, the grain situation does not look as pessimistic as many of the theoretical economists claim. Argentina had a sensational advance of late and prices the world over are being brought into line.

A syndicate recently bought forty cars of hams from the government at 20c a pound. The hams were at Norfolk, Va., and it is said that they will have to be carefully treated to be marketable, and that a fair percentage may go to the fertilizing tank.

Trading in May corn at Kansas City started the season yesterday at $1.65¼@1.65⅜. Texas is looking for trading in new corn at around $1.50.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date aggregate 26,887,000 bu; corn, 145,496,000 bu, and oats, 294,250,000 bu. Last year wheat receipts were 28,828,000 bu, corn 232,885,000 bu, and oats 336,532,000 bu.

September-October corn in Buenos Aires closed Friday at $1.22½ per bu, up 1½c; wheat, 2½@3c higher, with September, $2.26 and October $2.25½. Oats, 5½c higher at 62c for September.

A leading cash oat handler expressed the belief that if the seaboard strike is settled over Sunday there may be a marked change in the attitude of eastern buyers.

One of the best posted men in the grain trade expressed wonderment at the lack of "pep" shown by corn and oats in the face of bullish news, and is asking what would happen in case something favorable for lower prices should develop.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Premiums on red winter wheat were off about ½c as the result of large offerings and a general desire of receivers to clean up over Sunday. Milling demand was less active and the bulk of the receipts was taken by elevator interests. No. 2 red, weighing 58½ lbs per bu or better brought $2.23½ for the bulk of sales, and lightweights $2.23. A car of fancy dark No. 1 hard winter was taken for seed at $2.46. Spring wheats were firm, with the dark kinds in demand. Dark hard winter at Kansas City dropped 5@11c, presumably as a result of lessened demand from the northwest due to rains in some parts of that section. Hard winters were off 1@3c and red unchanged to 1c lower. St. Louis declined ½@1c.

Demand for white corn from cereal interests continues fairly to be brisk, and prices were unchanged to ½c higher at the best figures on the crop. White at St. Louis was unchanged to 2c higher, and other kinds unchanged to 1c lower with light receipts. Peoria had 13 cars and advanced 1½@2½c, while Kansas City was unchanged to 2c higher and Milwaukee 1c higher.

Elevator interests were the best buyers of oats, receipts being 174 cars. Premiums were easier with No. 2 white ½@1c over September and No. 3 white ¼c under to ¼c over September. Sample values were unchanged to ½c lower. St. Louis was off 1c, while Kansas City was unchanged to ½c higher, Peoria unchanged, and Milwaukee ¼@½c lower. Cash prices in leading markets follow:

MINES AND OILS

The Cosden, Empire and Blackwell companies have tendered the Spencer Petroleum corporation a fund of $50,000 for the purpose of drilling a test well to a depth of 4,000 feet on the Pratt lease owned by the Spencer company. The object is to ascertain whether the deep sand struck in the adjoining Ponca City field extends into the Blackwell field.

The Marland Refining company has brought in the fourth well in a month in deep Marland sand in the South Poncia field. The well is making 5,300 barrels.

In the first six months of the current year the Arizona Commercial Mining company produced approximately 3,500,000 pounds of copper, operating at about 60 per cent of capacity. The company is still driving ahead in the development of its property at depth.

The Oklahoma Producing and Refining company has completed a well owned jointly with Pennok Oil company, on the Ingram lease, Stephens county, Tex., which is credited with an initial production of 1,200 barrels a day.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Kansas yield of winter wheat per acre, as given by the state report and wired by C. A. King & Co., of Toledo, is 13.7 bu, compared with the June estimate of 19.8 bu. On the government acreage this suggests a crop of 152,000,000 bu, or 42,000,000 bu less than the July returns, and 50,000,000 bu in excess of last year's harvest. Most of the wheat is being sold as soon as thrashed. Corn condition 79, against 75 a month ago and last year. Indicated crop 87,000,000 bu, or 11,000,000 bu more than suggested by the government July report, and compares with 45,000,000 bu harvested last year.

Av. 1911-'18	$ 9.80	$ 7.90	$ 6.75	$10.20

Never in past history was the general average price of good native beef cattle as high in Chicago as last week at $16.50, being $3.00 higher than low period of the year about five weeks ago. The unusual number of fully matured corn beeves received for this season of the year forced the average 5c above the first week of last February, the previous record. Packers, shippers, and exporters all had urgent orders for better grades of cattle.

While good beef steers averaged highest on record last week, native cows and heifers were the lowest of the year, the average price at $9.40 standing over $1.00 lower than previous week and $2.30 below the record week of last April. Quality of native she stock was poorer than usual and this fact and largest receipts of western rangers on record for so early in the season helped to cut the average price.

Practically one-fifth of last week's receipts of cattle were western rangers, most of the 14,500 received being forced marketward from the dry districts of Montana, Wyoming, and North Dakota. A large percentage of these cattle sold to farmers in the corn belt for fattening purposes. It is expected rangers will continue to come forward in large numbers.

Week's Hog Average a Record.

General average price of hogs last week at $22.20 was highest on record, standing $1.90 above three weeks ago, $4.50 higher than low week this year, and $14.50 above the eight year average for the corresponding week since 1910. Comparatively small receipts, good shipping orders, and an advancing provision market were factors favoring the market.

Closing hog trade was weak, with prices steady to 20c lower than Friday, best selling at $23.30, or 20c below the record. Week's receipts at 118,600, barring Christmas week, were smallest since last September, while the estimated average weight at 246 lbs was heaviest since that month, against 242 lbs previous week and 245 lbs a year ago.

There was practically no business transacted in cattle and sheep closing day of the week. The extreme hot weather and the fact that orders were unusually small made packers indifferent buyers.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 35,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 18,764 cattle, 33,825 hogs, and 22,387 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts 67,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs, and 100,000 sheep.

PRODUCE TRADE

Watermelons were higher, as hot weather is most favorable for trade. There were only 12 cars in and sales were at $400 to $550 per car. Cantaloupe market remains easy, with large supplies at $1.00 to $3.50 for standard crates, depending upon condition. Berries were plentiful, with little change in prices. Peaches sold readily at $3.00 to $3.50 for bushel baskets of Texas Albertas.

The potato market was firmer at $3.00 to $3.25 per 100 lbs. Receipts were 29 cars for the day and 410 for the week, against 247 cars last year.

Live fowls were 1c lower at 30½c, broilers dropped 2c and were 30c to 33c. Roosters were 1c lower at 21½c.

Fine eggs were in fair request at full prices, 42½c to 43½c for fresh firsts. Receipts for the week, 89,380 cases, or 12,000 less than the previous week and 16,350 more than last year.

Butter was taken in a moderate way, buyers being rather indifferent. Prices dropped ½c, with 92 scores at 52c. New York, Philadelphia, and Boston were unchanged from Friday, with New York 53½c to 54c for 94 scores. An active trade is on in storage butter at Chicago at 52c, which about left the holders out.

SHAFFER OIL & REFINING CO.
A COMPLETE PETROLEUM ORGANIZATION

Three informative booklets for the asking—(1) A History and Description of the Company, (2) Photographs of Properties and the Company's Large Refinery, (3) A Study of the Petroleum Industry in General, with important statistics.

Company Successful and Well Established

SHAFFER OIL & REFINING COMPANY is composed of properties which have been successful producers, refiners and distributors of petroleum and its products for years.

In 1918 these companies produced 1,545,469 barrels of crude oil from 391 wells, refined 1,374,000 barrels and marketed its output through 147 stations in 9 states of the Middle West.

The Company owns oil acreage of upwards of 137,000 acres in Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas, upon which there are now nearly 400 producing wells, a 6,000 barrel refinery at Cushing, Okla., steel tank storage capacity of 1,375,000 barrels, 4 casinghead gasoline plants, 152 miles of pipe lines, 508 steel railway tank cars, and a distributing and retailing system, marketing gasoline and 136 other petroleum products under the brand "Deep Rock."

Large and sustained annual earnings give the securities of this Company a high degree of stability.

Controlled by Large Utility Interests

THE controlling stock ownership of Shaffer Oil & Refining Company is held by Standard Gas and Electric Company, the principal holding company of the extensive electric and gas properties, operated and managed over a long period by H. M. Byllesby & Company.

The utility properties under the engineering, commercial and financial supervision of H. M. Byllesby & Company serve 460 cities and towns with upwards of 2,000,000 population in 16 states. They enjoy a widespread reputation for efficient public service, and satisfactory returns to the investor. These companies have thousands of home shareholders.

The new oil company takes its name from Mr. C. B. Shaffer, who built it up (without public offering of securities) subsequent to his discovery of the famous Cushing oil pool in Oklahoma. Mr. Shaffer and his experienced staff continue in active charge of oil operations. Mr. Shaffer is recognized as one of the most successful oil men in the United States.

The combination of interests above described assures the progressive direction of Shaffer Oil & Refining Company on a thoroughly conservative basis.

Operations Being Largely Extended

The scope of Shaffer Oil and Refining Company is now being rapidly extended. Within the past few weeks former oil production of 4,200 barrels a day has been increased 1,200 barrels a day from 4 new wells. Nineteen new wells are now drilling. Arrangements have been completed for drilling 7 additional wells, for the purchase of 150 new railway tank cars, the installation of the "cracking process" at the Cushing refinery, and for new acreage in promising fields.

Banks in the Chicago Federal Reserve district made a material increase in their loans at the Reserve bank in the last week. On government securities they increased their obligations by $18,164,212. They reduced, however, their notes otherwise secured by $4,915,294, making their net change an increase of about $13,600,000.

Other Federal Reserve banks borrowed from the local institution an increase of $9,943,000 over the previous week.

The exhibit as a whole was an irregular one and the current movements of money did not suggest the occasion for the expansion.

Federal Notes Increase.

Federal Reserve notes increased $2,707,690, a moderate change. The treasury department drew out $26,233,660 of its deposits, leaving that item at $17,792,177. The figures:

New York Bank Statement.

The New York bank statement showed some rather large changes, with a decrease of over $106,000,000 in demand deposits and a decrease in loans of $97,000,000. There was a loss in cash of $10,094,000. The net result of the changes was an increase of $3,402,000 in the excess reserve, bringing that figure up to $29,609,410.

The treasury department continued to draw down its balance, the decrease being $19,627,000. In the last two weeks the government has withdrawn about $98,000,000. The figures follow:

Morgan Financing Oil Deal.

The announcement that J. P. Morgan & Co. are financing the offering of $100,000,000 Standard Oil preferred stock was generally regarded as a constructive event among New York financial interests. It may be too early to interpret the entire significance of the matter, but the Morgan group of financiers and the Standard Oil group have not hitherto worked together.

But changes have gradually taken place in the heads of the two groups. Old animosities have been softened. Henry Rogers, James Stillman, John D. Archbold, and others formerly associated with the Standard Oil people are no more.

Change of Alignments.

J. P. Morgan, the elder, with strong convictions, has been succeeded by a head of the house who has not taken the same prominent position in money affairs as did his father. The war has brought about a change of alignments in actual corporate relations between the Standard Oil company and its competitors.

Altogether, it may be assumed that there has been not so much an alliance of former antagonistic groups as there has been a dissipation of former personal lines.

TALK OF THE STREET

The new Standard Oil preferred stock offered to shareholders at par opened on the curb at 115 bid. The old common was up about 20 points. This reception of the financing of the company appears to suggest the confidence felt in the oil situation.

According to Senator Cummins, the railroads of the country will be returned to their private owners by January, 1920, with protective legislation. The news from Washington is not specific in outline as to what is favored, but financial interests generally expect that the properties eventually will be in a better position than ever before.

The railroad presidents think it will require a company or association with $400,000,000 capital to handle the requirements of the railroads in the matter of equipment after the reversion to private ownership. There is no difficulty in enlisting at this time banking capital for any legitimate purpose. The unrestricted appetite for new securities is an outstanding feature in the financial situation.

The week closed without any specific predictions as to the probable course of the money market. No loans were made yesterday. The close of the stock market, being firm, suggested that the money outlook for the time being was not regarded as offering disturbing conditions. Around 6 per cent Wall street is comfortable.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Continental Motors stock was again the most active feature of the local exchange. A great deal of trading came from Detroit. Thus far the Chicago exchange has furnished the largest market for the stock. Detroit, where the ownership of the company lies, is a secondary market. The New York curb, however, is addressing itself to the shares and the market there is growing, though Chicago remains in the lead. No other than the usual view that the shares are not selling as high relatively as they should is advanced for the activity.

The packing house stocks were generally higher and Stewart-Warner reached the new high level of 115. Presently there will be heard talk of an increase in the dividend rate, now 8 per cent.

Union Carbide was about steady, with a moderate volume of business. Traction securities excited but little interest, though the first mortgage bonds of the Chicago Railways company were up over two points at 74⅛.

SHORT COVERING FORCES STOCKS TO HIGHER LEVEL

Pool Activity Is Seen in Progress of Some Issues.

The New York Times.

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—Stocks displayed fairly general strength in today's dealings. The demand for several industrial issues, whose floating supply is believed to be small, caused abrupt advances. Among the ordinary active shares gains ran from 1 to more than 3 points, except in the railroad group, where sluggish tendencies continued to prevail and price changes were moderate.

Inasmuch as the professional atmosphere of the market place had been distinctly bearish earlier in the week, today's upturn had the appearance of short covering put through with considerable urgency. At the same time the progress of a few issues which had been prominent before suggested concerted speculative ventures on the long side. Trading was not so large as on other days of the week.

Bears Disappointed.

The stock market of late has disclosed sharp differences of opinion in the street about its probable future trend. While the bear party has been strong and has brought some heavy guns to bear upon the price list, not a great deal of satisfaction has come from their campaign thus far. Stocks have revealed much resiliency under attack and whenever pressure has been lifted the forward movement has been resumed. The bears have had the advantage of a growing feeling of caution among brokers, evidenced in some cases in advice to customers to sell out their long stock and wait for the decline, which was believed to be overdue.

Scare Doesn't Work.

The chief disappointment for the bears has been their failure to scare a lot of margined traders into selling. There seems to be plenty of money in brokerage accounts and more ready to be turned in, and for this reason no way has been found yet to estimate the ultimate effect on the stock market of heavy demands upon bank credit that are in sight.

FINANCIAL NOTES

A change in name to either Ætna corporation or Ætna Investment company will follow the reorganization of the Ætna Explosives company. The former name will be adopted should the management decide to continue the manufacture of powder. In any event the company will enter the investment field, having available for this purpose cash resources of close to $10,000,000. It is expected that by September the details connected with carrying through the readjustment will have been completed, leaving the newly elected directors free to manage the property which for the last two years has been in the hands of receivers.

The controller of the currency reports that seven banks have made application for charters as national banks, total capital involved $825,000; eight charters have been issued, capital $350,000; nine increases of capital have been approved, amount $5,600,000; one charter has been extended; two changes of title have been approved, and there has been one liquidation involving $1,000,000.

An offering of $900,000 Welch Grape Juice company 7 per cent cumulative sinking fund preferred stock at 97½ and accrued dividend, to yield about 7.15 per cent, is being made by McClure, Jones & Reed and Hemphill, Noyes & Co.

Walter A. Blumthal, who recently returned from France after fourteen months in the service of the government, has been elected assistant cashier of the Garfield Park State Savings bank.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. announced that the offering of Shell Transport Trading Co. stock has been closed.

Essenkay THE TIRE FILLER

Rides Like Air

No Punctures No Blowouts

The protection afforded CHICAGO MOTORISTS by ESSENKAY Tire Filler for summer touring is so conveniently available as to give an unique advantage. Chicagoans may now drive their cars into either of our two completely equipped Installing Stations–one at 3021-3023 S. Michigan Ave., the other at 220-228 W. Superior St.–and have ESSENKAY installed, thus insuring a perfect trip, unmarred by tire troubles. More and more Chicagoans are having ESSENKAY put in tires before a tour so that they may leave behind them such "excess baggage" as Inner Tubes, Spare Tires, Spare Rims, Pumps, Jacks and Tire Tools.

Drive in at 3021-23 So. Michigan Ave.

The increased demand for ESSENKAY by tourists and other car owners has compelled us to bring this new Installing Service to Automobile Row. Visit this most beautiful Auto Accessory Salesroom and Service Station in Chicago. It is rapidly becoming the "talk of the town." The new station doubles our installing capacity. Service Station at 220-28 W. Superior St. continues in operation.

First Cost—Last Cost

ESSENKAY is an investment, not an expense. When an ESSENKAY-filled tire is worn down to the last layer of fabric the old tire may be discarded and the same ESSENKAY transferred to a new casing. ESSENKAY is now in use on thousands of pleasure cars, trucks, converted trucks, and tractors. Many municipalities, departments of Government, newspapers, etc., have increased truck and delivery efficiency to 100% and proved that first cost is last cost.

Try It FREE

Prove for yourself—on your own car—under road and load conditions of your own choosing—that ESSENKAY is Better-Than-Air.

ESSENKAY is installed by us on free trial. We do not say "buy" ESSENKAY. We say "try" ESSENKAY. Ride over smooth roads, then over the roughest you can find, including hilly and sand country. Allow the car to remain under maximum load on a concrete floor to prove that ESSENKAY does not flatten. Then—if you are not convinced that ESSENKAY rides like air—that it will end your tire troubles—that you will no longer be bothered with punctures, blowouts, or slow leaks—that ESSENKAY will not flatten, crumble or deteriorate—return it—the test will cost you nothing.

Doubles Tire Mileage

The Use of ESSENKAY is a proved economy, because ESSENKAY should last as long as your car. Tires filled with ESSENKAY are always at uniform pressure—cannot be deflated or run flat. 10,000 to 20,000 miles on ESSENKAY-filled tires is the rule, not the exception. ESSENKAY comes in sections to fit perfectly into all sizes of tires and fills the casing completely. It contains no rubber, hence has none of the imperfections of rubber. It can be installed on all types of rims.

The Dynamo That Generates Sales

Attractive Show Windows Are Your Biggest Business Getters

Just as the dynamo generates the electric power that runs the motor, so do your show windows generate the sales that run your business.

Are you keeping this dynamo working full force? Are you making your show windows generate sales for you? Or are you letting this great sales producer lose its force simply because you have neglected to keep your show windows modern and attractive?

No better proof of the tremendous sales value of show windows can be given than the fact that store rentals are largely set by the show window display. Attractive show windows are acknowledged by successful merchants everywhere to be a vital factor in business successes.

Now is the time to get busy. Possibly never in the history of this country have business prospects been so bright. Cash in on this opportunity. And the way to start is to modernize your store front.

Specify ZOURI Safety Key Set Construction

ZOURI Safety Key Set Construction has proved beyond question its superiority over all others. It is today acknowledged by the highest authorities to be the only real safety construction.

70 per cent of all store window breakages are from unknown causes. In the hundreds of ZOURI installations in Chicago alone, many of them in the most unprotected locations, there has not been one single instance of mysterious breakage.

ZOURI costs but little more. But it pays you back many times over for this slight extra cost by eliminating broken show window expense, muss, annoyance, and the loss of valuable show window space.

Send in Coupon Now

The coupon at the bottom of this advertisement will bring you free our interesting catalog.

This catalog explains to you in detail how the ZOURI Safety Key Set feature eliminates all possibility of glass distortion. How the ZOURI Safety Self-Adjusting Setting Block insures perfect contact between the glass and gutter. How ZOURI Safety Key Set Scientific Reinforcement operates with a rigid rabbet.

These are but a few of the interesting ZOURI Safety Key Set facts you will find in this catalog. Before you decide you should know them all.

Clip the coupon now. Send it to the agent nearest you—or direct to us. Remember you are obligated in no way.

Every progressive business man wants to improve his store. And improve it in the right way. The catalog will tell you how. Send in the coupon now.

Afternoon Dress Short of Sleeve

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is so much difference between a pretty fashion and a fashionable prettiness, isn't there? All the difference, in fact, between Hyde Park and the Bois, between London and Paris. The cleavage between women's clothes and women's clothes is always made for me, indeed, by my memories of various Junes spent between the English and the French capitals.

The June of Paris! I close my eyes and see the Bois, with its coquetries of lake and shrubbery, its whole air of toying with nature. There are groups of French women taking their tea at one of the fashionable outdoor restaurants. Small and chattering, the Parisienne always makes you think of a parokeet, a bird whose feathers twitter almost as much as its cry. Hats and gowns may be ugly, but they are worn with that wonderful air that seems to say, "What mere prettiness could be as attractive as this?" Here in Paris is the fashionable prettiness.

But the June of London! Ah, there in that leisurely playground, Hyde Park, where the s[illegible] line winds through such undandified green, where the big trees look always uncombed, where the place is always haunted by the heroines of Mr. Henry James and Mr. H. G. Wells—there one finds the pretty fashion.

It is the fashion of the one piece dress and the big, wide brimmed hat. We don't know when the Englishwoman first discovered that this was the ideal costume for her long, straight featured face and her long, straight limbed body, but we do know that she never seems to depart from the pretty fashion which she has found.

In New York the season seems to determine largely whether we shall be fashionably pretty or prettily fashioned. In winter the New York woman goes about with her shredded eyebrows, her mincing, smart, Paris wheedled clothes. But in summer—ah, then she takes a turn at being Hyde Parky. And never was this so true as during the present summer.

During June, for example, the various fashionable weddings which took place on Long Island or at the beautiful country places of Connecticut brought out the fact that our smartest women were dressing simply as a mission chair. Pretty, magazine covery frocks of georgette, chiffon, and printed gauze—loveliest of sheer fabrics in loveliest of tones—these were worn with big wide brimmed hats of georgette and leghorn and maline.

The fact of it is that even the present Paris styles seem to be somewhat Anglicized. We are showing a group of frocks and hats from the French capital to illustrate our point. All of them are the "sweetly pretty" sort of thing which one might expect to find at an English garden party.

At the left comes first an afternoon frock of rose batiste with a border design of green and white. This is accompanied by a hat of white batiste wreathed in silver roses and leaves. The cape effect of the collar is extremely charming—particularly for the slender figure.

We have all been sufficiently tutored this year in the use of ribbons. We are doing them now almost as much as a Maypole. Yet up to this time we have observed the tradition that ribbons of silk should be added to frock of organdy or batiste. Behold here, however, what a new lilt to the fashion! For this frock of pale rose liberty satin is set off with ribbons of organdy—mauve edged with silver thread. As for the hat, this is of rose organdy and it is trimmed with silver cord and tassels. Also a new note!

The two women at the right introduce you respectively to a frock of white cachemire with an original vestee of white batiste embroidered in blue and green cotton floss and a biscuit color liberty satin press agenting the silk fringe that seems to have caught Paris in one vast web. The hats worn with these are, first, a white organdy with a crown of appliqued flowers made of cotton floss and raffia in green and pale blue, and, second, a horsehair with horsehair flowers and tulle band in tones of old rose and pale rose.

As will be noted, all of these frocks are short sleeved. But, in spite of the fact that Paris wears nothing but the trail of the scissors above the elbow, America is not so completely pledged to the new mode. Many of the smartest frocks on this side park their sleeves only at the wrist. When shorter sleeves are worn, it is interesting to note the return of those soft suede gloves of other days. At the wedding of her daughter to the Count di Zippola Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, for example, completed her costume of café au lait georgette with suede gloves of the same tint.

Please note that the woman at the right of the page is wearing the strapped slipper so much done in Paris. This is worn by the smartest on this side. But the newest thing to be launched in the way of footgear is the square toed shoe. This, it is said, will be the complete vogue the coming season. So far, however, only those with the most patrician of feet have dared to try it out.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By MARY BRUSH WILLIAMS

CAPES SHOWN FOR WINTER WEAR.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Relative to the important subject of whether or not the cape is dead, I had a little illustrative experience last week. A friend took me to her furrier to see about a neckpiece. Before we left she said: "Just wait a minute. I want you to see what can be done with your coat. Elise, show us so and so."

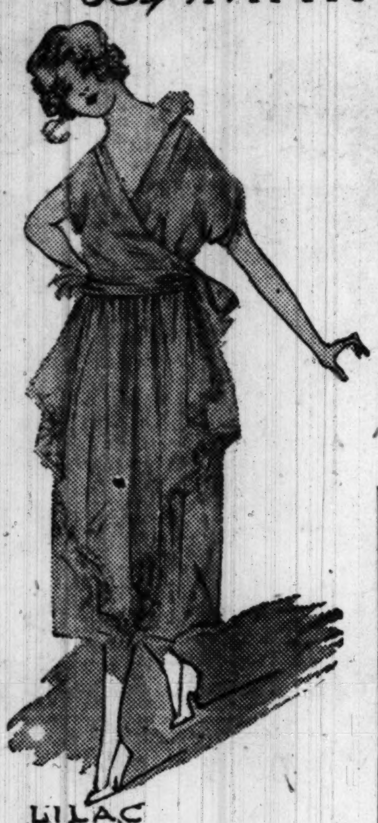
The vendeuse vanished and returned with a cape swinging heavily over her arm.

"What model are they going to make that one into?" I demanded.

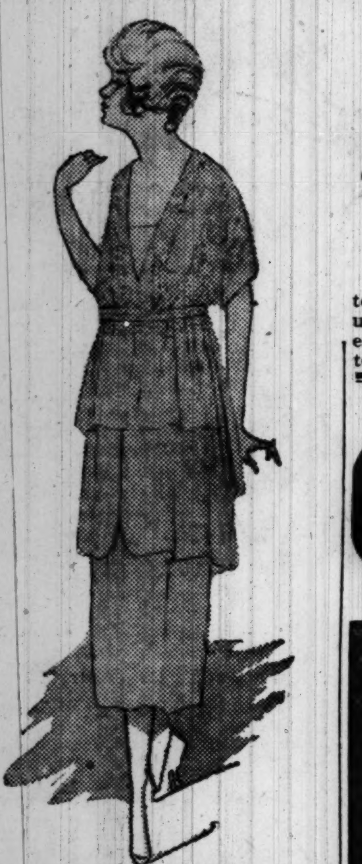
"Oh, madam, it's all ready made and ready to deliver."

And I, about to proclaim that capes were dead!

"Why, I saw that model before the armistice! This is exactly equivalent to saying you saw it in a period parallel to Greek and Roman history. It was Chanel's model last year!"



LILAC



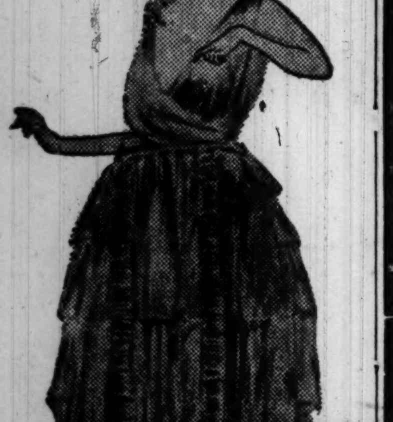
HORTENSIA.

"Yes, but not much used then. It is only just coming in!"

It is tight over the shoulders and gathered in at the neck, without any yoke. The big fur collar is also gathered in the same place. The whole cape is bordered with an edge of the same fur, like a frame, and bands of fur.

But to get down to the important matter of further pursuing the present elusive silhouette. People are interested in it, you know, who are dead sick of peace terms. Start a conversation about peace, and your weary listeners will grow listless. Say something about silhouettes, and their eyes will brighten. They will ask you, "Do you think hips are really coming in?—and that the silhouette will no longer be straight?"

The three accompanying sketches of the newest costumes by Beer answer the question better than I could. Mme. Paquin herself, who is the president of the French dressmakers' association, cannot promise to what lengths a silhouette will go, or in what direction it may suddenly veer. But the accompanying figures are safe ones to follow for the fall and winter.



CINDERELLA

A tight fitting bodice, a slender waist, and a skirt with bulging over draperies, that is the model of the day. Hips—I shall mention them often, for they are the most conspicuous feature of all costuming. Hips, so long repudiated, denied, hidden away someplace where no one can find them, now carry the garnishment of the costume. They are the one feature we have suddenly selected to decorate. I am afraid, however, that this does not mean you can relax your diet, because for them to carry so much trimming they must be thin. As a matter of fact, you should not look as if you had hips: you should merely look as if you had trimming where the hips ought to be.

The dancing frock called Cinderella, shows to what lengths—or widths—of fullness we may advance by rapid stages indeed. For whereas the underdress of this model is exceedingly tight it does not show. One gets the effect of a full skirt, as well as a charming one. It is on a silver and gold foundation and the fullness lies in the five ruffles, which are of pink net. Ribbons of gold make two narrow panels down the front.

But the blouse of this costume must not under any circumstances, be omitted from the description. It is conspicuous for its meagerness. It does not exist at all from the under arm socket to the waist line, and this in modified slightly more conservative form is to be a characteristic of dancing and dinner dresses.

As for the rest of this costume, the bodice is simple indeed. It crosses in surplus effect, front and back, and is caught at shoulder and waist line with flowers, which are repeated at the bottom of the panels of the skirt. The model has the advantage of being very new.

For those of less venturesome disposition, the one called lilac would perhaps be a safer choice. I have told you that new silhouette is in dispute among the costumers and nobody can be quite sure who will win out. Chanel maintains that she will not use panels. Others say that the proposed changes represent the madness of a sensational house, and that they themselves shall keep the silhouette slender. For play-it-safers, therefore, the lilac dress is a secure refuge.

The skirt is but slightly fuller than formerly, and it is garnished front and back with a pointed apron tunic, ruched along the edges and bulging only slightly over the hips. The same delicate ruching garnishes the bottom of the skirt. The bodice is surplice in effect. This is the inevitable cut to go with the Victorian effect in skirts. Instead of the everlasting flower ornaments at shoulder and waistline, it is finished with a bird of paradise feather. Of course, by lengthening the sleeves and altering the waistline, this can be made into an afternoon gown for old and young. The material of the model is taffeta.

Hortensia, too, can be useful alike to the young and the middle aged. It will make the latter look younger and more slender—if you have any scruples against that. I am afraid that my correspondence is going to consist in a series of descriptions of ruffles running round some slim pillowslip of a foundation. In this case, I have the pleasure of describing it in slightly modified form. Only two ruffles drop over a tight tunic, and these go only half way round.

There is a tendency nowadays to have dresses so that you might almost put them on front side back, so exactly are the front and the rear replicas of each other. Such an error would not be possible with this one. It is totally different, front and back. The ruffles stop in the rear on either side the hips.

In the bodice, the low V-shape becomes a guimpe across the back of the shoulders and extends in a long panel down the bottom of the hem. The waist belted with a slender girdle, and the steel beads in which blouse, guimpe, and panel are embroidered run in a wide freize or border round the top of the skirt.

VARIED ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN.

St. George's, one of Montreal's most aristocratic Anglican churches, is one of the first in Canada to admit women as "vestrymen."

Among the many American women who have found employment as traveling salesmen the last few years, Miss Helen Courtney is probably the only one handling her particular line of goods. Miss Courtney sells fire engines and other fire fighting apparatus for a manufacturing firm.

Sarah Stevenson, the first woman to hold the position of borough secretary in Brooklyn, and one of the pioneer lawyers of the borough, has just been admitted to membership in the American Bar association.

Statistics show that in the old days every wife reared an average of two children, while now this average has been cut in half. So now we find that woman brings up only half the children her grandmother did and hardly has any of the household duties.

SHE DIDN'T WANT TO BE FAT!

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Or, what is your beauty ill? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

BY the grace of an adoring mamma with more faith than vision on the future becomingness of the name she was called Lily. Not Lillian, but Lily, for mamma averred that was her favorite flower because it was tall and slender and graceful, and thus she would have her daughter grow.

Lily grew up under favorable enough conditions and arrived at her twentieth birthday with no remarks having been made about the inconsistency of name and maiden. So it was even until she was 25. She was not tall, but with the correct tailored lines she adopted she fitted her 36 into the eye as a nifty bit of feminine architecture, one designed to carry no more than 125 pounds.

But the well known designs of wimmin and architects have a way of deviating broadly from the original plan—so it was with Lily.

At 25 she married a slender young chap of her own age, a fashionably cut young man with an idea or two in his mind on how to get on in business, which he put into effect almost immediately with the result that Lily was replacing the home made trousseau with "Eloise" frocks and "Gerte" hats before the end of the year. And they were a handsome pair. For Lily had an air when she stepped out, and the good clothes helped to turn the eyes in her direction.

Then life gradually got to be for Lily a question of how best to enjoy herself. From that it went on into how best to enjoy herself with the least possible exertion, and skipping over the years lightly we find Friend Lily and her still smart, sleek young looking husband at 30 preparing to go to an elaborate reception.

This was an occasion with the young husband. For a business reason it was an occasion on which he wished to make an impression, and Lily was to be part of that impression. Perhaps that was the reason he scrutinized her and her gown with a critical eye.

"It seems to me, my dear, you look awfully large in that dress," he parleyed.

"It does make me look larger," she answered, apologetically.

"You don't want to get fat, Lily. It is not becoming——"

"I don't want to get fat! Who ever told you I wanted to get fat? You don't suppose it is any pleasure to me, do you? You don't love me or you would not say anything like that," said Lily, saturated by now in a salt brine which was doing irreparable damage to the placidity of her expression and the color of her nose.

"If you didn't want to get fat, old girl," husband answered, a trifle cruelly, "you wouldn't be. You have enough time on your hands, heaven knows, to keep yourself in condition."

"I'm not going to the reception with you," wept the fattening and unreasonable Lily. "You are ashamed of me. That's what you are. You're in love with some one else. I've noticed for some time whenever we go to a party you check me along with your coat and hat and remember me only when it is time to go home. O, it never used to be like that."

And so on as quarrels go so on! A good time was not had by all at the reception.

Next day Lily wept her way over to mamma's and unfolded a tale of cruel words from her husband. But mamma rose not with sympathy nor with judgment against the erring mate. She talked to her daughter on the subject of fat. She told her it had its uses and its virtues in the making of doughnuts and fried cakes, but it was ne'er intended as a matter of beauty cultivation.

"But I don't want to be fat," wailed Lily again.

"But you must want to be or you wouldn't be," protested the mother.

"O, mother, you're just like Jimmy. You don't love me, either. You pick on me and Jimmy picks on me, and I don't want to be fat."

"I bet tomorrow morning if I come over to your house I will find you swinging in the hammock with a box of bonbons on one side and a quart of ice cream on the other, and the maid bringing you something else that it would be better for you to get up and get yourself," the mother answered. "You'll lose your Jimmy if you keep on that lazy, inactive way of doing things. It is a surprise to me he did not say something before about it.

"Now, daughter," she said, assuming a tenderer tone, "I am going to have a chat with you on this subject since you were the one to introduce it. And I'm not going to give it to you because I want to pick on you, but because I want you to save yourself in time.

"I have tried to give a gentle hint to you from time to time, and so has Jimmy. But you wouldn't see it. The trouble is that you are degenerating yearly into a lazier girl than you were the year before. You never exercise. You eat rich foods and you oversleep. In fact, you are just a spoiled wife with too much money to prevent you from having to get around and exercise.

"And I don't believe many women appreciate the psychology of having to do exercise of housework or some other variety. If you look around you, dear, you will find that the women you know who have the most to do are the women who keep themselves freest from fat. And the women who, like yourself, don't have to worry where the next meal is ordered from, thanks to your good housekeeper, are the women who degenerate more quickly along mental as well as physical lines.

"Mark my word, my daughter, your mind gets fat as your body does. And the first thing you know you are going to be an uninteresting old lady as well as a fat one at 35. Why don't you go swimming as you used to do, or take up golf, or tennis, or something, and leave the candies and the ice cream for Junior?"

"I don't eat much candy," protested Lily, at the same time mustering a few more tears into action. "A box lasts me two days."

"Two days!" ejaculated the mother. "It ought to last you two months."

"Mother, you are picking on me and I'm going home right away. I don't want to be fat. And everybody just seems to think I want to be."

And home went Lily in tears and self pity. She hied her straight to the hammock, opened up a fresh box of chocolates, and called the maid to bring some ice cream as she was so hot after the walk from mother's.

"Do you think I am too fat?" she pleaded with Hilda, who brought the cream.

"Yas, I tank you are not t'in."

"And I don't want to be fat," she sighed audibly between the chocolate bar and the maple nut!

Answers to Inquiries.

DANCER: THE WAGES OF FAT are discomfort and unhappiness, just as you say. It is hard to do exercise, isn't it? But you might go at it in a better spirit and say, "It took me a couple of years to put this fat on my legs and ankles. Now if I get it off by fifteen minutes' work a day for three months I will be doing myself proud"; then stick to that promise. If you are earnest enough you may accomplish a surprising reduction in even less time. Kicking exercises are much more forceful than elegant, to be sure, but I strongly recommend them for leg reducing. Kick at something. Hang an old porch pillow, say, from a doorway. Then stand off and "kick to kill" the superfluous flesh. Each day raise the pillow a trifle so that you will have to kick higher. Walking up and down stairs, stepping on the ball of the fooh with a springing lift to the next step, will bring the muscles of the leg into play and make it uncomfortable for the adipose that has taken up squatter's claim thereon.

FATTY: WILL YOU TRY THIS dietary for a few weeks? Breakfast: One-half orange or grape fruit without sugar, soft boiled egg, small dry roll or piece of toast, and coffee unsweetened and uncreamed. Luncheon: Small bowl of clear broth, and all you want of lettuce, cucumbers, or celery, prepared without oil or cream dressing. Dinner: Three ounces of steak, or chicken, or roast beef, or fish (you may vary your meals thus), a big helping of brussel sprouts or onions or asparagus or string beans (just any single one of these, mind you), prepared without butter or cream or oils, and coffee without sugar or cream. If you have not the will power to give up the butter and cream, all at once graduate by making the supply smaller each day until you have strengthened your will. But don't forget that dieting alone will get you nowhere in the long run. You will reduce, but you won't stay at that silhouette unless you harden your muscles against a return of the superfluous flesh. If you wish I will mail you a pamphlet containing a series of exercises that will do the work for you. Please send stamped, addressed envelope.

READER: THAT'S A GOOD IDEA. Thank you for the suggestion. I fully agree that a memory makes a woman charming. Not the kind that lives in the past, but the kind you mean—remembers names; can retell stories with preciseness and niceness. Back of the idea of cultivating a memory is the keener edge it puts on the brain generally, which is the making of the more attractive person. Is there anything duller than a woman who is just too lazy minded to try to remember names and places and has to refer constantly to a third person for aid in telling an incident? I will write a story on it one of these days.

CHANCES ON THE ROAD.

SEVERAL inquiries regarding the chances for women in selling on the road have come to me lately. One was from a woman who has been working in an office for several years in a small city. She has been unable to get an office position in her town that will pay her, as she says, more than a bare living wage, and as she has had the desire to try her hand at road selling, she asks for advice on the chances for women in that line. She says that most of her friends have tried to discourage her from taking a traveling job, but in spite of their discouragement her inclination to try the new work is still strong.

Judging from the success of the women I know who are selling goods on the road, I would say that any one who possesses the good health necessary for this rather strenuous occupation, coupled with the inclination for it, deserves encouragement.

Of the many women who have pioneered in this work, the great majority have been successful. One woman traveler whose success stands out in my memory worked in an office for fifteen years. She was a high salaried office woman, and therefore considered a success. She grew weary of the confinement and monotony of her work in the office and determined to become a traveling saleswoman. She had never had any experience in selling whatever, but that didn't prevent her from applying for a selling job.

She went to one of the large corset manufacturers and succeeded after little difficulty in being taken on. She had to attend the classes which the firm conducted for their saleswomen, and after a month or six weeks' work in class learning the selling and fitting end of the game, she was assigned to a regular territory. She said that after the first few months the work was not hard, and at the end of a year she had earned nearly twice the salary she had made in an office.

After two years on the road she is a successful saleswoman and her earnings now are over three times what they were when she was employed in an office. She considers the traveling work infinitely more interesting than work in an office, and altogether she is a great deal happier and more contented than she ever was before.

There are many successes like the foregoing and women workers need only a little encouragement to induce them to give a trial to work in this promising field.

One woman of my acquaintance has made a success of selling advertising on the road, but in this case she had been trained in the advertising business and it was only after years of good and faithful service that she was given an opportunity to sell on the road. She was given the same advantages as the men solicitors and greatly to the surprise of some of her associates she has made good.

For a woman desiring to obtain a traveling position, the houses most likely to be in the market for such help are those manufacturing or jobbing women's wear, but the field is growing daily, and a number of large wholesale houses which supplanted their salesmen with women during the war are keeping them on the road now and giving them the same chance as they give the men. The road is a promising field for women workers and one in which the competition with men adds a zest which is lacking in other lines of work.

READING EYES

by Doris Blake

NOW, my dear young men pupils, this morning we will have a little lesson on how to find out a few of the innermost secrets of the disposition and character of your adored one. And, my dear young women pupils, you may "listen in" and apply the same bit of occult science to the eyes you look into adoringly.

But don't let me be the means of swerving you from the bridal path with James Jonathan Jones because there may be a green tint to his blue eyes. It is just for fun for a summer day or a bit of light summer reading that I am leading you over these occult highways and byways. If you are going to become serious over it, then our game is spoiled and we cannot play any more.

Black eyes, with a grave mouth, show taste, elegance, sound judgment, but often an ungenerous disposition.

A black eye is usually lively, penetrative, brisk, and proves a person to be of lively wit, sprightly conversation, not easily imposed upon, of a sound understanding, apt to lie, often led away by the influence of others, selfish, desirous of absorbing the time and attention of a friend, and jealous of every one else.

Haughty black eyes indicate domination and personal power.

A black eyed man is always jealous and most suspicious of his wife, a gray eyed man most faithful, the brown eyed man the best provider, and the blue eyed man the most and easiest henpecked.

A true gray eye denotes the person to be of weak intellect, devoid of wit, but a plain, plodding, honest drudge.

Greenish gray eyes with light streaks coming and going denote intellectuality, impulsiveness, impressionableness and love of poetry and art.

Gray-blue, clear, steadfast eyes show that the person is serene and constant.

Pale blue eyes with a shifting motion show dishonor and deceit.

Dark blue eyes with a violet tint indicate purity and a great power of affection.

Blue eyes with a green tint show a choleric disposition. When angry, they look red.

Blue eyes streaked with unequal orange or yellow flakes show the owner to be quite different from other folk—original and uncommon.

Blue eyes may belong to enthusiastic folk; also to a meek and gentle temper. Affability and good nature are credited them; modesty and calm are theirs; a strong memory, subject to no violent impressions from the vicissitudes of life whether good or bad.

Green eyes are deceitful and are the eyes of coquetry.

Light brown eyes are inconstant; brown eyes with a green tint show anger and irritability. Brown eyes are said to do the greatest mischief.

A hazel eye indicates a subtle, piercing, and frolicsome nature, inclined to be arch and mischievous, though good natured at heart, strongly inclined to passion and not overdelicate in the means of gratifying that propensity.

The worst of all are the citron colored or yellowish eyes. If you get in the power of one with that color eye beware, for it indicates a dangerous person.

A cold, indolent, selfish disposition accompanies a feebly tinted or colorless eye.

Bright eyes are a proof of good health always.

People who talk well and love to talk usually have large eyes.

Dark eyes suggest deep and strong emotions.

If your eyes change color, as from blue to brown, it is an exceedingly lucky sign.

If a person winks rapidly that means a bad temper; if slowly, not much temper.

A cast or droop in the eye cannot be trusted.

A wild expression of the eye, especially if the whole pupil is exposed, is a sign of insanity.

Projecting, rolling eyes belong to people destitute of genuine veneration.

A small eye advanced in the head shows a quick wit, sound constitution, lively genius, agreeable company, good morals.

Eyes sunk in the head are those of a jealous, distrustful, envious, malicious nature; deceitful; not dependable; low minded.

Large eyes in a small face indicate maliciousness.

Eyes close together near the bridge of the nose indicate stinginess and unworthiness.

A shifting eye denotes dishonesty.

Soft, languid eyes show a voluptuous disposition.

Never make a confidant of one who keeps his eyes almost closed; half shut eyes show shrewdness and a lack of sincerity.

A squinty eye is a penurious but honest eye.

Oblique eyes are cunning and deceitful.

Pop eyed persons are good natured.

If one has different expressioned or different colored eyes, it means a double minded person.

Eyes which have an inquisitive expression, and then, when addressing a person, have an exceedingly kind expression, are not to be trusted.

If your right eye keeps twitching it means good news; your left, misfortune. If both twitch at the same time you will hear from a long lost friend.

To take a cinder out of a woman's eye you will gain the next thing you set your heart on; no such good luck follows taking it out of a man's eye.

Married in Black.

It was in the spring, during a strom. The guests had all arrived, and the wedding march was being played, when the couple marched out and took their places under the arch of roses and ferns. Right over the place where the couple stood was a chimney hole. About half way through the ceremony the wind blew the chimney cap off, and down came a shower of soot on the bride and bridegroom.

Waiting in Agony.

At a recent wedding here the bride was delayed a little in making her appearance. When at last she did appear she breathlessly ran up to the embarrassed bridegroom, who had been waiting for her in agony and putting her arms around his neck exclaimed: "O, John, dear, I am so sorry I am late."

Waiting Till After the Show.

The bridegroom was a big, bashful looking country boy. Immediately after the ceremony he disappeared from the scene, and after a long search was found calmly smoking his pipe in the hay loft in the barn, in his shirt sleeves and his collar off. When asked for an explanation he said: "My collar is so darn high I can't wear it. Tell her I'll wait out here till the show is over and I'll take her home."

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope.

He Hangs Around.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a young man who lives on my street. Every evening on his way home, if I am in the yard or on the porch, he stops and starts a conversation. I know him real well. Is it proper for me to ask him up on the porch to talk instead of letting him stand on the walk? He hangs around like he wanted an invitation. He is a good fellow and mother approves. He is past his twenty mark and I am of age.

"There is also another fellow whom I am anxious to meet. I do not go to public dances because mother and father do not approve of them. Do you know of any way I could meet this young man? He is certainly handsome, and not only that but just as good as he is handsome. DOT."

Why, of course, Dot, invite the young man up on the porch! Why hesitate when the family approves? It looks much better than your standing outdoors talking to him. You will probably meet the second young man some day. It usually happens that way. Have you not some common friend, you two? That's the only way I know an introduction can be arranged.

Can't Please Mother.

"Dear Miss Blake: You have answered many problems for other girls and boys and I would like to know what you think I should do.

"I am a girl 14 years old, and in the first year high school. My mother has had an operation and I have had to do the work, go to school, and take music lessons. But my mother is home now, and I still have most of the work to do. But I can not do it to please my mother. She scolds because I don't do it one way. No matter how hard I work to please her and try to do it the way she wants it done, I cannot do it.

"She insists on my taking music, but I don't care for music. Besides, I have to take my music lesson on Sunday and I don't like to because I want to go to Sunday school and church.

"I love my daddy and would not do anything to displease him. But I cannot stand it any longer, I have always wanted to be a movie actress, but I don't see how I can be one now. "LOTTIE."

Now, dear, you have quite a little load put upon your young shoulders. But you must try to realize that your mother is not well and that is why she is irritable about your work and hard to please. I thing as she regains her strength she will be kinder to you. Try to remember, dear, mothers, too, have a hard lot when they are well and much harder when they have not their health. About the music, if it pleases her to have you study, why not make up your mind to be agreeable about it? When you are older you will appreciate having some knowledge of music even though you never become much of a performer. It is just another factor of education one cannot afford to miss when the opportunity is offered. You know, dear, half the hard work in the world is hard because we make it so. I appreciate you are young and it is quite a lot of responsibility for you, but if you are agreeable and kind about doing the things your mother wants you to do it will hurry her recovery and then, I am sure, everything will run smoothly again.

Musician in a Theater.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 19 years old and need your advice. I go to a nice theater. There is a musician playing there, and I would like to get acquainted with him, but do not know how. The owner of the theater knows me. I would not like to ask him to introduce me. Would it be right for me to sit in the first row? I know he is bashful, and I am, too. I know he is not a flirt. I know he likes me very well. Please do not tell me that he is a flirt. Please tell me a way, because I am very unhappy. I go out with my mother, no one else. I would be very happy if I could get acquainted with him. RUBY."

What a foolish idea to get into your head! Perhaps the man is married! Suppose you never thought of that! And how on earth can you know he likes you when you have never met him? I am afraid, dear, you are weaving a romance around the musician that may result unhappily for you unless you see how perfectly silly it is. Please don't sit in the first row or do anything about forcing an acquaintance. You will get over this "crush."

A FRIEND IN NEED.

Long Siege in Hospital.

"I lost a leg recently through blood-poisoning, and have put in a long siege at the hospital, suffering two operations. Have been out a couple of weeks and can get along fairly well with crutches, but I am badly in need of clothes, for there are jobs I could get if only I made a presentable appearance. Do you think some one would help me out? I take 38 or 40 coat and 34 trousers. When the luck changes, believe me, I'll try to do some one a good turn in exchange for your help now. J. H."

This is the letter of a brave man. More words seem unnecessary. I know some one will help this brother in distress.

Bibles in Large Print.

"I have two Bibles in large print which I should be glad to give to any one wishing them. They are old, but in good condition. MRS. G. N. G."

Thank you for your offer. I feel confident more than one will take advantage of it soon.

Dressmaking Lessons.

"I wonder if any of your readers have some courses in dressmaking that they could give me? I am working my way through high school and cannot afford to take any lessons, but am anxious to learn. I would appreciate it much." W. L."

This is a splendid spirit for a girl to show, particularly a girl who already must be doing a great deal if she is working her way through school. I hope with all my heart that some one will have a dressmaking course she may have.

Could Make Some Money.

"I am a helpless cripple girl in a wheel chair. I thought you might be able to help me get a music box that I could play—one that plays by turning the handle—so I could make some money. MISS M. W.

It is hard to make money when one is crippled and tied to a wheel chair. If a music box should be offered I will see that you get it. It is rather a plucky thing you are planning to do.

Beautifully Curly, Wavy Hair Like "Nature's Own"
Try the new way—the Silmerine way—never again use the ruinous heated iron. The curliness appears altogether natural. Quickly acquired; lasts a long time.
Liquid Silmerine
is perfectly harmless; is neither sticky nor greasy. Easily applied with brush. Serves also as a splendid dressing, keeping the hair soft, fluffy and glossy. Directions with bottle. At your druggist's.

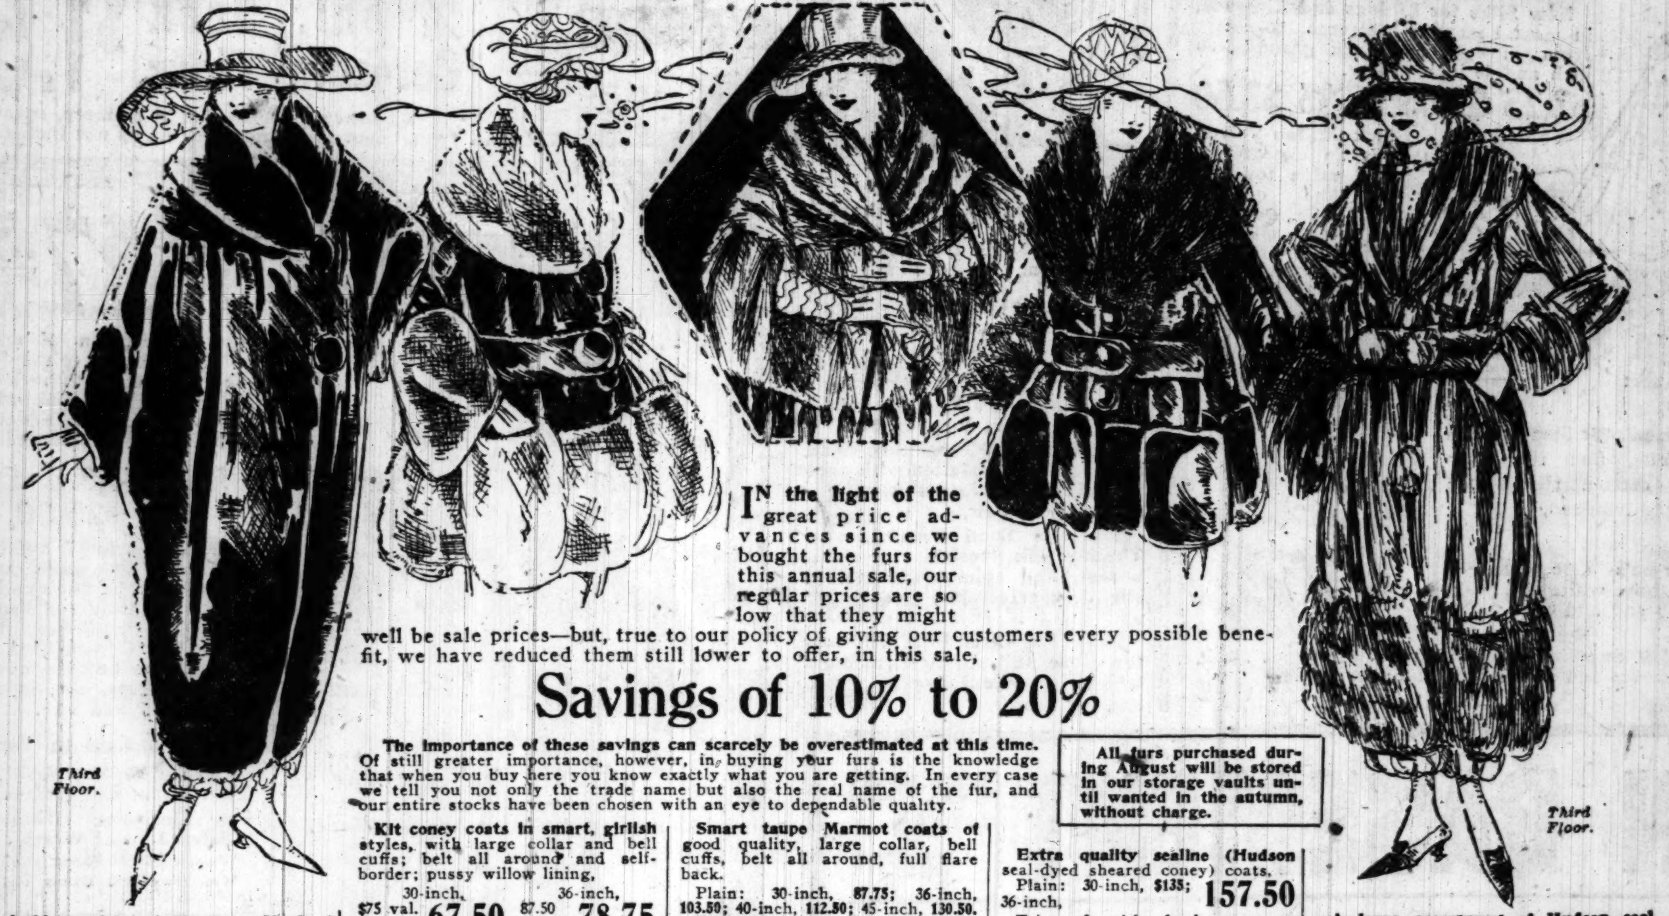
AUGUST FUR SALE



Third Floor.

IN the light of the great price advances since we bought the furs for this annual sale, our regular prices are so low that they might well be sale prices—but, true to our policy of giving our customers every possible benefit, we have reduced them still lower to offer, in this sale,

Savings of 10% to 20%

The importance of these savings can scarcely be overestimated at this time. Of still greater importance, however, in buying your furs is the knowledge that when you buy here you know exactly what you are getting. In every case we tell you not only the trade name but also the real name of the fur, and our entire stocks have been chosen with an eye to dependable quality.

All furs purchased during August will be stored in our storage vaults until wanted in the autumn, without charge.

Ready! - Our Greatest Of All August FURNITURE Sales Starts Monday 8:30 A.M.

Here it is—the most important furniture sale announcement we ever made! Here are the plain facts: THERE IS AN ACTUAL SHORTAGE OF FURNITURE. Strikes, high cost of labor and materials, shortage of help, all combine to create chaos in the furniture market.

BUT ROTHSCHILDS HAVE THE GOODS

The record-breaking business this store has built up in recent years enables us to buy far ahead of the market—to turn every condition to your advantage and save you every dollar there is in it. We confidently believe this to be the greatest August furniture sale held by any store in America. The goods are here. The values ring true. The quality is assured. The savings are genuine. If you are not able to use furniture now, buy it anyway. We have arranged with a storage house to care for it at a moderate cost until you want it.

Every apartment and every house in Chicago and vicinity should be represented on our great furniture floor (the sixth) tomorrow. Our business is growing by leaps and bounds. Nothing can stop us, for we are building on the right principle: "Give the people the best for the money." Monthly payments may be arranged for.

Come tomorrow and see. Tell your friends. Newcomers to Chicago are especially invited to see what "the fastest growing store in America" can do to help them cut down the cost of living on reliable furniture.

We must tell you that furniture prices will soon be higher, and anything you can use between now and October 1st you should buy at this sale. From tomorrow morning until the last day of August this store will record the greatest selling of furniture ever known, we believe, in this country. We cannot accept cancellations on these goods. Selling starts at the stroke of 8:30 Monday. Will YOU be here?

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Curry and Comfits, or East Indian Relishes

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

CURRIES FOR SUMMER.

CURRIES are hot country and hot weather dishes. India or the east is their home. London became their home-in-law when generals and admirals and captains and plain Tommies were pursuing a course which led to the monarch of England being the British empress. There are at least 1,001 recipes for curries, because for 100 years or more each military man and eastern traveler returning to England brought along with him the one and only curry recipe.

Mulligatawny is a curry flavored soup, and as usually made has anything but a palatable appearance. It is more economical to use the chicken and other ingredients of which it is made in a true curry, with which to eat any quantity of boiled rice. A little curried meat will go a long way. A cup of curry made with that little meat can be divided by four and served across the middle of a considerable mound of rice or in a tunnel through that mound.

Fundamentally our curry dishes are a sauce, a thick one, in which meat is cooked or warmed up, or which is used over vegetables, eggs, rice alone sometimes, or for macaroni. But as made, the meat is often started to cook, with the foundations of the sauce, in butter, because the nice browning or caramelizing of the eat gives the sauce both substance and flavor.

In a great many curry recipes there are directions for removing the fat before serving it, but if some brown flour is used for thickening, this takes care of any surplus fat, which would generally be wasted if removed.

The finish of a curry sauce is generally something sour. In India the tamarind is used. A sour apple seems to me to improve various sorts of curry sauces, and always, when something seems lacking, some lemon juice may be added—a teaspoon to try. This will often change its character most favorably, and again I do not like it.

Practicaly all curry sauces are started with onion, fried in butter, with which the meat may also be fried, and seasoning vegetables other than the onion, and from that point you may begin to make the one thousand and one variations. In India curries are hot, so you may add a pinch of cayenne, although there is some in the curry powder, and so on.

Boiled Rice.

Pick over and wash rice in several waters until all loose starch is washed off. Put in flat bottomed covered aluminum kettle with one and a half cups of cold water and a teaspoon of salt to each cup of rice. Boil up and then turn the gas flame as low as it can be turned and let cook until tender—for one cup one-half hour or a little more. The water will be entirely absorbed and the rice grains all separate and these cannot burn on if the fire is small enough.

Red Curry.

To the pork curry recipe add with the water one-half cup of tomato paste or tomato pulp. In this case only half as much flour for thickening the curry will be needed and extra spices, and two teaspoons of curry powder instead of one to subdue the spiciness of the tomato. This can be strained and used for a special tomato sauce, the meat being utilized in some chopped mixture.

Red Egg Curry.

Fry an onion in a tablespoon of butter, add a teaspoon of curry and a half cup of chopped pimento, and cook for five minutes, then add a cup of milk or cream and simmer one-half hour. Enough for half a dozen boiled eggs, which may be cooked in the sauce five minutes or it may be served over them. Remember that canned pimento sometimes gives a burned taste and scant the amount used if necessary.

Pork Curry.

Fry one onion cut fine in two tablespoons of butter, adding also a clove of garlic cut fine. (Garlic is not perceptible with curry powder, but improves almost any meat curry.) Fry with the onion one-half pound of pork cut fine, gently, until a nice brown, being careful not to have enough fire to dry it. Stir into the fat or liquid two tablespoons of browned flour wet with cream until smooth and add one cup of water, stir and cook smooth. Add twelve cloves, eight shelled cardamons in a cloth and one minced onion and simmer for one hour. No lemon juice needed. Enough for four people.

Chicken Curry.

One pound of chicken cut in small pieces, one onion, two tablespoons of butter, one sour apple, one-fourth cup of ground fresh cocoanut, five cardamon seeds, six cloves, one teaspoon of curry powder, one-half teaspoon of salt, a speck of red pepper, two tablespoons of browned flour, one cup of water. Fry the onion, chicken, and apple gently until the chicken is brown—twenty minutes to half an hour—stir in the flour with which has been mixed the curry powder. Shell the cardamons and tie them with the cloves in a bit of new rinsed out cheese cloth, and add with the water, stirring until it boils and is smooth, add the cocoanut, and simmer for one hour or longer. Like most curry mixtures this may even be improved by heating up a day after it is made and because of the spices keeps well. This curry is light brown. Serve with dry boiled rice and condiments, including lemon. Enough for four people.

Curry of Lamb for Two.

Cut a one-half pound shoulder chop into small cubes or use an equivalent amount of meat. Fry this in two tablespoons of butter with one onion cut fine until the lamb is gently browned. Stir in one tablespoon of browned flour mixed with from one-fourth to one-half teaspoon of curry powder and one-half teaspoon of salt. Add one cup of water or meat stock, stir till smooth while it is boiling up, put into a small casserole, and cook in a moderate oven for one hour. If the fat separates from this, pour it off before serving. This is a dark curry. Raisins may be added to it. Serve with boiled rice. Cold curry may be put into a casserole lined with cold boiled rice slightly moistened, covered, and heated up in the oven for half an hour.

Curry Sauce.

Brown an onion and one-half cup of celery cut fine in two ounces of butter. Add two tablespoons of browned flour mixed with one scant teaspoon of curry, stir till smooth, add one cup of water and stir and after it boils cook for one-half hour. Two cloves of chopped garlic fried with the onion improve this and a little lemon juice at the end will bring out its qualities wonderfully. Serve with rice or a mixture of vegetables or strain it for a macaroni sauce.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Watermelon and Orange Salad.

Remove the center of a thoroughly chilled watermelon and use for dessert; pass powdered sugar. Cut the less sweet layer of pink pulp into one-half inch cubes, or shape in balls, using a French potato ball cutter. Chill, pare, and cut sweet oranges into one-half inch cubes. There should be equal measure of watermelon and orange cubes. Arrange materials in pyramids in individual nests of crisp lettuce leaves or the bleached leaves of chicory (endive). Just before serving, mask with cream mayonnaise.

This combination makes a most delicious light salad that may be served at luncheon, following a light meat course.

To make cream mayonnaise, prepare mayonnaise in the usual way. To one cup of mayonnaise add one-fourth cup of triple cream, beaten until stiff. Chill and use as directed.

Blackberry Jam.

Pick over and wash firm, ripe blackberries. Mash a few at a time in an agate vessel until all are used. Measure, and for each pint of fruit allow the juice of one lemon and three-fourths cup of sugar for each cup of crushed fruit. Put fruit into an agate preserving kettle, heat to the boiling point, and cook slowly ten minutes, stirring often to prevent the seeds settling. Add lemon juice and gradually the sugar, stirring constantly until the boiling point is reached; then cook over a slow fire until thickened and the sirup jellies slightly when tested on a cold saucer. Remove from range, turn into sterilized glasses; when cold pour over a layer of paraffin, set the covers in place, and store in a cool, dry place.

It will be found that the addition of the lemon juice greatly improves the flavor of blackberry jam.

Spaghetti with Ham and Mushrooms.

Break spaghetti into one inch pieces. There should be one cup. Cook in boiling salted water until tender; drain and rinse with cold water and drain again. Cut cold boiled ham in narrow strips about one inch in length; there should be one-half cup. Peel and remove the stems from fresh mushrooms; cut the caps in narrow strips crosswise; there should be one-half cup. Mix ham and mushrooms, add one and one-half tablespoons of grated onion, and cook in two tablespoons of ham or bacon fat until moisture is driven off; add to spaghetti, toss lightly together, and pour over one and one-fourth cups of scalded thin cream or rich milk, lifting the mixture with two forks until thoroughly mixed with the cream or milk. Season well with salt, pepper, and a few grains of cayenne. Turn into a well buttered baking dish or casserole and sprinkle thickly with grated cheese (using one-half cup). Cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a hot oven until crumbs are brown.

Preserved Watermelon Rind.

Remove the green rind and all of the pink portion from sliced watermelon; cut rind into one-half inch cubes. Cover with a weak brine made of cold water and salt, allowing one tablespoon of salt to each quart of cold water; let stand overnight. Drain and rinse in cold water. Cover with boiling water and cook until tender; drain well in a colander. Weigh melon and allow three-fourths pound of sugar for each pound of melon, one-half ounce of sliced green ginger root, and one lemon. Thinly slice lemons, discard the seeds, and cook with ginger root in boiling water to cover until tender. Drain and reserve the water. Make a sirup of the sugar and water drained from the lemons and ginger; skim, add melon cubes, and cook until clear, transparent, and plump with absorbed sirup. Drain well from sirup and place cubes in half-pint glass fruit jars; add the lemon and ginger to the sirup and let cook until a thick sirup is formed. Fill jars with sirup, seal, and store.

Casaba melon may be preserved in the same manner, using orange and lemon and omitting the ginger.

Sweet Pickled Watermelon.

Remove the rind from sliced watermelon. Cut away all of the pink pulp and cut slices crosswise in one-half inch pieces or in two inch squares, cover with water, and cook until pieces can be readily pierced with a straw. Drain and dry on towels. Weigh melon and for seven pounds of prepared fruit allow four pounds of sugar for three cups of cider vinegar, one-half cup of cloves (heads removed to prevent discoloring pickles), one cup of cinnamon bark broken in small pieces; tie cloves and cinnamon loosely in a small square of cheese cloth and add to vinegar mixture with one-fourth cup of white mustard seed. Simmer until sirupy (about two hours). Add melon and simmer one hour. Store in sterilized fruit jars.

If vinegar sirup is allowed to boil rapidly much of it will be lost by evaporation. Do not tie mustard seed in the spice bag. The green rind and seeds of the watermelon are the only part that need be discarded.

Jellied Chicken Loaf.

Cook an old hen slowly in boiling water, seasoned with a few slices of carrot, one small sliced onion, a stalk of celery cut in inch pieces, a sprig of parsley, and one-half teaspoon of peppercorns; add one-half tablespoon of salt the last hour of cooking. Time of cooking, from three to four hours. The fowl should be so well done that the meat will fall from the bones. Remove the skin, bones, and all fat. Strain the liquor and return to the saucepan; reduce it to one and one-half cups, remove the fat, add one-fourth package of gelatin that has been soaked in two tablespoons of cold water, and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Pour some of the liquor into a brick shaped agate bread pan and allow it to set; over this arrange thinly sliced hard cooked eggs; then fill the mold with alternate layers of white and dark meat of the fowl. If necessary, add more seasoning to the liquor and pour it over the meat in the mold, and when cold chill on ice or in the refrigerator; it should stand over night, when it will become a jelly. Unmold on serving platter and surround with tomato filled with cauliflower moistened with mayonnaise dressing. Garnish with crisp lettuce leaves and parsley.

REAL LOVE STORIES

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

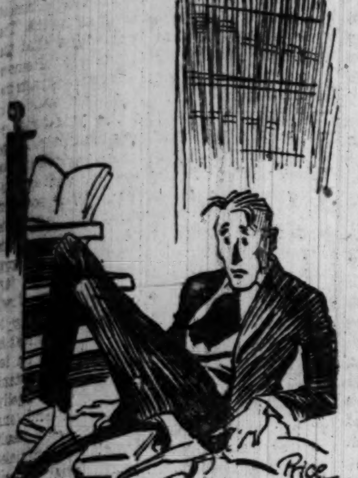
Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

THE DESCENT OF MAN.

My thoughts were thumbing with my fingers among the books in some stacks at the top of an iron stairway in a public library. I am a tall, awkward fellow and was standing all scrunched up, "with my head between my knees," lost in absorption, when a sweet contralto voice asked: "May I help you?"

"I'm looking for Darwin—want to learn something about the descent of man," was my replying mutter.

Something made me turn to look at my interrogator. She was brown eyed, plump, and gazed at me seriously through a frame of rumpled hair which betokened hard work. I was so surprised at such beauty that I inwardly gasped and stepped backward —down the iron stairway.



My frame is attenuated along the lines of Ichabod Crane's, with long, shambling legs, protruding elbows, and an Andy Gump neck. I fell in thundering somersaults down that stairway. Every attempt of mine to check the tumble resulted in a fresh sprawl, scattering my armful of books in four directions. Children shrieked in amusement, and the two dozen spectators roared. I lighted at the bottom, on my neck, amid a chorus of guffaws.

It must have been funny, for the stomach of the old English librarian shook up and down like a woman waving a rug as he exploded: "Gad, what a cropper!"

As you know, men who look like cartoons are usually sensitive about making themselves ridiculous. I looked at the audience, red as a beet, and then thought of the pretty little librarian who had startled me into my shame. Surely she would not laugh. In mental agony I glanced upward to see her little mouth wreathed in a smile. What a fool I had been—my last words to her were a desire to learn something about the descent of man, and—idiot—I had learned it!

Crestfallen and deeply humiliated, I tried to rise and fly, when it became apparent that something was wrong with the side of my face and my ankle. The laugh was over. The old Englishman called a somber gray ambulance and the crowd, now serious, saw me carried away to the hospital. Doctors said an operation was necessary to set the fractured jaw, and I muddled off to sleep under the ether, trying to remember some Bible phrases about Goliath and the jawbone of an ass—that was what I had been, an ass.

Mother and aunt called, putting gorgeous roses in my vase, and were surprised to discover that my fractured jaw prevented me from speaking. Visitors' hours were nearly over next day when the nurse escorted in Miss Brown Eyes, who had caused my downfall.

"I just wanted to tell you how sorry I am because of your accident," she apologized. "Here is the library card that you dropped."

I lay there like a dub, silent as a goldfish, because my jaws were swathed up in yards of bandages. She understood my inability to speak and carried on a little one sided conversation, while I cudgeled my brains for a way to communicate with her. The idea of talking on the fingers like children do in school occurred. She, too, had done it as a child, and read my thanks. I asked her to call again.

Day after day she dropped in on her way home, telling me the news of the day, while I spelled out a conversation to her. She usually wore dresses of cool lawn or dimity, so dainty and beautiful. How becoming a corsage those garden picked roses made. I crawled out of bed after she left, just to sniff the bouquets her hand had touched.

There came a time when I could talk and the flood gates of oratory were loosed. We planned canoe trips, hikes, and excursions without end. I went to her home and met her father, mother, two sisters, and brother. We were the occupants of the porch swing at night until even the moon got tired and went to bed, and it was not long before I was cutting down on my tobacco money to buy a diamond ring.

Today, after several years of marriage and a baby, Virginia is deeply sympathetic when my awkward fall is mentioned and declares that she didn't laugh at the time, never, never. She doesn't see anything funny in it like other people do, and it must be because she loves me. J. H. L.

Bright Sayings of Children

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Marjorie and Clea are prim little sisters and, as there is a baby brother, mamma has some trouble putting on the last touches and getting them away to school mornings. In the interest of discipline their teacher was obliged to lecture them on tardiness and next morning they were late as usual. She waited for them at the door, trying to look stern, but Clea upset all her dignity and cut her lecture short by quietly observing: "Well, we can't help it if you ring the bell too soon." M. C.

"It wasn't fair to mark me down in that word in spelling," said Jane as she came in from school. "I had all its letters in but I didn't arrange them right." S. J. C.

Ansel and James had disagreed about something and refused to play with each other. Finally mother persuaded James, who seemed to be most in the wrong, to make overtures to his brother; but Ansel failed to meet him half way. Then mother said: "What makes you so stubborn? If James wants to make up, it is your place to forgive." "O, I don't mind forgiving him," Ansel replied, "but he hasn't shown enough sorry yet." F. E. W.

We were thoroughly enjoying the feature picture. It was interesting, exciting, thrilling—when suddenly the picture was cut off and the screen was left bare.

"Oh," I remarked to my sister, "isn't that a shame, just at the most interesting part they cut it off."

"Maybe they forgot their parts," suggested my sister. A. D. B.

Father found his little daughter crying bitterly because she had had a tumble.

"Never mind, Mildred," he said, "won't a chocolate make it better?"

"No," said the child between her sobs; "but two would do it." B. B. W.

Helen had a good imagination. One day, when playing blind man's buff, she was seen crawling on all fours. The "blind man" stumbled over her and when she uncovered her eyes and asked why Helen was down on her knees, Helen replied: "I thought you would think it was a dog." B. D.

Emil was asked one day how it was that his heels were so rundown on one side. "O," he said, looking at his heels, "that must be from running around corners, I guess."

During the examinations at the close of school, the fourth grade teacher asked her history class to name the five most important men of the recent war. One boy, in all seriousness, answered the question thus: "General Pershing, President Wilson, General Foch, my big brother Tom and Andy Sullivan's brother Pat." R. R. C.

Mixed Summer Foods The Cause Of Much Indigestion

SUMMER days are days of careless living, kitchens too hot for cooking, cold lunches at the homes of friends, open-air picnics, with the result that many a family is down with indigestion.

Give the stomach and bowels a new start by taking a dose of a good laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then put variety into your diet by eating more warm food. It is more easily digested.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size. It acts so gently and safely that it can be given even to a baby in constipation, indigestion, "summer colds" and similar ills.

The formula on which Syrup Pepsin is based was written by Dr. Caldwell over 30 years ago. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that trains the stomach-muscles to do their work naturally so that medicines can again be dispensed with. Over 6 million bottles of Syrup Pepsin are sold by druggists every year. That is recommendation in itself.

If you have never used Syrup Pepsin, send your address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

The Last of the Lilies.

One day at a circus I had on a hat the crown of which was covered with lilies and green leaves. I was standing in front of the lions' cage when I felt something pulling at the top of my hat and every one was laughing. When I looked up to see what was wrong the giraffe in the next cage was just swallowing the last of the lilies of my hat. M. F.

He Saw Very Well.

I had employed a piano tuner for several years who was blind. One day he brought another man when he came to tune the piano, asking my permission to teach him some things about piano tuning. I left them in the parlor by themselves and when they had finished, I was dressing to go out.

Knowing they were blind and rather than keep them waiting, I went in to pay the tuner in rather scant attire. I remarked to the stranger, "It is nice for you blind people that there is work like this for you to do."

"O, madam," he replied, "I'm not blind, in fact I see very well."

I nearly died and fled from the room. K. G.

Wanting to Hellp.

Not long ago I was walking down a street when I noticed a small boy trying to ring a door bell of which he lacked about two inches of reaching, so wanting to help him I rang the bell for him. As I did so he exclaimed: "Now run like the devil." I started to run, but too late. My embarrassment trying to explain to the woman of the house can be imagined. J. H.

Not Every Day.

The hairdresser had curled and combed my hair beautifully, after the weekly shampoo. A short time after I reached the bank where I worked a woman came to my window to transact some business and before she left she admired my coiffure and asked if my hair was naturally curly. I answered "yes."

I have never been able to account for telling this story.

The next day it poured rain and, of course, the dampness made my hair as straight as an arrow. To my great dismay I saw the same woman come into the bank and stop again at my window for some information. She happened to look at my head and when she saw my hair she smilingly said, "Why, I thought you said it was naturally curly?" I never said a word, just flushed scarlet with embarrassment. V. S.

Correct.

The teacher asked what the word ungrammatical meant. I raised my hand and the teacher said, "Well, Alice, what does it mean?" I replied, "When somebody don't use proper English?" Needless to say there was much laughter. A. W.

Not Friend Husband.

My friend and I were downtown shopping one evening and were waiting for a car home, when we saw a man across the street whom we thought was my friend's husband. We motioned for him to come over. He did come and then we saw our mistake, for neither one of us knew him. F. I.

Too Slow for the Party.

One evening I started gayly forth with a party of friends off for a good time. I was wearing a new frock that had been tried only indoors. It had looked charming and innocent, and seemed all that could be desired. But, as I fared forth, I found that I could not walk even at a moderate pace. My skirt was too narrow for outdoor walking. Camp Stories Contest.

When Bill Met the Cooties.

It happened last summer at the Canadian army headquarters, West Sandling camp, England. My friend, Private Bill, tender skinned as a maiden, possessed a morbid fear of vermin and had sworn solemnly that his acquaintance with the cootie forces should be a distant one.

In order to immunize himself, Bill decorated his body with great quantities of perfumed powders from overseas, guaranteed to frighten the little pests away. Bill used to laugh at our discomfiture. We had long since decided to follow the line of least resistance and permit our mischievous little enemies to work their havoc.

Then one day Bill came to me pale of face and noticeably agitated.

"Pete!" he whispered hoarsely, "I've got some terrible disease; my back is covered with a violent rash!"

I repressed my mirth and solemnly examined him and advised him to consult the doctor at once. I did not see Bill again for two days. He grinned sheepishly when I met him.

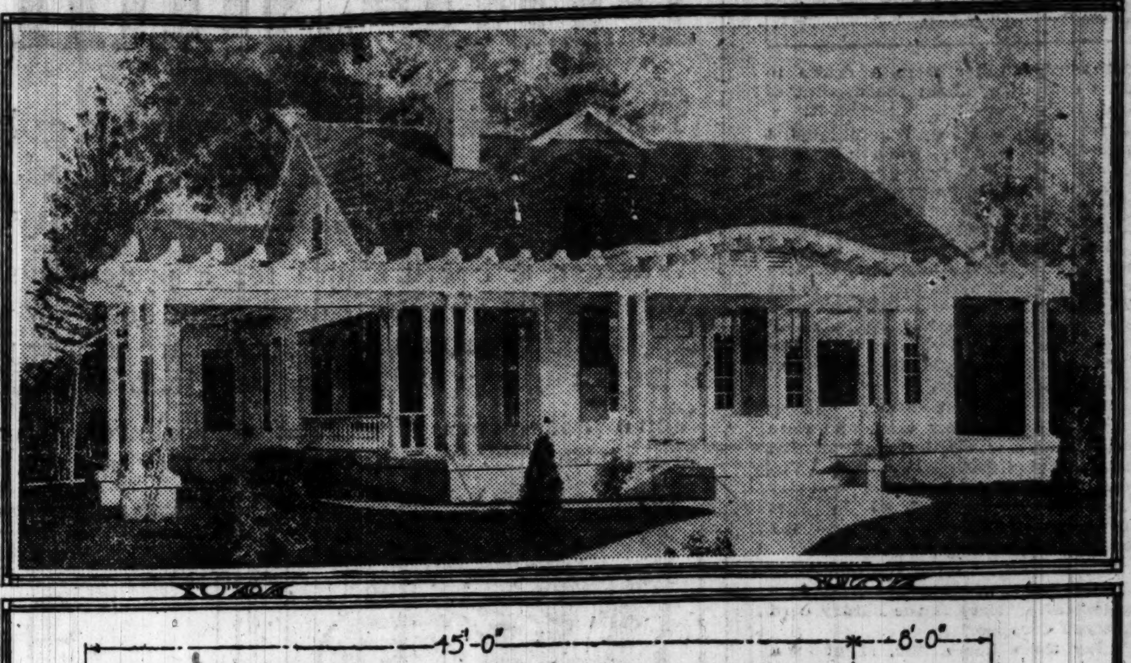
"How's the rash?" I asked, solicitously.

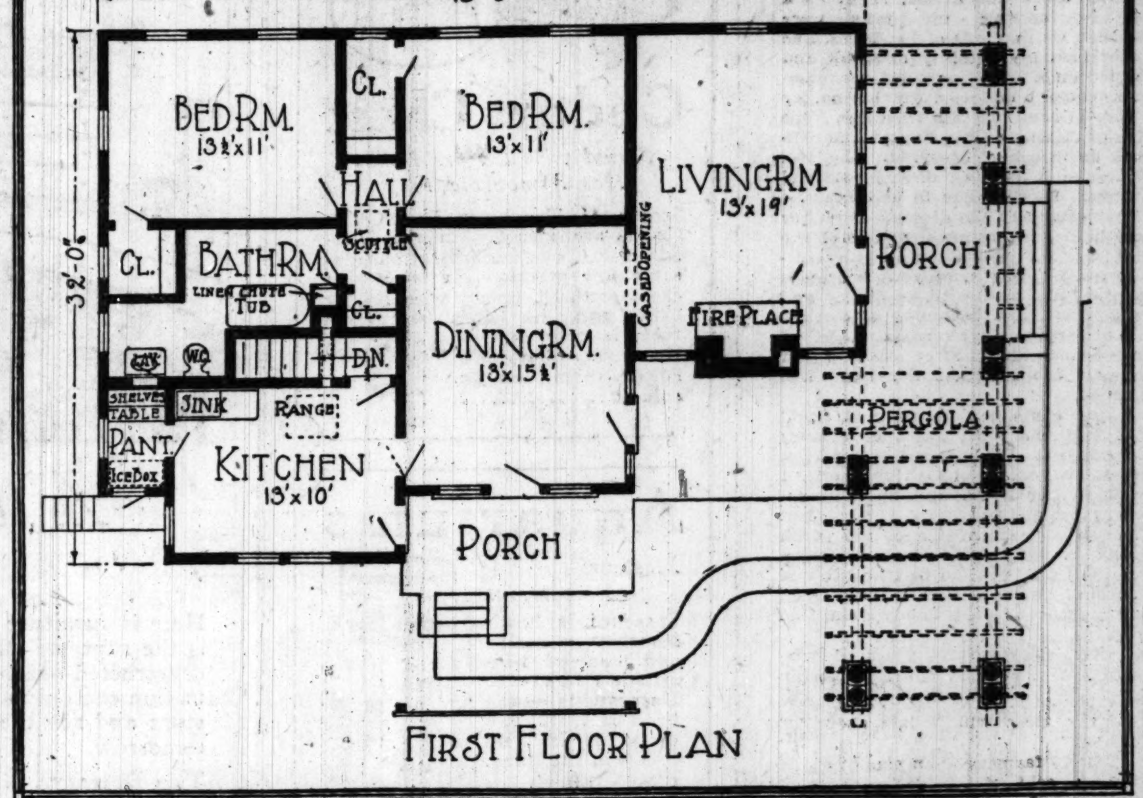
"Rash, nothing!" he muttered. "I made a regular darn fool of myself before that doctor. I insisted that I had it and he had to get a magnifying glass and show me the back of my shirt to make me realize the awful truth. There were millions of 'em!" Bill uttered the last words with a wail, shuddering with the memory.

Before we sailed for Canada Bill had six more attacks of the "rash" and didn't half mind the lice when we reached home. L. B. B.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi





An Attractive Suburban Home

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

OSCAR WILDE said nature is a great imitator, that all you have to do is to imagine some fairly impossible thing, and nature promptly produces it. This is apropos of my having told a builder a few weeks ago that I wanted a purple house. I said if I could have a little holiday house to slip away to, away from the stress of life, it should be a tiny place in plum colored stain with a brown shingle roof, and the whole thing artfully touched with exquisitely tinted mold and moss. It would be hidden away deep in the woods—a purple shadow among purple shadows.

Well, the next time I saw the builder he hailed me exultantly with, "I've got something to show you," and he brought out a sample of wood that had been sent to him from Panama, a natural wood in a lovely, violet color! He told me he was going to follow my suggestion, and have a "run" on purple houses.

Now if you can imagine anything uglier than a lot of purple houses out in the broad daylight—well, don't; nature might produce it.

In choosing the color scheme for the exterior of the house two conditions must be kept in mind—that it should be consistent with the style of architecture and that it should be suitable to the surroundings. Simplicity and fitness are essential. The neighboring houses must be carefully considered. Any one who will paint his house in the color and style that clashes with others in the vicinity is as bad and disagreeable as the man who puts up a spite fence.

The selection of color for your house is of the most material importance. Two houses built just exactly alike may vary greatly, in point of being salable, on this score alone. No one will covet a tawdry looking house, however well it may be constructed. It must be equally well decorated and properly surrounded by well planned grounds. There must be absolute unison between the color scheme, the grounds, and the vicinity.

Generally speaking, a house that is set in among trees should not be painted green or olive; a contrasting color would be better. It must, however, be properly neutralized.

Pure white is popular for certain styles of country houses and suburban houses—it seems to fit itself to a green background, particularly when trimmed, as the little house in the illustration is, with green shutters. Notice the pergola effect all the way around in this model. The whole scheme speaks of the country and has a fresh cleanliness about it that would not "stay put" in a factory town or other smoky locality. The same house nearer the city should be painted French or pearl gray instead of white.

When the upper stories of a house are shingled the best plan is to paint the lower story a lighter tint of the same color—whatever that may be; or, if a contrast is desired, at least let the lower part be lighter in tone than the shingles. Olive goes well with Indian red shingles, because Indian red is mixed with green to make olive; cream or ivory goes well with brown shingles, and gray paint may safely be used with dark green or dull red.

Bungalows of the California type are usually at their best in sand color with dark brown stained trim, and with red brick paved porches.

New England colonial houses call for white or light buff with green or blue blinds.

The Dutch colonial with its gambrel roof and gray stone chimneys, so suggestive, even from the outside, of a fine fireplace hospitality, permits of different color treatments. The walls are usually light in tone, with details in white to emphasize the fineness of the moldings, and the shutters are either brown or green.

The half timber houses, so lastingly pleasing in color, are in light tone plaster panels, trimmed with dark timber that is stained rather than painted. Dark green or brown may be used for the timber and barges and russet tones for the roof shingles, with strong color accents for the sash and other small parts.

A building material that is greatly on the increase for "modest homes" is concrete or hollow tile, with concrete or hollow facing. The emphasis given to the long horizontal lines, the low hipped roof, and the grouped windows with the broad contrasting wall surfaces, is strongly suggestive of Italian houses. Colors are light. The roof is of tile or slate in red or brown, while the side wall almost invariably shows two colors: the walls, for instance, are buff and windows and door frames are dark green.

More important than this color scheme itself is the choice of paint. Be sure to use pure white lead and pure linseed oil. Get the best ingredients, and have them mixed on your premises. The best materials rightly mixed, and applied in coats of proper thickness, will result in a job that will defer the day of repainting for several good long years.

For Your Complexion's Sake—Don't Use a Dry Powder on Dry Skin

You May Get the Color Tint, But You Lose the Velvet Soft Texture That LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER Always Gives.

There is only one complexion maker that is really in competition with Mother Nature—and that is LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER. And there are mighty few—if any—complexions that wonderful LA MEDA won't improve.

LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER leaves the flesh velvet soft, aglow with health and renewed vigor, and powdered so evenly that detection is practically impossible.

A LA MEDA toilet will remain perfect throughout the day—defying heat or cold, wind, rain or perspiration.

For the Face, Arms, Neck, Back and Bust, LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER is the ideal requisite.

LA MEDA does not owe its superiority simply to the fact that it is a combination of cream and powder. It is the way they are combined—the patented process by which they are blended—that makes LA MEDA so far preferable to the use of cream and powder in separated form.

LA MEDA is beneficial to any skin, cannot promote the growth of hair, and is most agreeably pleasant and easy to use.

It banishes forever the necessity of frequent dabbing of powder puff—for no nose will be "shiny" for twenty-four hours after a LA MEDA toilet.

Any dealer can get LA MEDA COLD CREAMED POWDER for you, or we will send it postpaid upon receipt of 65 cents a jar.

It is prepared in three tints—Flesh, White and Peachblow.

A sample will be mailed free upon post card request, giving your name, address and tint desired.

Brand New Way to Remove Hairy Growths

(Actually Removes Roots and All)

The vexed question of how to completely banish superfluous hair has been solved at last! By means of the new phelactine process, the hairs entire, roots and all, come out before your very eyes—easily, harmlessly, "quick as a wink." It is so different from the depilatory, electrical and shaving methods, you simply must try it to fully appreciate its remarkable advantages.

Phelactine is perfectly odorless, non-irritating, non-poisonous—a child could eat it without the least injury. It leaves the skin so soft, smooth and hairless, no one could tell you ever had a mustache or other hairy growth. If you will procure a stick of Phelactine from your druggist and follow the simple instructions, you will certainly be astonished and delighted with the result.

Lift Off Corns!

Doesn't hurt! Lift touchy corns and calluses right off with fingers

Apply a few drops of "Freezone" upon that old, bothersome corn. Instantly that corn stops hurting. Then shortly you lift it right off, root and all, without pain or soreness.

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, and the hard skin calluses on bottom of feet lift right off—no humbug!

Tiny bottles of "Freezone" cost but a few cents at drug stores

My Baby's First Summer

WHEN the days and the nights began to be hot and sultry, my baby began to droop. He lost a little weight and he was fretful at night—he who had always slept so well!

I thought a baby properly cared for should be as well and as happy in summer as in winter, so I asked my doctor.

"Why, of course", he said. "Heat never bothers a well baby. We must make the curds of his milk easier to digest. We'll give him Nestlé's Milk Food."

So now I know I don't have to be afraid of hot weather. With plenty of cool baths and light enough clothing, and with Nestlé's digesting easily in that little stomach, my baby goes happily on to health and strength.

Nestlé's is just pure milk in powder form, to which has been added cereal and sugar. You only add water to it and boil. All the good of milk has been kept in, and all the germ dangers of raw milk kept out.

I know the Nestlé Company will be glad to send you free enough Nestlé's Food for twelve feedings, and a very good Mother's Book on how to take care of babies, if you will fill out and send the coupon to them.

They want to take away your fear of hot weather, as they did mine.

NESTLÉ'S MILK FOOD

Nestlé's is pure milk in powder form that is already modified and does not require the further addition of milk. Always pure and safe, always uniform, and free from the dangers of home modification, Nestlé's has stood the test of three generations and has today the largest sale of any baby food in the world.

FREE! Enough Nestlé's for 12 feedings. Send the coupon!

BETTER CARE OF THE PIG

By Frank Ridgway.

Feeding pigs grain in self-feeders where sows are not allowed concentrates.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

HIGH prices now being paid for meat, especially pork, have stimulated interest in the growing of hogs. Men who own a small tract of land are taking a hand with the farmer in filling the pork barrel. Many of them are just starting in the business and are consequently meeting with new problems every day. In most every case the object is to get the pig on the market as quickly as possible, and to do this it must be given every opportunity from the time of birth until it reaches the butcher's block.

There was a time when the pig was turned loose on the range or in the pasture to root for himself until fall, and was lucky if he did not miss his supper. But times have changed, and along with it the attitude of the hog raiser. The pig is now a pampered pet and is given every advantage throughout his short career. He is properly housed at farrowing time, vaccinated against cholera and "flu" when a small shoat; he is furnished clean drinking water instead of a mud hole to drink from, a self-feeder to run to when he is big enough to eat, and a self-oiler to keep his skin soft. Within the last few years he has been provided with a delousing station, and now he is to have an iceless refrigerator where he may be comfortable in hot weather.

Most all of these devices have passed through the experimental stages and have been found necessary if maximum gains are to be obtained. They have been simplified until now they are inexpensive. The farmer realizes that he is well repaid for the money expended in providing these comforts when a single hog 8 months old will bring from $40 to $50 on the market today, and there are reasons to believe that prices will remain high for some time.

Age for Weaning.

The principal trouble up to this season of the year has been in the saving of the pigs at farrowing time and the proper feeding and caring for the sow to furnish nourishment for the litter. Now the serious problem comes in the weaning of the spring and summer pigs, and with the beginner this cannot be emphasized too much, for unless they are skillfully handled when separated from the sow their growth may be stunted.

There is a difference of opinion among hog raisers as to the age a pig should be when he is weaned. This depends somewhat on the number of litters grown each year and the method of weaning. One litter a year was the general practice for a long time, but during the last few years with the increased demand and the consequent high prices this method has changed, and now the tendency is to have pigs farrowed in the spring and fall. In this case each sow grows two litters a year.

A variety of successful methods of weaning pigs is practiced and no single rule that is superior to all others could be laid down. With beginners it is well to follow the practices of old, experienced hog raisers, and farmers who grow hundreds of hogs every year are usually able to give some helpful advice. M. J. Thatcher of Liscomb, Ia., a successful breeder, has been raising two litters a year from each one of his sows for about six years. "I raise from 240 to 250 pigs every year, and I consider weaning time the most important stage of the pig's life," he said.

Sows in Clover.

"Last year I had twelve sows that produced two litters, one in the spring and the other in the fall, and they averaged about twelve pigs to the litter or twenty-four for the year. I am careful with my pigs and I find that it pays. My sows are kept in good condition the year around, and I never allow them to get thin. While the pigs are nursing I keep the sow in a good clover pasture. This is an excellent milk producing food, and I feed little grain. The sows stay in good condition and the pigs require little attention while they are running with their mother.

"I have already weaned my spring pigs, and I follow a fairly definite system in feeding them after they are separated from the sow. Where two litters are grown I find it best to wean the pigs when they are about 6 weeks old. Then it is easy to get the sows in good shape before the next litter is farrowed. Weaning at this age is not the common practice and perhaps has its disadvantages, but I can't remember when I have lost a single pig after they had been separated from the sow.

"For the first week or ten days after weaning the pigs I keep them in a dry lot, and feed them on a swill made of oats and oil meal soaked in water. In making this mixture I use three gallons of oil meal to a barrel of oats, allowing for enough water to make a thin swill. I keep the sow in the pasture and never allow the pigs to nurse after that. At the end of this period, after the pigs have become accustomed to the new feed, I turn them in a clover field and continue giving them the swill. In addition to this they have access to a self-feeder filled with shell corn, and another feeder with condition powders or tankage. They are kept on this ration until sold. I usually market my hogs when they are about eight months old, and have them weighing from 210 to 250 pounds."

In order to get two litters a year Mr. Thatcher breeds his sows in about twenty-one days after farrowing. He figures that it costs a little more to grow pigs in the fall than in the spring, but considers the profits big enough to justify the extra feed and care.

Pigs Wean Themselves.

"The proper age to wean pigs depends to a great extent on the method employed," said Ed Hotle of Keota, Iowa. "I keep my sows on blue grass and clover pasture and feed them oats and corn while the pigs are sucking. When the pigs get big enough to eat I feed them on oats, corn, and tankage in separate self-feeders placed in pens where the sow cannot get to them. In this way the pigs will wean themselves when they are about ten weeks old, and there is not that sudden change of ration. They are kept on this feed until marketed. In about eight months they weigh around 250 pounds, and if I decide to keep them longer I use a cheaper ration. At the age of eleven months they will weigh about 300 pounds."

"Many farmers wean pigs at six and seven weeks of age, when the brood sows have a good flow of milk and are capable of maintaining the young in excellent condition and development at less expense and trouble than the young porkers could otherwise be handled. Their mother's milk is one of the best feeds available for growing pigs, and consequently it should be used to the greatest extent possible," says the United States department of agriculture.

The specialists further say that when the pigs are from 6 to 7 weeks old the sow should be on full feed, unless for some extraordinary reason the pigs should not be weaned until the age of 10 weeks, and in such instances it is preferable to allow them to run with their mother until they are 12 to 14 weeks old. When pigs are weaned too early serious results often attend, as abrupt changes in the character of the ration many times create serious trouble.

Cooling System in Hot Weather.

Pigs should be watched closely during the summer months, and the change of feed is sometimes necessary to keep them with a good appetite. The man who has only a few to take care of can easily provide all of the comforts that are needed. Hot weather is hard on pigs that are being fattened and if not given proper care they gain slowly or may lose weight. The iceless refrigerator seems to be a practical means of helping the fat pig along. It is made by inclosing a frame in canton flannel or burlap sacks. Then place a can of fresh water on top of the frame and provide burlap wicks to extend over the sides of the pan and down the sides of the frame. The water is carried to all parts of the frame and the evaporation of moisture keeps the refrigerator cool. The frame also provides a shade for the hogs.

Diseases and parasites must be guarded against. It is advisable to vaccinate against hog cholera when the pigs weigh about 100 pounds, especially if there is an epidemic of the disease in the community. Lice and worms are too common parasites of the hog and are usually present if steps are not taken to prevent. Lice may be eradicated by spraying the hogs with one of the standard stock dips.

There are various remedies for worms, including turpentine, charcoal, and salt, wood ashes, copperas, and lye. The Iowa experiment station recommends the following mixture for intestinal worms: For a fifty pound pig a dose of 2.5 grains of santonin, 1 dram of areca nut, 0.5 grains of calomel, and 0.5 dram sodium bicarbonate. The amount should be doubled for a 100 pound pig. The pig should not be fed any food for twenty-four hours before giving the treatment, and the dose should be repeated in about eight days to be sure the worms are expelled.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

SPEAKING OF RELATIVES.

> Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

CONSTANT and continued criticism of minor vices is at best a thankless and disagreeable task, but inasmuch as it frequently results in curing them, it seems not only permissible but advisable. Among these apparently trifling faults so often brought to the public eye in the fond hope of exterminating them, there is one which needs an immediate and effective remedy. This is the custom of speaking to one's husband as "Mr. So-and-So," or one's wife as "Mrs. So-and-So."

As recently as last week I had occasion to hear a group of well educated, charming women discussing domestic affairs and problems, and out of some twelve or fifteen, only three referred to their husbands correctly. This was rather startling when it is realized that they were women accustomed to managing maids and chauffeurs, and to all the other luxuries of a modern Easy street existence.

Before children, servants, and clerks only is it proper to call one's husband "Mr.," one's wife "Mrs.," one's daughter or sister "Miss." In all other cases the person mentioned should be spoken of as "my husband," "my wife," "my daughter," or "my sister," or, in intimate circles, by his or her first name.

Well bred people never appear to notice such errors, but to sensitive ears they are as irritating and disturbing as were the crumpled rose leaves in the bed of the princess in the old fairy tale, and as such should be attended to and done away with forever.

E. G. J.: Usually a wise daughter-in-law will wait until her new mother asks her to call her mother before doing so. However, this is the customary thing to expect.

Motor's the Thing in Lake Forest; Everybody Rides

By Mme. X.

THE shortest road to fame is not to be the best in any line of endeavor, but to be quite alone in it; to be unique, not supreme. The writer claims distinction, if not fame, in being the only person, old or young, of high or low degree, rich or poor, who walks along the umbrageous, spick and span, aristocratic and winding highways and byways of Lake Forest. Every one else, from the bloated bondholder to the darky garbage boy, is awheel.

Flivvers and swellest of cars crowd the asphalt roads, but the sidewalks stretch untrod for miles and miles. There are even districts in certain sections of the community where the pedestrian is so utterly ignored that there are no sidewalks at all prepared for his or her weary feet. Although some of the most beautiful places in this most beautiful of summer resorts border these streets, the foot passenger has to stumble along the dusty irregularities of the grass or weed grown wayside or, on the roadway, have motors charge her from the front or ride up her back.

What Motorists Miss.

At first the solitary pedestrian was beset by a sense of set apartness, loneliness, and general forlornness, a sense born of a naturally gregarious instinct. This was soon followed, however, by the realization that whizzing along a road exchanges all the myriad exquisite beauties of the way for the one irresistible craving for the excitement of swift motion, an appetite as absorbing as that for alcohol, nicotine, or drugs, and sometimes as intoxicating and dangerous.

The motorist doesn't note the silhouette of green oak leaves against the blue sky, the iridescence of the plumage of the humming bird as it hovers over a bed of petunias, the hurrying troups of burden bearing ants. Also there's a harvest of health and physical wellbeing reaped by the foot passenger unknown to the plethoric or high strung motorist.

With such comforting reflections we shall continue to wend our slow and solitary way. Had the fox of the fable but sung of the superiority of the attainable strawberry over the high hung grape he might have won fame as a philosopher and he'd certainly have been happier.

Entertains Notable Guests.

The most notable and interesting guests Lake Forest—for I seem to be singing of Lake Forest this Sunday—has had in many a long day are the American artist, Robert Henri (pronounced Hen-rye) and his strikingly good looking wife. He stands at the top of the artistic ladder, is a wizard with the brush, and a very remarkable personality. We have no greater genius among American painters today, no one whose exhibits draw larger crowds or attract more comment from critics.

He came out here to paint a portrait of the Edward Bennett's young son, Edward Jr.

His methods of painting a portrait are interesting. He wields the brush swiftly, brilliantly on portrait after portrait of his sitter until one flashes on the canvas that satisfies his desires. He paints with his left hand, and always when he works his wife, who is herself an artist, sits by his side silently observing, evidently a necessary, though wordless, inspiration.

So successful was he in the picture of the 3 year old boy, a spirited presentation of childhood, that he is now painting Mrs. Bennett's likeness.

Henri's Circus Posters.

He tells an amusing story of two of his pictures, which he calls the most exhibited canvases in the country. One of his earliest commissions, given to him when he was young and unknown, was to paint a portrait of the proprietor of a well known equestrian show, an enterprise that traveled the length and breadth of the land, transporting its trained horses and riders in a string of special cars. He made two likenesses of his sitter, emphasizing in both a gorgeous diamond studded cravat pin. So pleased was his patron that he, the patron, bought both canvases, paying $25 apiece for them.

Many years later, in a railway yard, Mr. Henri, then grown famous, saw a train of cars on a siding, with one car more gorgeous than the others, and with a strangely familiar air to part of its decoration. Approaching it, he discovered one of these early portraits panelled to the outside and set under plate gass. Wondering what had become of its twin, he stepped around to the other side of the car and found it there, similarly affixed.

In appearance Mr. Henri is of medium size and slender build, with dark, slightly grizzled hair and with the keen, impassivity in his expression which one associates rather with great generals or great gamblers than with supposedly more impressionable artists. But when he is at work his whole aspect changes as if an inner flame glowed through him, and he paints like one inspired, each stroke telling on the canvas. Frequently the final product is the fruit of a few hours' furious work, though his subject may have sat to him for days.

He says that he made up his mind early in life that he would marry none but a woman with red hair. Mrs. Henri's hair is the loveliest Titian red bronze, and she winds it in one flat sweep close around her well shaped head and fastens it with a small comb at the top towards the front, in a fashion only possible to a young and exceedingly comely woman. She is her husband's "alter ego" in every sense of the term, aiding, understanding, and appreciating his work as only an artist can.

Three Social Sets.

At this season of the year Lake Forest is probably the liveliest place, socially speaking, west of Newport. Although its many different sets don't mingle much, each indulges in a round of entertainment that keeps its members continually on the go.

There are the conservative, well intrenched old families who have had their summer homes there for a generation or more. They give dinners and luncheons and occasionally go to Ravinia park's opera.

Then there is the bridge playing set who daily meet at luncheons and dinners and play cards long hours on screened porches or in softly lit drawing rooms. They almost never go to Ravinia's music—not, that is, if they can help it, though they do vary cards for an occasional dance.

Lastly there is the young set, the really young set, who motor, and swim, and play tennis or golf strenuously, and who dance every night so hard that the gunpowder runs out of the heels of their shoes. Wild horses wouldn't drag them to Ravinia. They are rather terrifying to their elders, they are so sophisticated, so sufficient to themselves, so oblivious to all else. I've seen parents and older folk hovering quite unnoticed on the outskirts of a group of young folk and looking bewildered, puzzled, and deprecatory. Some of the debutantes with their perfectly marcelled hair, their dazzling complexions, their striking costumes make their own mothers seem like simple diffident ingenues.

New After War Spirit.

In every generation youth has always tugged at the leash, but either they tug harder now or the leash is longer, as they seem further away from their progenitors than the youth of preceding ages.

Undoubtedly the war has had much to do with this emancipation of the young. Lads who have trained men in this country, crossed the sea with them, and led them up to the mouth of hell in Flanders do not settle down easily to family life or the routine office work again. Girls who have done Red Cross work in foreign or home canteens, or served in motor corps do not accept readily Mrs. Grundy's irksome yoke. Why should a young woman who has driven regular army officers or secret service men on out of the way routes, or who has served cigarets, coffee, and advice to thousands of soldiers be tied to a chaperon's apron strings, or deprived of a latch key?

It is small wonder that there's a general inclination on the part of the youth of both sexes to kick over the traces and keep late hours, tear about the land in swift motors, and burn their candles at both ends. The offspring of the strictest, most God fearing parents are the most audacious in their departure from conventions. Daughters whose mothers would allow no smoking in their domains are the most furious devotees to nicotine. Perhaps it is all a part of the after the war reaction which was inevitable. The swing of the pendulum is almost at its farthest; it must soon pause and begin its return trip.

McKinlock Memorial Service.

The other side of the picture is the almost terrifying beauty of youth which was epitomized in the memorial service held last Monday afternoon in the Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest, for young George Alexander McKinlock, commonly known as Alexander McKinlock, who fell fighting in France last August. Many of his comrades, both at school, at college, and in the service, were there. Four young men came from the east just for the hour's service in the little rural church. They arrived at noon and departed that same night. The church was crowded with old and young.

An impressive feature was the entrance in single file of the 200 Red Cross canteen workers who for eighteen months have served our going and returning soldier boys so faithfully under the leadership of Alexander's mother, Mrs. George McKinlock. In their trim uniforms they looked what they are—a band of earnest, efficient women.

But the most conspicuous element in the church was the young people. One looked at them and recognized them as part of the great national youth whose beautiful enthusiasm and courage saved this country. Every young face wore a tender, serious expression most touching to see.

Dr. Thayer of St. Mark's school, Alexander McKinlock's teacher, came on from the east to make the memorial address.

The church was radiant with masses of white flowers, mainly lilies and roses.

The young man, whose short heroic life was so commemorated, was a handsome, rather quiet and studious lad though fond of sports as well as of books. He was his parents' only child. Although he was but a short time in that dreadful front line that ran from the channel to the Alps, he won the Distinguished Service order, and the Croix de Guerre with a palm, before, "with swift surprise, death flashed the truth eternal in his eyes."

Perhaps he was no braver, no more heroic than millions of other young men who have since 1914 laid down their lives on life's very threshold, but he typifies them all.

Mother Gave Loving Service.

If an especially bright light is turned on him now it is because of the way his mother transformed her great love for him into a splendid flame that cheered and lighted the way for thousands of his comrades in arms. She had started her canteen work and organized her corps almost at the outset of our entrance into the war.

Although she heard of her son's death last August she did not at the time believe it. The report was incomplete. She never faltered a moment; in fact, her efforts redoubled. Every soldier boy was her Alexander. She spoke to them and won their hearts as no one else could. No hour was too early in the morning or too late at night for her to be called from her home to meet trainloads of American fighters en route through Chicago. She was the only person beside a few army chiefs who knew when and by what roads these military convoys were to pass this way. General Wood and other war experts have pronounced her canteen station as leading all others in the country.

Goes to Son's Grave.

When spring came and her work was nearly done, or so well organized that she could leave it to her devoted aids, Mrs. Morris Johnston and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, she got the necessary passports and papers and went to France to search for her only son.

She went almost direct to his grave, which the army authorities in France, after a ten months' search, had been unable to locate. There, hanging on a little cross, was his helmet, with his name inside. On the cross it was written, "McKinlow," which had up to then been sufficient to conceal the grave from the keen scrutiny of those hunting for it.

There are millions of heroic lads like young Alexander sleeping under the soil of Europe, Asia, and Africa, but there are not millions of mothers like his, whose love for her son enveloped the sons of many unknown mothers.

Polo at Onwentsia.

Lake Forest—by now the reader might almost suspect that we were living there—has many sports—golf, tennis, swimming, and riding—but the most absorbingly interesting to the onlooker is polo. They finished a week ago yesterday. a series of matches between the Onwentsia polo team and that of Dayton, O., which attracted the whole countryside as spectators. To the wives, mothers, and sisters of the players it's a sort of Roman holiday, and as a rule they don't draw a comfortable breath until the play is over.

John Towne that Saturday got a nasty whack on the back of his head from the hard driven ball, but its force was somewhat broken by his cap, and after having the bruise well sopped with what looked like a large, fat horse sponge, he pluckily went on with the game.

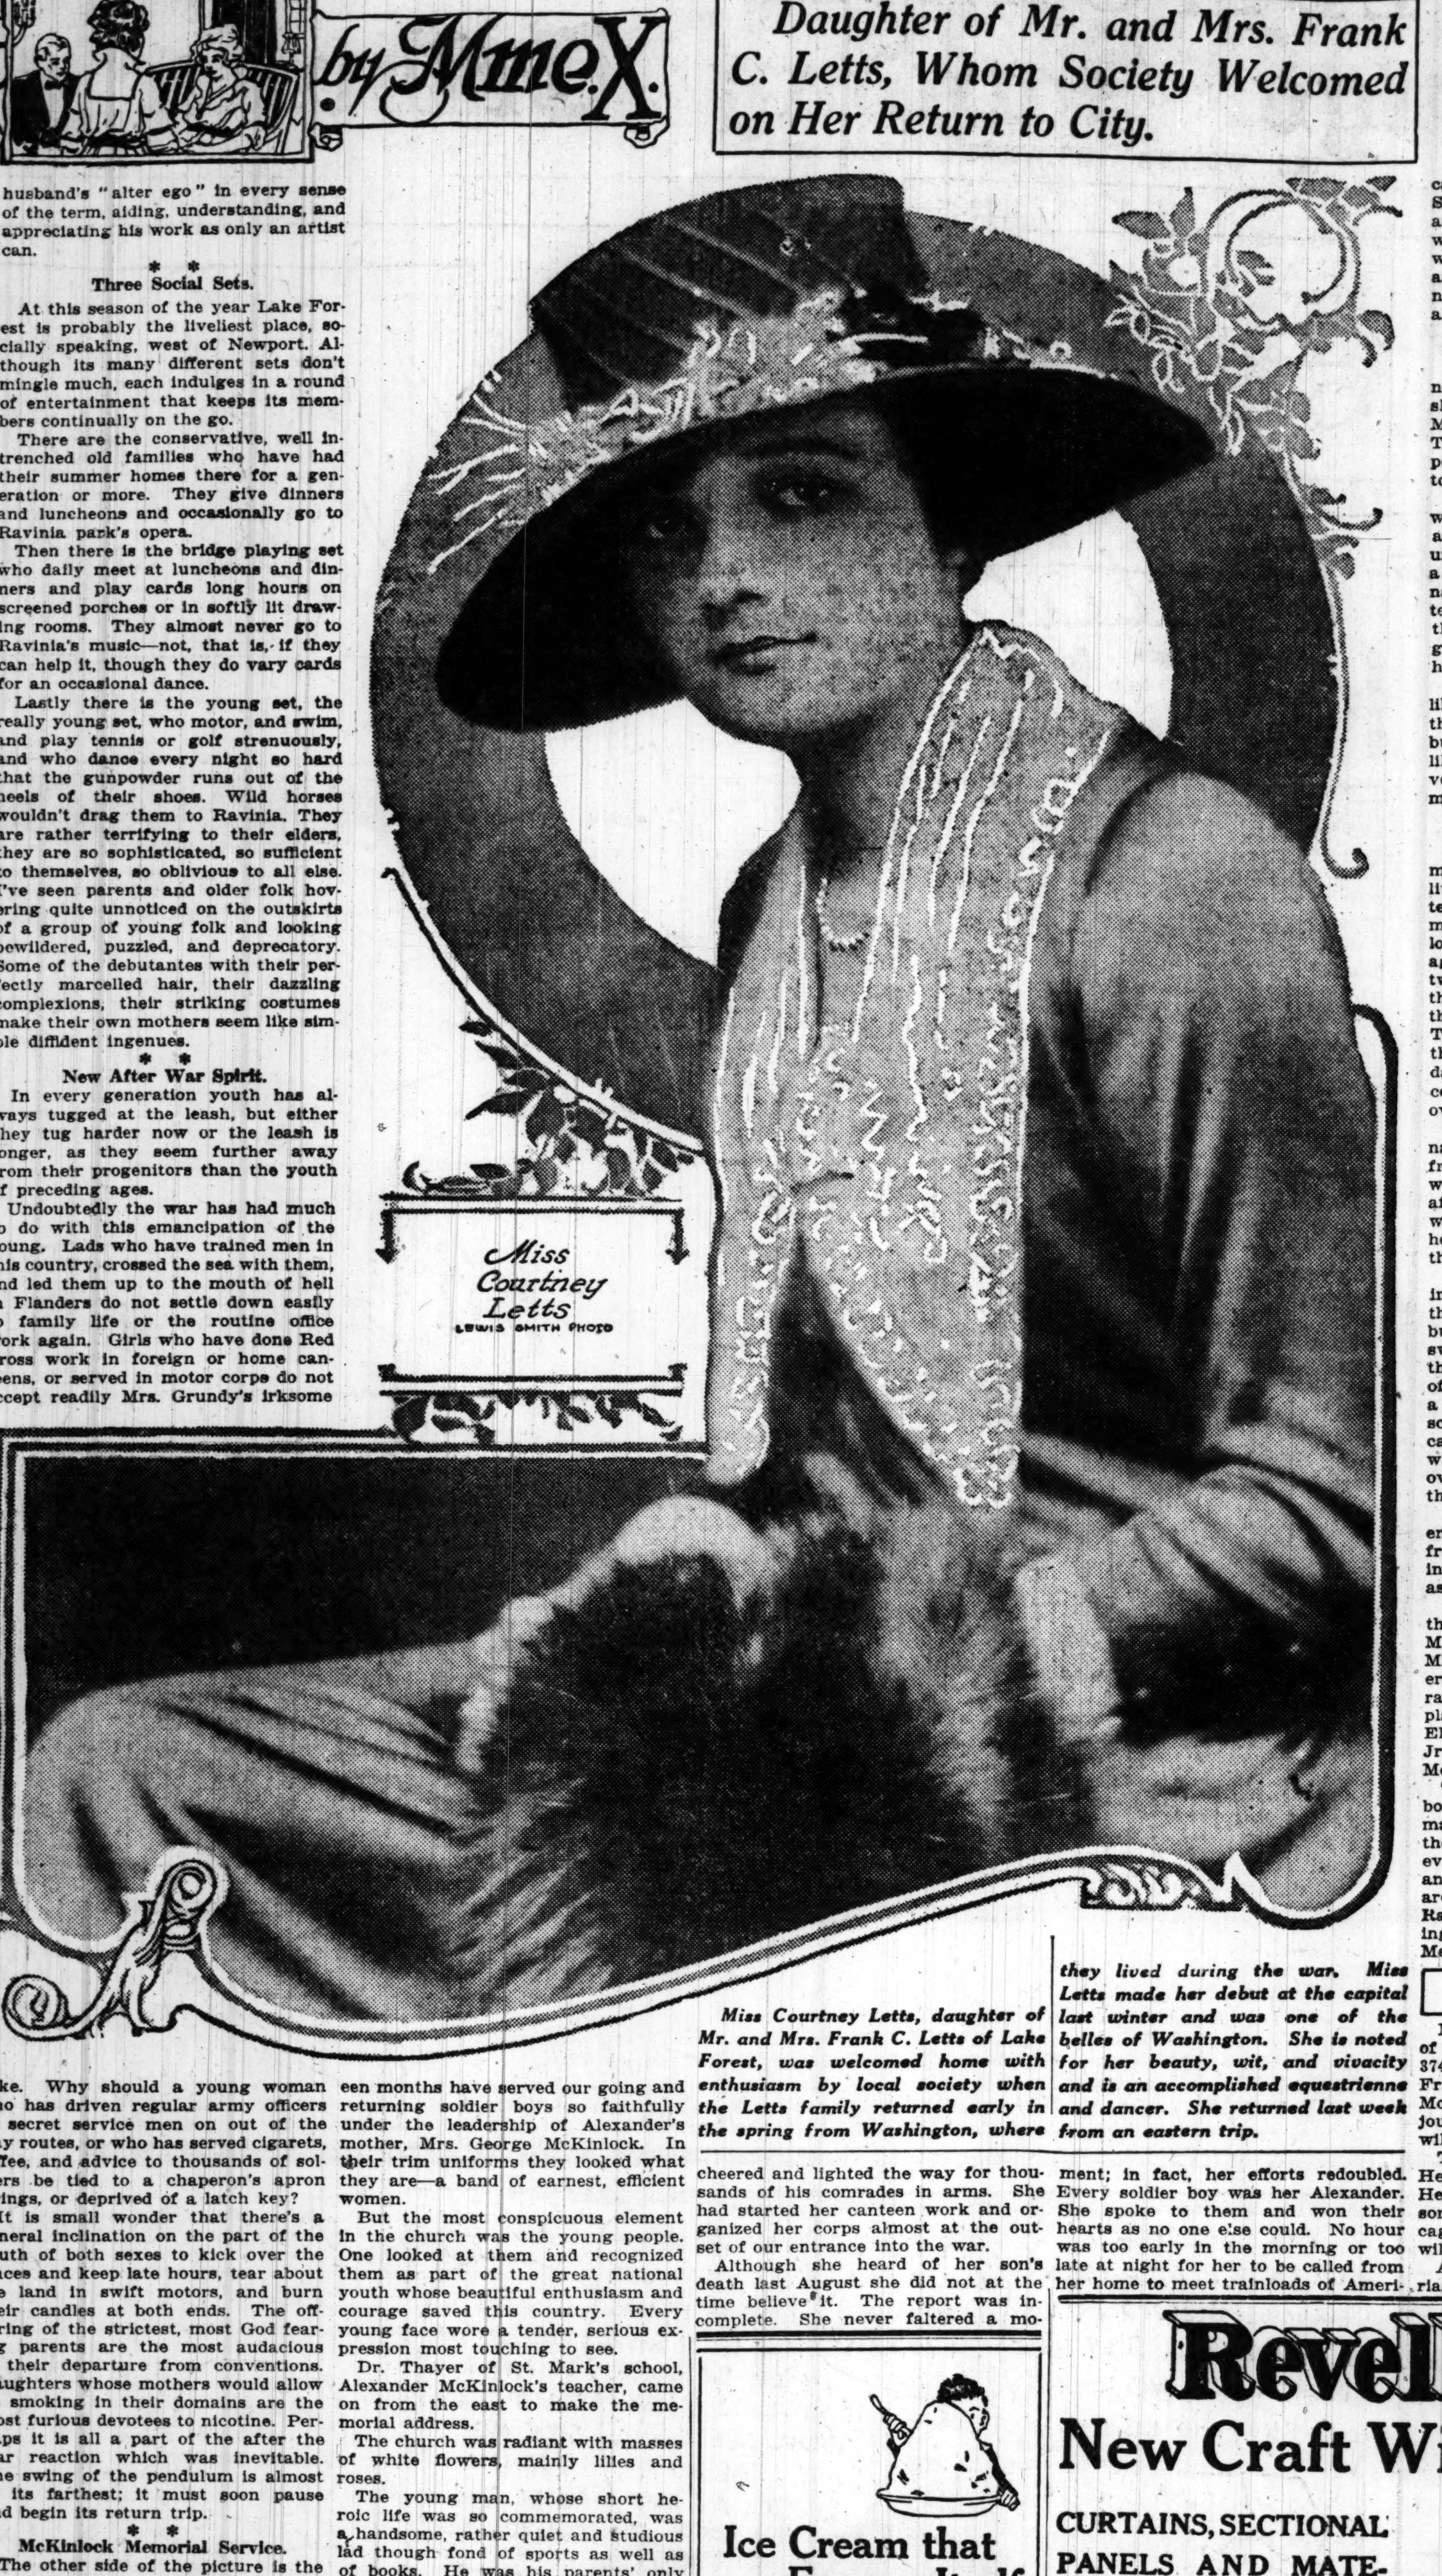
Prentiss Coonley is a sure and dashing player. It seemed harder to keep the eye on him than on the others, but then the whole game flashes so swiftly by that one onlooker sympathized with the famous representative of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE who went to a championship prizefight, and in describing it said that he missed it because he just turned aside to spit, and when he looked back the fight was over. At the Onwentsia they make their goals just as fast as that.

When there's a game on the western edge of the polo field is packed from south to north with motors standing, noses towards the field, as close as they can line them up.

Conspicuous among the spectators of the Onwentsia-Dayton match were Mrs. Noble Judah and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Patterson, both Daytonians. Others who stood close to the ringside and ran the risk of being charged by the players were Mrs. Howard Linn, Miss Elizabeth Farwell, Mrs. Philip Armour Jr., Mrs. Lawrence Armour, Hugh J. McBirney, and Walter Brewster.

The Daytonians are going to bring both their polo teams back for another match in September, which means that the Onwentsia men will practice hard every Saturday afternoon between now and then. The home team members are Prentiss Coonley, John Towne, Bud Rader, and Earl Reynolds. The visiting team members were the Messrs. Meade, Patterson, Talbot, and Platt.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Letts, Whom Society Welcomed on Her Return to City.



Miss Courtney Letts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Letts of Lake Forest, was welcomed home with enthusiasm by local society when the Letts family returned early in the spring from Washington, where they lived during the war. Miss Letts made her debut at the capital last winter and was one of the belles of Washington. She is noted for her beauty, wit, and vivacity and is an accomplished equestrienne and dancer. She returned last week from an eastern trip.

Ice Cream that Freezes Itself

Yes Ma'am—and Yes Sir! That's exactly what happens when you use an Auto Vacuum Freezer; the freezing process is entirely automatic.

A new way. No turning, no attention, no bother or trouble of any kind. Simply put a few handfuls of ice and salt in at one end of the freezer, pour the cream mixture in at the other end, then set aside and let the cream freeze itself.

The freezing takes only 30 minutes. And the cream stays hard—without any more ice or attention—until you are ready to serve it, whether that is right away or several hours later.

Freezes any kind of cream. Also sherbets, ices, etc. And any quantity, from a pint up to 2 quarts.

Cream compartment and ice compartment open from opposite ends—entirely separated—ice can't seep in to spoil the cream.

Nothing to take apart. As easy to clean as a china dish. Weighs almost nothing when empty and only a few pounds when filled.

Costs only $5—and soon pays for itself by the ice it saves; requires only a third to half as much as ordinary freezers.

Endorsed by Good Housekeeping Institute, Today's Housewife, Housewife's League, and by users everywhere.

Free Recipe Book.

Mrs. John D. Black

Mrs. John D. Black is one of the Chicago women who has pledged herself to "think, talk, and work for health" as a member of the administrative committee of the first U. S. training corps for women, opening at Lake Geneva next Saturday.

CLUB NOTES

A training camp for women will be opened next Saturday at Lake Geneva. Here they may find a rest and vacation, and at the same time receive the benefits of military setting-up exercises, swimming, boating, and a carefully prepared diet, that will build up or reduce according to individual needs. For mental recreation and discipline there will be lecture courses, community singing, recreational games and motion pictures.

The cost of the outing is $12 a week without any incidental expenses. The uniform of marine green gabardine, with sailor hat and extra blouse, costs $10. This does not include shoes. Regular army tents will house the women, the camp accommodations admitting 200.

Instructors for the courses will be furnished by the United States bureau of education, the department of labor, the department of agriculture, the Red Cross, and the public health service. A special course is provided for those who wish to instruct other groups, and some Chicago stores and other business houses are sending representatives, who will return to establish within their own organizations classes to carry out similar health programs.

Chicagoans who are working for the success of the new camp include Gen. Leonard Wood, Bishop Fallows, Capt. F. L. Beals, Dr. Arthur R. Reynolds, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. George Dixon, Mrs. Simeon B. Chapin, Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, Mrs. John D. Black, Mrs. Homer A. Stillwell, and Mrs. M. B. Pittman.

Enrollments are taken at 624 South Michigan avenue, or at the office of Mrs. Countiss, Red Cross rooms, in the Garland building.

A card party for the benefit of needy children will be given at Rothschild's tea room on Wednesday afternoon by the Children's league.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

The breath of the lilies lies warm on the land,
The nightingale's song runs like wine from the cup—
A thread of gold laughter through the soft night—
Where Merlin and Oberon's fairy queen sup.
Under the green trees merrily dance we—
Wake not the sleeping princess up.

Like a tongue of fire the scarlet of poppies
Burns in a passion to greet the dawn
That stays its coming, while velvet shadows
Float phantomlike on Titania's lawn—
Under the green trees merrily dance we—
Watch, lest the princess may be gone.

Over the edge of the dreaming world
The misted round of the white moon dips,
And from the heart of the waking flowers
The whirring, blustering night hawk sips—
Hush, in the green woods, you who dance there,
She wakes to his kiss upon her lips.

WHY, exactly, the etchings by Claude Lorraine should move one to think of fairies and the story of the Sleeping Beauty we cannot definitely say, but that they do the preceding verses unwittingly attest. Certainly nothing was further from our thoughts than such diaphanous stuff when we went, as duty urged, to see the exhibition in the print room of the Art institute, of etchings and wood cuts lent from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer. And certainly nothing more incongruous could have been pressed upon us then, as we looked at the well balanced, harshly defined imageries of Albrecht Durer and his master, Schoengauer. Not that these repel. But they do not lend themselves to a swift flowing of thought. One sees them, appreciates them, gloats a bit over this or that detail—and turns away, satisfied with the definition Time has given Durer's touch as that of a master artist.

Claude Lorraine, on the other hand, does influence the mind to a sweeter, more unearthly state of thought. His dancing peasants move in rhythm to the wind that blows caressingly through the soft boughed tops of the willows that frame their place of rendezvous. The gray clouds steal through the sky, beating against the blue softly as the steady wings of geese winging their flight south in the fall. A spirit of innocent revelry hangs over the whole scene. A spirit that calls for the presence of the "little folk." And it is because of this spirit that apology must needs be offered for glancing aside from the straight path of duty in the matter of an introduction to this story, which should deal primarily and entirely with the work of the German etchers.

There are twenty-six Durer engravings and eight Durer wood cuts in the collection, thirty-one engravings by Schoengauer, and an example or so of the work of Israel van Mackenen, Gourment, Mocetto, and other etchers not German in birth.

An amusing print by Durer typifies the spirit of the modern world in its relationship between the "lady who orders the meals" and the "lady, or gentleman, who prepares them." It is called "The Hostess and the Cook." An enormous chef, armed with a frying pan and spoon, towers beside the little mistress of the house in such formidable proportions that one wonders if she really will dare to suggest a menu to him.

For the most part the etchings by Durer deal with the Virgin and Child and with various Biblical topics. In such vein are also the prints by Schoengauer. One must, of course, except a few from this sweeping category. There is Schoengauer's charming "Dragon," for instance—a dragon that represents a model companion to the talkative, hurrying griffin and the singing, weeping mock turtle whom Alice met in Wonderland. But, aside from the few exceptions, the prints do deal, more or less seriously, as is the Teutonic manner of divine dealing, with scenes from the history of Mary and the Christ Child.

I found, a little time ago, an interesting account of what art treasures are housed now in Germany that could be given back to France in some sort of reparation for the damage done her beauties. The article is by Arsene Alexandre and appeared in the French review, La Renaissance de l'Art Français et des Industries de Luxe. I quote a few paragraphs from the story as it was translated in the New York Tribune:

> First of all, we have to say a few words about the righteousness of this principle of reprisals. The Germans had, in the beginning of hostilities, a phrase which they applied to every operation, bombardment, and pillage. "This is war." We could now retort in our turn: "Krieg ist Krieg." But, signularly, they would fail to understand in German that which they pronounced in French. In the same manner, after they had said, with their abominable thinkers, "might makes right," they would stand aghast if we now should affirm that it does—but this time in our favor.
> But, happily for our dignity and for world morality, we have arguments of a much higher order to draw upon.
> M. de Dampierre, in his report before the commission of artistic defense of the French Anti-Germanic union, indorses the ideas set forth in another report submitted by Henri Marcel, Armand Dayor, André Maurel, and myself, to wit, that works of art cannot be replaced by a monetary equivalent; that only art can replace art; finally, that a reprisal on the public collections of Germany is the only reparation strictly in the same nature and on the same level as the damage. All this is indisputable. The principle thus being fixed, let us proceed to a hurried survey of the French works of art which can be seized in Germany, outside of masterpieces of other schools, which also might be demanded.
> In the Museum of Berlin there are two Watteaus which are worth at least as much as those at Potsdam and the Royal castle—the French Comedians and the Italian Comedians. Four magnificent Poussins—Juno and Argus, Jupiter as a Child, Phaethon, Renaud and Armide [the last taken from the Louvre in 1815]; an exceptional Le Brun, the Jabach Family; the delicious portrait of Marie Mancini by Mignard; that of Desjardins, the sculptor, by Rigaud; finally, to cut it short, excellent pieces of Le Sueur, Pesne, Vouet, De Troy, Lancret, Claude Lorraine, and Clouet, as well as the portrait of Etienne Chevalier by Jean Fouquet.
> At the Grandducal gallery in Karlsruhe there are six Chardians, one Desportes, one Largilliere, two Rigauds, one Valentin, two Chevalier by Jean Foucquet.
> At the Munich Pinacotheque four Claude Lorraines, one Le Brun, four admirable Poussins, among them Midas and Bacchus; one Watteau, A Garden Party; Tureune, by Ph. de Champaigne [this simply must be returned to France]; Vivien's Fenelon, numerous Joseph Vernets, other remarkable pieces of Bourdon, Courtois, Dughet, Lemoine, Le Sueur, Pesne, Valentin, Vouet, etc.
> In Augsburg—Mlle. Mars, by Gerard; some by S. Bourdon, Stella, Lancret, Largilliere, Le Brun.
> In the ducal museum of Brunswick—Two beautiful Poussins, four important Rigaud portraits, De Troy's Mme. de Montespan, and various other good paintings.
> In Cassel—Watteau, Oudry, Pater, Subleyras, and others are well represented.
> In Darmstadt we find three important Jouvenets, one Mignard, Rigaud's Mazarin, then Delafosse, Hubert Robert, Van Loo, Vivien, Santerre, etc.
> Dresden is particularly rich, containing, among others, two Lancrets, two Claudes, one of the most powerful Poussins, the Martyrdom of St. Erasmus; two Watteaus, two Paters, one La Tour, one Nattier, Pesne, Sylvestre, etc.
>
> Leipsic has Greuze, Le Nain, Prud'hon, Girodet; Stuttgart, Callot, Courtois, Claude, Vernet; Schwerin, Boilly, Le Nain, Le Brun, Mignard, and thirty-seven paintings by Oudry. Here, in brief, is the beginning, as it were, of the chapter of compensations, a chapter which, to be sure, will contain sculptures, antique furniture, manuscripts, incunabula, and other objects of art whose enumeration we cannot undertake.
> All these works which Germany could not create out of her civilization, her sentiment, her intellect, cannot be left to remain in a place where their presence was sterile.

ANNOUNCING THE INITIAL SHOWING OF OUR

Exclusive Polo Coat Originations

INTRODUCED in Paris but a few weeks ago—bearing the enthusiastic approval of women well versed in the art of correct dress—so unusually quality-appearing in fabric, style cut and distinctive shading that we made immediate preparation to present the first complete showing of them to the women of Chicago.

FABRIC—THE POLO CLOTH of which these Coat models are fashioned is RICH, VELVETY, LIGHT and WARM—in grades so fine and so scarce that it is unlikely we can duplicate them at all—prices have already advanced since we purchased sufficient to anticipate the demands of leaders of fashion.

STYLE THEME—The trim, mannish styles are accentuated by the skillful tailoring which is the distinguishing trait of a specially sponsored Stevens presentation. Note the models illustrated suggesting the chic simplicity of line, the new interpretation of collar, cuff and belt innovation. Careful stitchings and plaitings are indicative of the expert attention which governs the finishing detail of these exclusive Coats.

ADAPTABILITY—One seldom finds an outer garment so delightfully adaptable in every respect to the many requirements of late summer and early fall days and evenings.

The yachting trip, the motor tour, the Country Club—no matter how fashionable the affair or how unpretentious—the woman, young woman or girl who chooses to wear one of these Polo Coats may enjoy the consciousness of being appropriately attired at a gratifyingly modest expenditure.

THE CASE OF MEXICO.

Mrs. Mary Correll told the house rules committee how a band of Mexicans rode down upon her home, attacked her, murdered her husband when he tried to interfere, and then looted their house.

Thus congress got some first hand information. Mrs. Correll's story was not the dispassionate statement of a news dispatch; not merely a few words in print, subject to the discounting influence of flying denials; there was in her appearance before the congressional committee and the sound of her words falling pitifully upon the ears of distant legislators the cold fact itself.

Congress now has something substantial before it; for the story of this American mother is only a dab of color on a canvas that has been long in the painting, but a dab of color which offers a visualization of the whole.

It is the thing lacking in the case of Mexico; facts laid down before congress. If all the victims of Mexican atrocity could march in thin line before congress what an array of evidence there would be.

But the thing that is being brought home to us, of course, is not merely the sufferings of Mrs. Correll, whose home has been destroyed and whose husband has been killed, though these things are grievous enough, is that Americans get such poor consideration for their rights. There remains the fact that the nation is not keeping its obligations with its people.

Mrs. Correll is only one of those hundreds who had a right to protection, a right to enjoy life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That right, through no fault of their own, was denied them. Americans on the border are not the less deserving of the protection of the American flag because they do not live nearer the center of the country. Some one must live on the borders. The Mexican border is not less to be protected than the end of Florida or Cape Cod or the boundary of Maine or Minnesota.

No one denies the right of an American to seek life, liberty, and happiness in Mexico. And yet this pursuit is not without its hazards. What good is the guarantee if it is not fortified with action?

In the larger analysis it is not only Americans who suffer. Mexico is a country capable of enormous strides in commercial and social advancement. It is rich in minerals, its fields are almost unlimited, and the opportunity for world trade taxes the imagination. It is inhabited by 15,000,000 human beings, whose lives are daily growing more miserable and whose ambitions are daily being thwarted.

Much has been said of the intolerable political condition. Many of us have been content to accept the policy of laissez faire rather than concern ourselves with what has been termed internal strife; content to think that Mexico's troubles are none of our concern; and that in all probability the Mexican government is being heckled from within and without. The state of the nation best reflects its condition of political conduct. The state of the Mexican nation is that of disorder and chaos. The proof of this is not necessarily in one murder nor in two nor in a dozen; nor even in fifty mere reports of murder. But when these reports are substantiated day after day, and when they deal with American citizens, and when the living testimonial of that atrocious disorder appears before a congressional committee, it nears the time to think deeply.

First we had the rumors of Mexican murders, patiently denied and finally admitted; then the list of them read in congress, and now we hear the testimony of Mary Correll. Slowly the truth is beginning to trickle into Washington.

ROBBERY AND REPENTANCE.

If deathbed repentance is as salubrious as Joliet repentance a life of sin is no special disadvantage, as we again perceive from the confession of a youthful local bandit chieftain.

This particular young man unreservedly admits to bank robberies of amazing scope and his record is undebatable evidence to support the charge that while the parole system may operate to the benefit of the convicted man it does not offer much hope for his victims.

The parole system as an agent in behalf of honest regeneration is not criticized. But its failure to consider the rights of innocent persons, men and women who are continually being robbed and killed, comes in for direct action. We think reform of criminals is a splendid thing; but we also think it a splendid thing to be able to walk the streets and engage in useful pursuits without being robbed or shot.

Our present robber leader was paroled after serving the very least term it is possible for a prisoner to serve and apply for release under the parole system. Offering for the consideration of the parole board the obvious and specified pleadings that he was a young man and desirous of leading a different life and thoroughly repentant, he leaves prison and promptly places himself at the head of a predatory band of youthful miscreants and assures society of his changed conscience by deeds more spectacular than those which were the means of his original detention.

The law seems to be only half operative in Chicago and Illinois with respect to criminal procedure. It is doubtful if any citizen would consent to such a lax application of the civil statutes. Civil litigation usually goes through to its logical conclusion and sticks. Criminal prosecution is crippled by many humanitarian slits and gushes. A citizen is amply protected against the unlawful removal of a fence line. There seems little protection against killers and robbers.

We do not suppose the parole board possesses a superior intelligence enabling it to examine into the souls of convicted men so that the truth or falsity of their protests can be determined with scientific accuracy. But we do expect the parole board to use common sense and not afflict this community with thieves and robbers and murderers we have just been put to the trouble and expense of catching and convicting and locking up in order to make life and property more safe.

LIFE AND PROGRESS.

Some one must go first. There must be that courageous individual who braves eternity and eats the first tomato, takes his life in his hands and gulps the fearsome and so called succulent bivalve, sails the wine dark sea aboard the cockle shell Santa Maria and descends first in diving armor.

We fancy it is the majority that progresses; surges on with a common impulse. Wrong. It is the valiant few. We only falter along after them, commending ourselves for our fortitude as soon as we discover that each forward step is safely taken and shuddering in suspense if there is the least doubt.

The inventor of the locomotive was regarded as a trifling idiot, but we haven't the slightest apology now that railroads are safe. We cluck contentedly and regard ourselves as the benefactors of posterity for having contributed so liberally to the world's progress. We didn't progress at all. Only hung on the tail of that first man's kite and were hoist by it.

Some day we will be flitting freely through the air with large and conscious self-assurance that we did it. Nothing for the bold men who went into the air when there was some question about its utility, and not a little question either.

Thousands scurry past the monument to the victims of the Fort Dearborn massacre. They took the chance. We didn't. It was they who pushed on through the forests without a thought of returning. We followed after; long after; when it was safe.

The pioneer is the true progressive because he doesn't think about coming back. He crosses Rubicons, burns bridges behind, crosses continents in a prairie schooner and endures the scorn of the safety first multitude. Langley was right in principle and we now applaud him, but that didn't keep us from breaking his heart with ridicule. We had our tongues in our cheeks when the gentle old man tried to go aloft in the airplane we dubbed "Langley's Folly;" we gaped in shame and amazement when the Wrights made the "Folly" take the air like a bird.

Had the Wright brothers failed we would have heaped them with our all too ready sarcasm. But they made their objective, so we take the credit for advancing the cause of aviation. How many of us would volunteer to cross the plains to California with nothing in prospect? How many with mountains of gold and silver uncovered? We are a sure thing race.

We have too little consideration for the Langleys and the Genoese sailors, the Daniel Boones and the Fultons. Perhaps the sting of defeat only emphasizes the glory of victory, but if all those upon whom we depend for the act of discovery were to be deterred by the fear of scorn we should not get far. The majority is not progressive.

Men must die in air machines because only by their sufferings will we achieve the perfection of their ideas. It is difficult to penalize men for the fault which is incidental to the greater adventure. Men who take their lives in their hands, counting no cost to themselves, in order that they may prepare a safe place for the skeptical majority, should have their reward in applause for the valorous deeds they perform and not odium because of the details they neglect.

Some must go first else we would never move. Because a dozen fail where one succeeds it does not follow that they are lacking in spirit or purpose. Their pioneering is as essential and their motives as clear.

INVITE THE PRESIDENT TO JOIN US.

There is no doubt some foundation for the reports that administration senators are casting about for a means of compromise on the league of nations covenant. It is a reasonable state of mind for the Democratic senators to get into, and the president should be invited to participate.

Mr. Wilson's position cannot be injured by compromise; has not been heretofore; in fact, he has told us that the work of drafting the covenant involved many compromises. Wherefore, so long as the Republicans only desire reservations calculated to make certain the position of the United States and in no wise conflict with the idealism of the league, there should be no hurt feelings.

This is a big country, and the league is a big enterprise. The president has said that this is not the culmination but the beginning of hope. The league will have many problems to work out. What is the objection, then, to putting in everything, so long as the "big family" idea is not specially injured and our present form of national existence does not face a sudden and perhaps dangerous jolt? Our country being a big country, and the league being big in prospect, it seems fair to employ more than one voice, one mind, in the ordering of their affairs.

The opposition senators desire only that we do not give away the rock whereon we stand; that we do not leap before duly considering the whirlpool about us. We know what the national organization of the United States has done for us; therefore we should keep it intact. The league may be a more splendid thing. But we do not know that. And until we do know it the greatest wisdom would seem to lie in preserving the strength we have.

'Editorial of the Day

LINKING GREAT LAKES CITIES.

[Detroit News.]

Chicago, Duluth, Milwaukee, Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, and Buffalo have vastly more to gain by coöperation than by competition. They have one common reason for their being in their respective places—the great lakes.

One day these great commercial and industrial centers will come to a realization of the importance of their common interest in the mighty waterway which connects them and which but for slight impediments in the St. Lawrence river might afford them outlet to the sea and to the markets of the world. In that day there may be organized interurban boards of commerce which with equal representation for each city will consider the great problems which confront all. This powerful aggregation of urban interests may be able to cope with some success with those transportation corporations which have conspired to cripple waterways transportation in this country.

But to accomplish this the great lakes cities must draw together. The need is for kindlier understanding and more effectual coöperation.

ELITE-ING THE BOLSHEVIKS

BY JULIUS OSTMANN.

MOSCOW, July 14.—Fifteen hundred favored citizens, all of them purse proud, arrogant, and pompous beyond the precedents of autocracy, constitute bolshevik Muscovy's brand new aristocracy. They are Russia's beggars on horseback. They exemplify Napoleon's saying, "Democracy must have frills," and the German philosopher Hegel's doctrine that all human affairs progress by contrasts.

Over the millions, ignorant, starving, unwashed, hopeless proletarians in the seventeen European provinces still swayed by Tsar Lenin, rises a parvenu gilded class of persons who were born in hunger and rags, but whose social ambitions now know no limits. They dress in sables; glitter with gems; preen themselves like peacocks in the palaces of West Moscow. At the same time they profess bolshevism's "Religion of Poverty."

Most of them are women. Their husbands or lovers are mere passive appendages; for Holy Russia was always a woman's land; and bolshevism not only gave women new rights in making laws, in practicing professions, in sentencing "counter revolutionaries" to death; but it also left them their immemorial privilege of surpassing men in pretence, luxury and pomp.

In April the antics of the new feminine aristocracy led to a pitched battle in the Moscow local soviet. A grim and dour bolshevik named Kiselieff started the fray. Being an obscure bachelor with no glittering women folk to provide for, he was made wroth by the fact that a kinswoman of the bolshevik boss, Kameneff, by name Barbara Stchukine, occupied the "House of the Boyard Romanoff," and was there living an unbolshevik life of splendor. The house of the Boyard Romanoff is a little palace in the center of Moscow which was occupied by the Romanoff family before their accession to the throne. Here Mme. Barbara reigned.

The bolshevik bosses habitually create sinecures for their wives or for other men's wives; and Boss Kameneff duly provided for Mme. Barbara. A decree appointed her "curatress" of the house. She had a motor car, servants, a handsome wage, and within a week she was living as splendidly as did the wife of the Boyard Romanoff herself. She wore rainbow hued robes, and gave balls and dinners.

These antics were too much for the sour democrat Kiselieff. He raised such a row at the soviet meeting that the soaring Mme. Barbara had to quit her dwelling. And then Moscow had a new sensation. Irina Leskoff, a cousin of Lenin, who is also a leader of the brand new aristocracy, moved in as "curatress" instead; and the fashionable orgies recommenced.

The empress and unchallenged leader of the bolshevik four hundred is a person well known to America, and a person very different from the haughty kinswomen of Kameneff and Trotsky, who while they blaze with gems often display ragged stockings, and who patronize literature which they cannot read. The empress of the bolshevik aristocracy is the same Mme. Andreyeff whom Maxim Gorky presented to New York in 1906 as his lawful wife, and thereby provoked a scandal which culminated in his having to evacuate several hotels. Andreyeff was then handsome, highly educated and artistic. She is no longer handsome, and she is fat beyond words. But she is cleverer and more cultivated than ever; and last year when bolshevism had brought divorce within every one's reach, she lawfully married Gorky, whose wife No. 1, the little school teacher from Nijni-Novgorod, also married again. When Gorky, after alternately lauding and assailing bolshevism with his customary intemperance, joined his friend, the singer Schaliapine, as art and literary adviser of the soviets, a good post had to be found for Mme. Gorky; and she was made manageress in chief of Petrograd's nationalized theaters. Fat as she is, she still plays in the Alexander theater.

Mme. Gorky began to live in style. While for domestic reasons occupying a modest six room apartment with Gorky, she took over also the whole twenty roomed upper floor of the marble palace, which belonged to the late Grand Duke Constantine; and there she organized a political-literary salon, and gave imposing receptions. Petrograd now saw a splendor which rivaled the best days of the tsardom.

Naturally the green eyed monster jealousy gnawed at the hearts of the red faced, raw fisted, shawl clad wives and sisters of the soviet dignitaries. As Mme. Gorky was too powerful to be attacked, they resolved to emulate and outshine her. Olga Gvozdoff, a 20 year old, pretty and illiterate friend of Boss Zinovieff, took possession of the Stroganoff palace in the Nevsky Prospect; and, with money whose origin no man knew, she began to entertain. And others followed. Soon Petrograd gloried in a dozen salons in the best style of Mme. Recamier. Hungry and wretched as the city was, yet there were money, fine garments, food, diamonds, witty conversation, and gallant, if unshaven, cavaliers; and when the infection spread to Mother Moscow, where there is more money and food, and less shaving soap, the aristocratization of bolshevik Russia was complete.

During the winter 1918-19 the center of the bolshevik aristocracy was the Khamovnitchesk villa quarter to the west of Moscow, where Leo Tolstoy long lived and worked. Here after the bolshevik revolution of November, 1917, settled about a score of real aristocrats, among them Prince F. Golitsyn, a Count Scheremetieff, and a Count Tolstoy from another branch of the family. All these aristocrats had been driven from their country estates. Some of them ostentatiously espoused the bolshevik cause with the aim of escaping further unpleasantnesses. The bolsheviks made capital out of their sham conversion and then left them alone to lead a tolerably comfortable life.

In this quarter happened to live a female relative of Sverdloff, formerly chief of the Moscow executive council. The Sverdloff lady held the post of guardian of working girls at 75,000 rubles a year. For reasons of self-interest, the old aristocracy graciously and even obsequiously entertains the new. The climax was reached in the spring of this year when the nearly middle aged spinster Sverdloff was modestly married by bolshevik civil rite to M. Paul Vassiltchikoff, belonging to a much titled and once millionaire court family, whose best known member, Princess Vassiltchikoff, was imprisoned on her estates three years ago for intriguing with Germany for a separate peace.

The mass of bolsheviks look on the antics of the new aristocracy with hatred, envy and grim contempt. Outbreaks have twice been threatened. In Petrograd the Kronstadt sailors who demonstrated against Trotsky demonstrated at the same time against Mme. Gorky; and again this spring a mob attacked the palace occupied by the sweetheart of a soviet chief.

Cynics of the left-bolshevik press declare that the new aristocracy has come to stay; titles and decorations, they say, will be the next stage; and the final stage will be a revived monarchy, with some buxom, brilliant and dictatorial cook as empress and raw boned proletarian dishwashers as ladies of the court.

HOME NURSING.

CHAIRMAN WORK, in addressing the house of delegates of the American Medical association, made a plea for home nursing. For technical work and special nursing highly trained nurses will always be required. But there are services in connection with certain kinds of illness that can be very well discharged by women with a limited amount of training. He says the public needs practical nurses trained in cleanliness and taught to do what is necessary to be done for the comfort of the household, including its sick. There should be provided six months or more schooling in every small city for teaching girls who have good average ability, but not necessarily overschooling, to do the common everyday things in nursing. It was done in a war emergency recently and is a practical suggestion.

The impulse to provide a corps of practically trained women to do nursing had its origin in the emergency created by the epidemic of influenza which came at a time when a large part of the nursing profession was with the army. It is equally true that the need for more physicians was demonstrated at the same time. In one state about one-third of the death certificates filed during that epidemic showed that no physician was available. There were men who proposed that a corps of physicians' helpers should be trained, since much of the work of a physician could just as well be done by a partly trained assistant.

In Russia they have always had a class of physicians' helpers trained to do work which leaves the physician free to do work for which his more extensive and expensive training fits him. In some other European countries they have a profession of physicians' helpers or assistants. Had we such a corps during the epidemic the physicians could have covered the field better than they did. There was some agitation for such a group, but in this country we do not lend ourselves readily to class distinctions. Men educated as partial practitioners of medicine and so licensed would shortly be exercising the full duties of the profession and neglecting those for which they were trained. This was recognized and no step has been made to provide such a class.

No so with nurses. Several legislatures have considered proposed laws creating partial nurses under one title or another, and some have amended their nursing laws in accordance with the idea.

The very great scarcity of nurses in the autumn of 1918 clearly affected society profoundly. Many persons advocated a course in home nursing in the high schools and some even proposed such a couse in the grammar schools long before Dr. Work attempted to interest the American Medical association, but if the powerful influence of that association is put behind the proposition it will make headway. It is not proposed to make trained registered nurses of school girls by a six months' course in nursing, but such girls can become skillful enough to do much of the work now done by nurses, leaving the more highly trained to discharge the more difficult and more technical tasks.

For the purpose of training in home nursing there are many books on the market, all written by trained nurses, and there will probably be a flood of new ones now that there is possibility of the work given in the public schools. Before me as I write is a very good one by Eveleen Harrison, published by the MacMillan company. The twelve chapters deal with choice and preparation of room and bed, atmospheric temperature, ventilation, comforts for the patient, temperature, pulse, respiration, the giving of medicines, baths, medicinal symptoms and nursing of infectious diseases, prevention and care of coughs and colds, nursing in grip, bronchitis, and pneumonia, observation of symptoms in the nursing of children, counter irritants, douches, enemata, how to prepare for a surgical operation, care of patients before and after operations, first aid in emergencies, dietetics, dainty dishes and how to serve them, recipes for invalid cooking.

Of these subjects the one in which most technical training is required for proficiency is first aid. Many of the first aid procedures can only be done by people with a considerable degree of training. For instance, artificial respiration. Many people know that the Schaefer method is best. They also know that the patient lies face downward in the Schaefer method, but when he applies the method he expels air, or tries to, at a rate of 30 a minute.

Considerable training is of advantage in stopping hemorrhage, in handling fractured limbs, and in deciding between fainting, drunkenness and apoplexy when persons fall unconscious. And yet first aid must always be given by those who are quickly accessible, and it is better that there should be universal training in first aid, even though the service given by the half trained is not very good.

The chapter that is most open to controversy is that entitled, "How to Prepare for a Surgical Operation." The opposition will say that here is a field into which only the trained nurse should enter. And yet there are—and always will be—certain operations that are done in homes and without the help of trained nurses. Even though hospitals be built in small towns and rural communities, as the tendency now is, there will be some operating in homes. When we come to read the chapter we find that it deals with such subjects as how to convert an ordinary room into a temporary operating room, what furniture to fix and how and what linen to boil up, how to get the patient back to bed after the operation, how to give the patient after care, what emergencies and what general symptoms to look out for.

The chapter which health authorities are most apt to quarrel with is that on "Symptoms and Nursing of Infectious Diseases." The only places which stamp out smallpox promptly whenever it appears are those which take every case to the smallpox hospital—whether rich or poor. In Australia every case of consumption is taken to a sanitarium unless it can furnish proof that things are as they should be at home. Some cities now require that all cases of typhoid fever must be cared for in hospitals unless they are cared for by trained nurses. It is just those cities that have the lowest typhoid rates.

The approved type of ordinances for the control of scarlet fever and diphtheria and other infectious diseases sets one standard for cases cared for by trained nurses and another for those not so cared for. However much another method for caring for cases of contagion may be desired for a long time, yet the majority of such cases will be cared for at home without trained nurses.

If the persons having malaria were perfectly protected against mosquitoes malaria would not last long. If they were kept under mosquito netting in screened rooms the number of infected mosquitoes would be greatly diminished. Malaria dies out unless a large percentage of the mosquitoes is infected.

If the persons having typhoid were perfectly protected from flies the typhoid rate would be lessened. Screens and bars to keep the flies away from the patient, his excretions and his bath water would prevent many persons from being infected.

Some headway would be made in controlling scarlet fever in the home if there was a nurse who knew that not until the nose has stopped running and the tonsils have shrunk is the patient noninfectious, even though the five weeks' quarantine period has passed and scaling has been completed.

There would be less infantile diarrhea if a home nurse knew that all soiled diapers should go at once into a closed can containing an antiseptic solution and that flies must never have access to a sick baby or to his excretions.

We would like to see all cases of pneumonia cared for by trained nurses, but there is no possibility that they will be. The survey of North Carolina showed that 10 per cent of the cases of pneumonia did not even have a physician. This was in normal times. Of course, conditions were much worse during the epidemic. If 10 per cent did not have a physician, it is probable that not 10 per cent had a trained nurse. What gives the best chance for recovery to the other 90 per cent? The answer is: A home nurse with a moderate amount of correct training.

All these are acute illnesses. The preface of Miss Harrison's book calls attention to the fact that the great majority of patients nursed at home are suffering from chronic diseases or convalescing from severe illnesses, and a chapter is devoted to the comfort and convenience of the shut-ins.

I rather doubt the statement that the great majority of patients nursed at home are suffering from chronic diseases, but I agree that a majority of those with chronic disablements and diseases are cared for at home. The permanent employment of trained nurses for those people is seldom possible. Some home training in nursing will be of great benefit in this group.

It may be found possible to give a short course in nursing to every school girl reaching the upper grades. Good would come from such a course. It may be found best to give a short course to nurses in hospitals. If so, the course should be so safeguarded as not to wreck the standards for full course nurses.

LEAKY GUTTERS ORDERED REPAIRED.

Chicago, July 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—At 1366 Mohawk street, front building, there is an old rusted water gutter on roof which has been pouring water, whenever it rains, into the gangway of 1368 Mohawk street, and as there is a cottage in the rear of 1368 in which reside a family with several small children, believe there is some way to put a stop to this nuisance. Have talked to several agents renting the building at 1366 to no avail. Cannot locate landlord. CONSTANT READER.

An investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served on the agent to replace old defective leaky roof gutters and down spouts both sides of building and properly connect same to sewer.

SUCCESSION PROBABLY TAXABLE.

Chicago, July 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A. lived in Iowa and owned stock in an Illinois corporation. He kept physical possession of the stock in Iowa from the day issued. A. died in 1918, leaving his stock to his heirs in Iowa.

Can the state of Illinois collect an inheritance tax on this stock, held in Iowa? T. C. H.

That is a very intricate question, on which we could not give an opinion of any value without a full presentation of all the facts.

We may venture to state, however, that a stock certificate is merely the evidence of the owner of it that he has a certain interest in the property of the corporation. An inheritance tax is levied on or made payable on the succession of property, and if the property owned by the corporation is in Illinois the actual succession takes place in Illinois. Again, the certificates are held to be property and taxable in the state where found. There have been a number of decisions in various states on facts similar to yours. Technically answering your question, the state of Illinois could not tax the certificates, but probably can the succession of the property in Illinois.

PREMISES CLEANED UP.

Chicago, July 18.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The yard in the rear of 1551 Crystal street is piled high with rubbish, manure, and garbage, which not only draws rats but makes a very disagreeable smell.

Can't something be done to remove this rubbish and tear down the shacks in the yard, which are built of newspapers, old carpets, sticks, and old rags and are a paradise for vermin and rats. READER.

An investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served on the owner to repair or replace the roof gutters, remove all refuse and debris from the rear yard and under the rear porch.

TWENTY PAYMENT LIFE.

Rockford, Ill., July 21.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Will you please advise how soon one can change the present government term insurance over to a twenty payment life policy? Does the time count on the twenty payment life policy from the day I take the new policy or from the day I took the government insurance in the army? When does the new insurance take effect? E. C. F.

The term insurance may now be converted. The term premiums paid while you were in the service will not be credited on the new policy.

The converted insurance takes effect on the first of the month succeeding the month in which application is made to convert the term insurance, provided that the premiums on the term insurance have been paid for the current month.

RETAINER PAY FOR ENSIGN.

Urbana, Ill., July 23.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I was discharged in December, 1918, as an ensign in the U. S. N. R. F. Am I entitled to retainer pay? How much and when will it be paid? H. A.

If your rating has been confirmed you are entitled to two months' base pay plus ten per cent each year. It is paid quarterly. If your rating has not been confirmed you will be paid $12 per year.

ANSWERS.

M. A. B.—We do not have a record of such a unit as the 109th military police. Company C, 109th engineers, reached New York June 22 on the transport Panaman.

Adeline Thompson—No homecoming orders have been given to the 152d transportation company. It is stationed in Le Mans.

Mrs. Morris—The central records office is closed. It has not been announced when the men with that office will sail for home.

John Geron, Rock City, Ill.—Ambulance company 5 is with the 3d division and has not received special mention for return.

Frank M. Raymond—Aero squadron 258 is attached to the 3d corps. It is not designated for return.

Faye Smith, Hammond, Ind.—Butchery company 331 has come home. It reached Charleston, S. C., July 1 on the Orsego and is now demobilized. It was not a part of any division.

C. A. Methfessel, Waverly, Ia.—The 417th supply train is still on duty in Germany and has not been selected for early return.

Ethel Grady—The headquarters of the 3d army is located in Neuweid, Germany. It is not scheduled to come home early.

Miss Esther Blomquist—We regret that we have no information on the sailing of the Le Mans casual company 1811.

Arthur L. Hollenbeck—Motor truck company 549 is attached to motor supply train 428 at Brest. To date it has not been assigned convoy.

Gretta Schmidt—The 264th military police of the 132d battalion is in Paris. It has not been cited for return.

C. S. Deals—Repair unit 308 of the motor transport corps arrived on the Toloa, July 10, in New York. It is not a part of any army division.

F. W. Sedens—Motor truck company [illegible] is detailed to the service of supplies and will leave for home soon. The latest reported location of this unit is Bordeaux.

Mrs. Smolski—Motor transport company 814 is with the 3d army corps; it is not released for return.

Helen Griener—Repair unit 327 arrived July 9 in New York on the transport Morda. They were demobilized in a few days.

Beulah Stephens—Field remount squadron 322 is located in Wengrohr, Germany. It has not been ordered home yet.

T. F. Downing—Battery F of the 17th field artillery has been released for return. It is a part of the 2d division and will probably soon be moving homeward.

Danny Walsh—The 815th pioneer infantry has been designated for early return, but the war department has not announced its sailing date. It was recently stationed in Commercy.

R. N. Cartmell—Evacuation ambulance company 65 arrived July 21 on the Agamemnon at New York. The men will be demobilized within the next day or two.

Lena Wallingford.—Motor repair unit [illegible] arrived on the Sierra July 23, in New York. The men will probably be released about the last of the month.

G. H. Bronson.—Evacuation ambulance company 65 is home. It reached New York July 21 on the transport Agamemnon.

Ruth Eisenmeier.—The 263d military police was latest reported in Paris, France. It is not scheduled to return.

N. Higgenbothem.—Advance medical supply depot No. 2 is stationed in Treves, Germany. It has not been released for return.

JAPAN AND CHINA.

Aurora, Ill., July 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Thank you for your wholesome publicity on the Shantung atrocity. We cannot have too much of it. In reference to the whole far east situation, the American people need to be enlightened and aroused. It will be an everlasting disgrace if, in the interests of other governments, we besmirch our honor by bowing down to such a crude compromise. Germany never had one scintilla of moral right to be in the Shantung. Japan has far less. If certain Americans have been beguiled into thinking that Japan has honest intentions in the far east—or anywhere else—let them study the history of Formosa, Manchuria, and Corea.

There is another aspect of the case that would be humorous, were it not so pathetic. The world is to be presented with a league of nations that shall enforce peace and justice. The most autocratic, morally deficient, and socially degenerate government now remaining on earth stands athwart the plan and threatens alliance against it, if its terms be not met. Our supposed representative prostrates himself before the mikado's throne—and concedes everything. Thank God he is not speaking for the American people. As for a league founded upon this old time brutality and crookedness, what a puny, impotent creature it would be. If it cannot begin by dealing justly with Japan, of what earthly use will it be in the future?

TRUE AMERICANISM.

Cascade, Ia., July 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have read THE TRIBUNE for quite a while and I hope it is my good fortune to be able always to have such a paper to read. All THE TRIBUNE's columns and editorials ring with the spirit of true Americanism. A reader of THE TRIBUNE reads American ideals of the highest standard. M. L. HAMIL.

A VOICE FROM THE SOUTH.

Roanoke, Va., July 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—You must be in such a good humor over your feat of Henry Ford, whom you have made a pitiable spectacle of, that I feel you may train your powerful guns on the situation in Washington, where returned Yanks have been beating up and generally mistreating our Afro-American citizens there, some of whom have been guilty of assaults on women, murder, etc., which is, of course, beside the question.

What we want is these outrages against our Negro citizens by the Yanks stopped in Washington. It is bad enough when southern mobs inflict punishment upon our Afro American citizens for rape and other crimes—we know how you sympathize with our colored citizens at such times and how your well known hate of the southern people finds expression on such occasions.

We now urge you to loose your powerful batteries at the Yanks in Washington, now pursuing similar tactics, on the very streets made sacred through the north by the footsteps of Sumner, Garrison, Beecher, Lincoln, Fred Douglass and other northern heroes and idols.

We feel this appeal to your feelings will not be in vain. ELLIS W. JONES.

THE CASE OF SHANTUNG.

Chicago, July 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The outcome of Shantung's settlement of the peace treaty has been stirring up the United States senate quite a bit, probably as much as it has been irritating the Chinamen, but it seems pretty strange, for China simply changed its master of that province and nothing more.

If the objection of the United States senate should be to its being a violation of President Wilson's fourteen points for the peace treaty, how about "freedom of the seas," and the Saar valley settlements; both of these questions have long been forgotten by United States senators; and what should be the grievance of the Chinese for having a new master for Shantung peninsula?

As far as we know, Japan gets nothing more than Germany by treaty had in that province until the peace treaty was signed. Moreover, Japan made a solemn promise to return it to China later, but United States Senator Lodge called the Shantung settlement "a prize of peace" and, if so, would not Great Britain's maintaining permanently the control of the seas and France's obtaining rich German territory be prizes of peace just exactly?

THE DIGNITY OF LABOR.

Chicago, July 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In reply to H. W. B.'s article on "The Plight of the Educated," I wish to say that it is any man's privilege, educated or not, to go and be a [illegible] carrier, a milkman or a street car [illegible]. The time has come when physical labor must receive its reward; it has become everybody's aim to get enough education (if you might call it so) to hold some kind of an office job, regardless how poor the salary may be, simply because it is more refined work and not so hard. I wonder if any of those educated people that begrudge a common laborer's wages have ever gone to bed at night, unable to sleep because of their aching bones (something which has often happened to me)?

The LIBERTYVILLE EXPERIMENT
by Edith M. Wyatt

An hour's ride from Chicago, near the town of Libertyville, there is a small brown frame house standing on very beautiful rolling prairie which drops and dips away about it in long contours like those of a lake gull's flight. This farmhouse was the scene last summer of a modest education experiment, which is, in my view, a pioneer expression of a new and wide development in woman's occupation.

When the Illinois committee on women in agriculture was appointed by the State Council of Defense in the spring of 1918, it determined not simply to prepare women to supply a possible and passing labor shortage, still less in the future to "take the place of men," but to organize an establishment which might have a permanent value towards developing the education of women in agriculture.

"We started," says Mrs. Tiffany Blake, the chairman of the committee, "with the idea that no work was menial, and that the indoor work, being woman's first responsibility, was as important to do efficiently as the outside work of assisting the farmer. We felt that if we could train women to keep house attractively and efficiently under country conditions, we would be giving the first help to the farmer's wife.

"In planning our program we considered the house the laboratory where the woman taking our training learned her home economics—homemaking, canning, preserving, drying foodstuffs—under a trained teacher.

"Mr. Ames, one of our Lake county farmers, who believed in women in agriculture, loaned to the board his farm of 200 acres. It was found that many people, among them those who are handling large business propositions, believed in training women for the farm. They proved their faith by generous gifts of equipment, furnishings, etc."

The committee obtained the aid of Miss Alison Ransford of Kilmarnock college of Scotland as a teacher of dairying and in charge of the creamery. In April the Chicago press published in its columns devoted to women's war work a brief notice, stating that a free training in agriculture would be supplied for sixty-five women at the Libertyville farm. A few addresses on the subject, with calls for volunteers, were also made at several of our women's organizations in Chicago. The response to this modest appeal was literally twenty times as great as the capacity of the farm could provide for, the committee interviewing over thirteen hundred applicants.

"I wanted very much to do something to help in war work," said one of these volunteers, a charming decorative designer, a fine looking, slender girl with gray eyes and a lovely vivid color. "I had never had any experience on the land. But I had driven a machine for eight years. I'd always had to do with horses; and I'm strong and athletic. I thought I might just as well spend the summer pitching hay as in swimming and playing tennis; and I applied at the office and passed the physical examination."

The girls who were chosen were selected mainly on the basis of their physical qualifications and the seriousness of their purpose. They were examined in Chicago by Dr. Lobdell and kept under her observation for two weeks. Then they were on trial at the farm for a period of two weeks. The ages of the volunteers at the farm ranged from 17 to 53 years. Fifteen per cent of them were professional and business women, 75 per cent college girls, and 10 per cent homemakers.

"The country around the farm is beautiful. At noon when I arrived they asked me if I could take a team of horses and run a peg-tooth harrow. They asked if I had driven a team of horses, and I said 'yes'—realizing as soon as I had said it that I had only driven a team once several years ago, and that most of my experience had been with one horse. But I took the four horse team they gave me and spent the afternoon standing on the board over the harrow, driving it over the plowed field. It was thrilling.

"We slept in the barn, and this was fixed so that it looked very attractive, with cretonne curtains and with rugs on the floor and some easy chairs and books and shaded lamps, and the furniture different people had given us. More often we slept in the open. It was beautiful to be out under the stars. To the east of the farm there is a swampy stretch of ground, and early in the morning this would be covered with mists that were lovely to see. I never had realized the sunrise before. Now I saw it every day. I enjoyed nothing more than that.

"I especially liked the farm machinery and had no difficulty in understanding it; and most of my work was in these lines, and with farm animals, though we all took our turn at everything, and I was in the creamery for two weeks, and did the cooking for two weeks. I was in the fields, too, and brushed peas, and weeded and sprayed, pitched hay and threshed. I am so glad of everything I learned to do. I never had any idea how to scrub before, or to mop. Now I can boast of being a skilled mopper."

There were a thousand things to be done on the farm in the first month—a thousand inconveniences and disorders to be endured in living there. Late in June Mr. Vibe K. Spicer, a Chicago railroad engineer, came out to see his wife, one of the committee members, then acting as house mother and cooking for fifty people. Parenthetically it may be said that this was indeed putting Pegasus to the plow. For Mrs. Spicer is Anne Higginson Spicer, none other than "Anchusa" of B. L. T.'s Line O'Type, and the author of one of our most distinguished war poems, "Jerusalem," to be set to music by Sousa. Mr. Spicer was overwhelmed by the sight of the needs of the farm. He determined to devote his entire vacation to filling these needs, and was welcomed enthusiastically in pitching a tent there and in directing the girls in many necessary undertakings in setting the place to rights, in draining it and fencing it; in giving them lectures on method, and helping them to appreciate the splendid reach of country where they worked. Mr. Spicer's guidance, philosophy, and friendship was of indispensable service in aiding both the practical and spiritual success of the enterprise.

"What did the Libertyville farm students do in their six months' work?" some one will ask. And for an answer we may turn to Mrs. Blake's report.

"The women plowed with horses and tractor; planted, cultivated, and harvested a crop of oats, wheat, barley, buckwheat, alfalfa, timothy hay, corn, and filled silos sufficient to feed the live stock on the farm until next harvest. They raised hogs, cows, and chickens, tended bees and did creamery work, including butter and cheese making; drained land and helped build buildings. Fresh vegetables were gathered from the truck garden each day to feed a family of fifty. They also brought into the canning department sufficient fruit and vegetables to keep a large force of girls busy canning, preserving, pickling, putting down in brine, etc.

"The farm is run in departments, for each of which separate accounts are kept. The products of the creamery are marketed at Randolph street for a satisfactory profit. The chickens and eggs have a good market along the north shore.

"In addition to the general farm work every girl had her training in planning, preparing, and serving meals for a hungry crew of fifty. It was no light task, as they had to learn to utilize the farm produce, and to combine economy with appetizing results. The most financially successful substitute experience this fall was the green tomato mincemeat. One hundred and thirty-eight quarts were sold at 75 cents a quart, totaling $103.50—a hint of what women can do in helping the family exchequer.

"During busy seasons there was an interchange of labor between the neighboring farmers and the girls of the training farm, and as many as ten girls in one day were sent to help in this work. They shocked corn, oats, and barley; helped with threshing, filled silos, and pitched hay. When the girls actually repaced men in this work they received the same wages as men; and when their strength was not equal to that of men, their time was paid for according to the amount of work they were able to do.

"I ran the Ford truck," said the clever young decorator, whose story I heard. "And we used to bring the baggage from the station. That was a very interesting thing to do. Yes, we could handle practically everything ourselves—wardrobe trunks, too. Once in a while the station master helped us a little, but not often.

"But I think what amused me most in the summer was my care of our nine calves. I weaned them. It was quite a difficult task, and they were such cunning, nice little things. The two hogs were given over to me from the minute of their arrival. I named them 'Liza Jane' and 'O, Min!' Some of the girls thought it was very queer that I could like them. But I did. I like all animals. One day when I came back to the farm after spending Sunday at home, one of the girls ran out and said, 'Come and see your new grandchildren!' 'My grandchildren?' 'Yes.' 'O, Min!' had nine little pigs. I was very fond of those.

"One noon one of the neighboring farmers asked if two girls could be sent over to help pitch hay. Miss S. and I were sent, and drove off after dinner for the work. That was exciting. We had pitched hay and worked the hay fork and were able to do it on our own farm, though. On our neighbor's we found that we could keep up with the men. After supper the farmer called up Miss Ransford and praised us, and asked if he could have several more girls on the next day. That was fine. After that we worked ever so many times for the neighboring farmers in pitching hay and with the threshers. At one of the first farms, at noon, the threshers all went up to one solitary basin and just one towel and washed and wiped their faces and hands. We didn't know quite what to do. Then we thought it best to follow, each in turn with the same basin and towel.

"Besides wanting to help in war work there was another serious feeling the girls had, too, in what we did. There was a feeling that we were doing something for women and women's work that we hoped would go on. There was so much in the experience that I cannot express all of it. I made some of the dearest friends of my life there. I think I would say that what was the finest in it was the spirit of the girls towards each other and their responsibility for the work together."

The spirit of helpfulness and accommodation was indeed one of the most important and by no means one of the easiest lessons of the farm. "What I consider most valuable in the experience," said Mrs. Blake, "was the gradual development of the girls' self-reliance, and the larger sense of life that many of the younger girls acquired for the first time, through the hard lesson of changing from the customs of privileged, private lives to those of a responsible, public task. The business and professional women, the homemakers, too, had that knowledge. But most of these girls had lived in the amateur spirit and among privileges. To have to do or to endure whatever was necessary for the common advantage, and for the success of a piece of work was new to them. These were things they could not learn in a minute nor without a struggle. Often they would go home over Sunday to indulgences and special admirations, and come back out of sorts to begin their work discontentedly. But in the end what triumphed entirely was their wish to act responsibly, according to their own powers, and to show what these were. That—the character formed in learning to give up the idea of privilege, was, in my view, the best value of the work."

Some one may ask "What did the Libertyville farm offer for its women students which is exceptional or different from the agricultural courses for women now open in the state universities?"

On account of his experience both with these institutions and as a practical farmer, I asked this question of a middle westerner widely known both in the United States and abroad as an agricultural expert and university lecturer.

"The difficulty with the big state universities' courses," he said, "is that like many other enormous organizations, they are so big there are a lot of things they can't do. They are too unwieldy. They can teach farming as a science. But can't teach it as a living art: and that was the advantage of the Libertyville farm.

"Then, their courses are long, four year courses, and require many preliminaries that women desiring to go on farms might often not wish to undertake.

"From many points of view the Libertyville movement to develop farm life as an attractive field for women's work is extremely valuable both for the country and for women themselves. I was a farmboy, and I shall always think farm life is the most wholesome and the best life there is for any one."

On Sept. 12 Gov. Lowden held a meeting of agricultural experts and farmers at Libertyville, where the women farmers served the conference with a lunch, and the governor made a memorable address on the experiment. Among other comments on the agricultural situation he said, "I have insisted for twenty years that the women of America were going to play a big part in the future agriculture of this country. I have insisted all this time that there is no profession and no occupation to which woman is so well suited as farming. A woman is a little bit more deeply related to the things that spring from the soil. She has a deeper sympathy with them."

"But what specific result has this experiment achieved?" some one will say, "in making a practical connection between women and farming in the United States? Are any of these women going on in the work since the signing of the armistice?" Even in the few months since the end of the course a number of the girls have found or developed future work for themselves in connection with the land. Several have taken shares in farms. Four or five are on their fathers' farms this summer. Seven are taking courses in agricultural colleges. One of these has been engaged to take charge of a dairy on an eastern farm, and another to manage the manufacture of a special kind of cheese in a dairy in a northern state. One of the girls is doing general farm work, helping a farmer at Grand Ridge. Two have married discharged soldiers and are living on farms with them. One has been engaged by the International Harvester company to teach the use of farm machinery in Russia. Many are planning and saving to have their own small truck farms. One has been engaged to aid in training other girls on a southern farm. Three of the girls are to start an enterprise quite new in women's occupation. They have been asked to take care of golf links in New York state. They are to have a cottage, a truck garden, two horses, and a cow; and with their outdoor undertakings they are to combine the management of serving luncheon at the links.

Such then is the history of the Libertyville experiment: the principles on which it was managed; the record of its accomplishment; an account of its typical daily life, and some of the possibilities of its future.

The chronicler cannot help sharing for that future the hope expressed by another observer, "There ought to be a training farm for women in every county in the United States."

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW
by Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"From Father to Son" (Macmillan), by Mary S. Watts.

"Dangerous Days (Doran), by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

"In Secret" (Doran), by Robert W. Chambers.

"The Gay-Dombeys" (Macmillan), by Sir Harry Johnston.

"A Woman's Woman" (Small-Maynard), by Nalbro Bartley.

"The Haunted Bookshop" (Doubleday-Page), by Christopher Morley.

WAR.

"Dinsmore Ely" (McClurg).

"With the Help of God and a Few Marines" (Doubleday-Page), by Brig. Gen. A. W. Catlin.

"1914" (Houghton-Mifflin), by Field Marshal Sir John French.

NONFICTION.

"What Happened to Europe" (Macmillan), by Frank A. Vanderlip.

Over 700 more borrowers used the public library each day this week than used it on the same day last year. That's one of the pros of prohibition.

"The Young Visiters" is one of the funniest books in the world! From the moment that the author's picture looks out at the reader a perfect portrait of the mythical cat who feels within him the singing joy of a canary well eaten, until it ends with a flourish of simplicity, "The End, Daisy Ashford" this novel of a 9 year old is a masterpiece. It is almost too good to be true, and yet no one past the age of pantalettes would have dared to write it.

"Mr. Salteena's Plan," it is subtitled—what could be more masterful than the choice of the gentleman's name. Unless we are a fickle nation Mr. Salteena will become more of a household personality than Mrs. Malaprop ever was. He sounds like a combination of an expensive wafer and a Bohemian diplomat. He was, however, poor soul, no more than the son of an honest but wealthy butcher, "an elderly man of 42," who "was fond of asking people to stay with him," and who "had quite a young girl staying with him of 17 named Ethel Monticue," and whose ambitions were in the way of breaking into "socierty."

His other plan of making Ethel Mrs. Salteena was frustrated by Bernard Clark, a "tall man of 29, rarther bent in the middle with very nice long legs," with whom he carelessly left Ethel while he dipped into high life. Bernard and Ethel, after a touching day in the country, were married in Westminster abbey, and left for a "meryy six weeks of bliss" in Egypt, returning with a "son and hair, a nice fat baby called Ignatius Bernard," who was soon supplemented by six more children, "four boys and three girls, and some of them were twins which was very exciting."

Miss Ashford throws a new illumination upon court life as the Young Visiter was viewing the family poertrait gallery with Bernard. Great Uncle Ambrose Fudge looked "a thorough ancester" to her, and she was proudly assured by Bernard that he was "really a Sinister son of Queen Victoria."

One of the most delightful prefaces in all literature is the one which J. M. Barrie has written, but it shouldn't be a preface. It should be at the end of the book, a cozy, chuckling chat with some one who has enjoyed "The Young Visiters" as much as you have. Save the preface until you have read the story and you will have an absolutely flawless and joyful half hour.

"Deer Godchild" (Scribners) is "twice blessed. It blesseth him that gives and him that takes." The record of a charming correspondence between James P. Jackson Jr., aged 12, and his adopted French orphan, aged 11, it will give a pleasant half hour to him that takes it home from a bookshop, and the money that that him gives for it will go to the fatherless children of France to help in the support of such another "deer godchild."

"The Born Fool" (Doran) is one of those wholly adequate stories which are far above the average of the second rate novel, but which just misses sparking somehow to the wireless call for genius which a reader always unconsciously sends out when he picks up a long psychological novel. John Walter Byrd is the pseudonym of an English author who prefers to hide his light under a wing. Conan Doyle thinks it is the best novel he has read this year. Dear old Conan's literary feasts would be dull dining to me.

For sheer perfection of the literary art, "My Antonia" (Houghton Mifflin) clasps hands with the few great and simple things of literature. Willa Sibert Cather, as my charming childhood friend, Henry Blackman Sell first declared, hasn't many rivals for the job of being America's greatest woman novelist—only he wrote many without the m. If you have been so unfortunate as not to have read it yet, dash out without waiting to pick up your hat and get "My Antonia."

G. C.: The Pulitzer prize for biography was awarded to "The Education of Henry Adams" (Houghton Mifflin). It is a prize of $1,000. I am always happy to answer questions about books and writers, but I warn you I am stupid about remembering where stray lines of poetry may be found. If "The Shropshire Lad" weren't "nearer to me than breathing" I shouldn't have been able to tell you where to find "I shall have lived a little while before I die forever." It is the fifty-seventh ladlet.

"Far Away Stories" (John Lane) is the first collection of William J. Locke's short stories, a collection which might better have remained scattered. Two of the stories he "loves the best" according to a page, "To the reader," which has the dexterity and charm of style which his novels always bring and which is patently lacking in his short stories. It is a wily suggestion—one keeps reading, in the hope that one may find two to love the best. And it's a vain hope. The stories are likable, but not "lovable." And William J. Locke is an extremely "lovable" writer usually.

I have just received from Paris a copy of Marshal Foch's famous book, "De la Conduite de la Guerre," which has been reprinted with a new preface by the author. The book, as you know, contains the lectures given in February, 1904, at the superior school of war by the great strategist, who was then an artillery colonel. It is still deeply interesting, although it discusses the war of 1870-'71—"In Memoriam, in Spem," Marshal Foch wrote at the end of the preface to the first edition. The book is a memorial tribute to the heroes of the Franco-German war. As to the hope, that has been fulfilled, thanks greatly to the very man who expressed it.

CRUSHED VIOLETS
by James Gibbons Huneker

"Good God! I forgot the violets," exclaimed Walter Savage Landor after he had thrown his cook out of the window. This happened at Fiesole, near Florence, and within one year of a century ago. The great prose master had a rather excitable temperament, as Charles Dickens has testified. (The novelist put him in "Bleak House" as Boythorn—"with the genius and much else left out," as Havelock Ellis says.) Landor dearly loved his flowers, and in his dismay he gave birth to a classic phrase. Nowadays we would gladly put a chef on the throne, so debased has become the world's cuisine. But Landor was an aristocrat masquerading as a fierce democrat and his gesture was a typical one, and in the gentlemanly interest; we might say a gentleman's prerogative, one that has gone quite out of fashion.

I am minded of his despairing cry when I think of Walter Pater. A member of the delicious Hermione's family, indelibly recorded by Don Marquis, asked me once upon a time if the prose of Pater didn't remind me of crushed violets. I related then and there the adventure of Landor's cook and the flower bed. Her answer threw much light on her mentality: "I wonder what the cook said?" she asked. But Pater prose and crushed violets! For the life of me I can't bridge this gulf of the dissimilar. Some of Whistler is an indigestion of strawberries and cream; but Pater and violets!

Mr. Greenslet has happily called his style African, as opposed to the Asiatic profusion of De Quincey. African or Alexandrian, it is a style that is seldom strongly affirmative. It sets forth in precise relief his Lydian music and felicitous skepticism. Pater paints pictures in his prose, and, like Flaubert, his images and ideas are ever fused. He would have said that a change in a nation's music meant a change in a nation's laws. Yet it is a popular misconception of Flaubert's and Pater's methods that describes these letters as patiently working in verbal mosaics; patient they were in polishing their prose, but they did not plaster a phrase with luscious tints or daub a paragraph with purple. The thought was accompanied by the appropriate verbal orchestration. It was the same with the creative processes of Richard Wagner.

Nor was Pater all music, all languor, and ecstasy. Consider this sentence on style: "Since all progress of mind consists for the most part in differentiation, in the resolution of an obscure and complex object into its component aspects, it is surely the stupidest of losses to confuse things that rigid reason has put asunder, to lose the sentence of achieved distinctions, the distinction between poetry and prose, for instance; or, to speak more exactly, between the laws of characteristic excellences of verse and prose composition."

Pater produced slowly—he wrote five books in twenty years, at the rate of an essay or two every year, thus matching Flaubert in his tormented production. The chief accusation brought against the Pater method of working and his consequent style is its lack of spontaneity; it is not a natural style. But a "natural style," so called, is not encountered in its full flowering more than a half dozen times during the course of a century; perhaps that figure is an exaggeration.

The French write all but flawless prose. To match Flaubert, Renan, or Anatole France we must go to Ruskin, Newman, and Pater. When we say, "Let us write simple, straightforward English," we are setting a standard that has been reached only by Thackeray, Newman, Arnold, and how few others? There are as many victims of the "natural English" formula as there are of the "artificial" formula of Pater and Stevenson. The first named write careless, flabby, colorless undistinguished, lean, commercial English, and pass unnoticed in the vast whirlpool of universal mediocrity, where the cliché is lord of the paragraph. The others, victims of a misguided ideal of affected "fine writing," are more easily detected and denounced by purists, pedants, and other sultry professorial persons.

There is another Pater, one far removed from the weaver of colored silken phrases. If he recalls the richness of Keats in the texture of his prose, he can also suggest the aridity of Spencer. There are essays of his as cold, as logically adamant, and as tortuous as sentences in the "Synthetic Philosophy." Luckily his tendency to abstract reasoning was subdued by the humanism of his temper. There are not many "purple panels" in his prose; "purple" in the De Quincey or Ruskin manner; no "fringes of the north star" style. He never wrote in sheer display. For the boorish rhetoric and apish attitudes of much modern writing he betrayed no sympathy. His critical range is catholic. Consider his essays on Lamb, Coleridge, Wordsworth, Winckelmann, not to mention those finely wrought masterpieces, the studies of Da Vinci, Giorgione, Botticelli, Joachim du Bellay. Even the newly gathered minor essays, slight as they are in theme and treatment, reveal the master.

Somewhat cloistered in his attitude toward the normal world of work, often the artist for art's sake, he may never trouble the main currents of literature; but he will always be a writer for writers, a critic for critics. Little books may have their destiny. Pater was a thinker whose vision pierces the shell of appearances, the composer of a polyphonic prose-music which echoes a harmonious adagio heard within the spaces of a Gothic cathedral, through the multi-colored windows of which filters alien daylight.

It was a favorite contention of his that all the arts aspire toward the condition of music. This idea is the keynote of Walter Pater, mystic and musician, who, like his own Marius the Epicurean, carried, his life long, "in his bosom across a crowded public place—his own soul." And yet——!

After reading these exhumed pieces about Moore, Wilde, and others, we ran across Disraeli's "Coningsby" and the exclamation of the princess: "I wish that life were a little more Dantesque." Pater may be anything you please, but he is not Dantesque. And do you remember the incident in "Alton Locke," when old Sandy MacKaye takes Alton to a London alley and bids him make poetry out of it: "Say how ye saw the mouth o' hell and the two pillars thereof at the entry, the pawnbroker's shop on the one side and the gin palace at the other—two monstrous devils eating up men, women, and bairns, body and soul. Look at the jaws of the monsters, how they open to swallow in another victim and another. Write about that!" Not even the bait thrown out by Sandy that classic tragedy was involved in the issue—man conquered by cruel circumstance—would have tempted Walter Pater to handle such a concrete case. He wrote beautifully of beautiful things. But of crushed violets—never.

TRANSATLANTIC FLIGHTS
by Henry M. Hyde

London.—The British are planning vast extensions of air fleets of all kinds for use in both peace and war. They start with a tremendous lead on the rest of the world because its maximum of aircraft in these islands was just reaching its maximum when the armistice was signed. The British air ministry had let contracts for no less than 25,000 heavier than air machines to be delivered during 1919.

The fact that the British empire is scattered over the whole world makes vital the matter of quick communication by air with the homeland and between the various self-governing dominions. The imperial government has made a start in interesting Canada, South Africa, and Australia in the development of great air service by presenting to each of them a number of airplanes of the latest models. They are also being urged to establish flying schools and harbors, and English flyers have already done a great amount of pioneer work in laying out air routes connecting British isles with far flung corners of the empire.

"The separate parts of the empire must now build up and weld together their commercial aerial organizations," says Maj. Gen. Sir F. H. Sykes, who is controller general of civil aviation for Great Britain. "Then if danger arises they will be able not only to protect themselves but to render immediate mutual assistance.

"The British possessions throughout the world afford plenty of facilities for the establishment of refuelling and repair stations for aircraft of all kinds. There should also be a chain of wireless stations so that air craft in flight may be constantly communicated with. It is also desirable that a volunteer citizens' air force should be established in each of the dominions. Such a plan would involve the standardization of airships throughout the empire. It would also make desirable the establishment of a central flying school in each dominion where flying, navigation, meteorology and aerial photography should be taught.

"Already British airmen are laying out the necessary air routes. Starting at Cairo in Egypt they are busy with pioneer flights which will lead by way of Karchi, Singapore and the Sunday islands to Australia. They will determine the best locations for future air harbors and where captive balloons should be moored so as to act as guiding buoys for aircraft which are flying the new air channels.

"It is likely that such precious freight as the gold of Australia might be profitably transported by air, as the time saved in this way would be great. For the speedy transport of important mail aircraft have already demonstrated their great value. Regular mail air routes are already established from Boulogne to the headquarters of the British army of occupation at Cologne. The average time it takes a letter to make the journey by air is seven hours. When mail is sent in the old way by steamboat and railway the average time of transportation is some five days."

Gen. Sykes points out the tremendous importance of the proposed international aerial convention at which aerial mail and trade routes and services of other kinds will be laid out on international lines.

"I have visited the great German airship bases at Ahlhorn and Nordholz," said Lieutenant Commander D. W. C. Ramsey, aide for aviation at the American naval headquarters in London. "I have also conferred many times with officers of the British air ministry. As a result I have made detailed reports to my superior officers in the United States navy. What the final recommendation of the department will be I, of course, do not know.

"I am especially interested in the rigid type of lighter than air ship such as the splendid British R-34, which is about to make this great flight across the Atlantic from Great Britain to New York. Big as this ship is—she is 640 feet long, displaces 2,000,000 cubic feet of air, and has a total lifting capacity of thirty-five tons—the R-34 is dwarfed entirely by the R-39, now under construction for the British government. The R-39 will displace 2,700,000 cubic feet of air and will be correspondingly large and powerful.

"It is exactly because there is practically no limit to the possible size of rigid airships that this type of aircraft promises greater results than any other, either lighter or heavier than air.

"The Armstrong-Whitworth Manufacturing company, which has built the rigid airships for the British admiralty, proposes to build similar but larger ships for the United States navy, if they are desired. Their proposal is for a rigid airship displacing 3,000,000 cubic feet of air with a maximum speed of sixty-three miles an hour. I do not, of course, know what action the department is planning, but I have heard that consideration is being given to the construction of three such great ships for navy use.

"As to the value to a navy of rigid airships there can be no question. So far no less than eight rigid airships have been built and flown in England. At the present time the British navy has six complete rigid airships and four more in process of construction. The R-27 and R-29 worked with the British fleet before the armistice and each of them destroyed a submarine. The building plants in Great Britain are capable of constructing perhaps five great rigids each year. The British navy has already five operating bases with berthing space for fourteen ships.

"With the adoption of helium as a substitute for hydrogen gas as the lifting force in lighter than air machines—a process discovered and developed in the United States—these aircraft can be made virtually immune to successful attack. They can be made large and powerful enough to travel safely for great distances. The R-34, for instance, can travel, with her crew of thirty men, a total distance of 4,000 sea miles.

"Personally I am convinced that the rigid type of airship, both from a military and commercial viewpoint, has at the present time greater possibilities of development than any other form of aircraft."

Just now when triumphs of air navigation succeed each other so fast they are confusing, it is unfortunate that Lord Northcliffe, greatest patron the bird men have ever had, is prevented by illness from taking an active part in the repeated celebrations of victorious air flights. Lord Northcliffe is confined to his room following a somewhat serious operation for the removal of a growth on his thyroid gland. It is welcome news that the growth was not a malignant one and that surgeons say there is practically no danger of its recurrence. But Lord Northcliffe will not be able to resume his usual active life for several months.

Meantime his various newspapers continue both by offering prizes and by printing articles to further his pet policy of encouraging in every way the still greater development of air transportation.

The Mail recently in its leader called attention to the fact that letters coming across the Atlantic by airplane would easily have beaten cablegrams and wireless messages, which are at present greatly delayed. The average delay on cablegrams even when full high rates are paid is certainly not less than sixteen hours, which was almost exactly the time consumed by Capt. Sir John Alcock and Lieut. Sir Arthur Whitten Brown in crossing from Newfoundland to Ireland. Quite frequently also the cables get so badly out of order or become so congested that messages are held up for several days. The voyage of the R-34, which carries this note, is expected to be the pioneer of a regular service across the ocean, so that before long American newspaper readers may grow quite accustomed to reading the latest by aeroplane from Europe.

Englewood Church Plans to Build a Community House

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

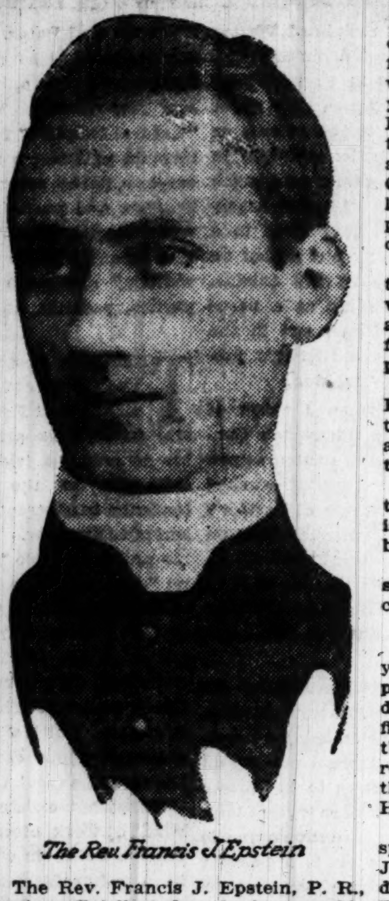
A CHURCH improvement estimated at $37,500 and may cost $40,000 will be the new community house which the Pilgrim Congregational church, Sixty-fourth street and Harvard avenue, will erect this fall. In the first service in which the report of the committee was received $31,700 was subscribed. Since then the subscriptions have been coming in so it is expected the amount will be fully reached by the time the building is completed.

The community house will be erected adjoining the church building and will contain Sunday school rooms, gymnasium, dining rooms, kitchen, parlors, baths and other conveniences. The building committee is: W. F. Friedeman, F. J. Kitchell, D. M. White, Mrs. H. A. King, C. J. Rittenhouse, L. K. Scotford. The finance committee is: A. R. Lowe, F. S. Nims, E. S. Smith, F. M. Hallenback, N. A. Melvin, and ex-officio members: C. E. Shearman, treasurer; G. D. Hopkins, chairman board of trustees; O. C. Chase, secretary. The Rev. Clyde S. Shepard is pastor of the church.

The bureau of supplies of the State Congregational association, formed for the purpose of assisting churches in finding ministers and assist ministers in finding churches, consists of the following members: The Rev. J. R. Nichols, chairman; the Revs. J. A. Jenkins, Frank Bush, R. L. Breed, R. T. McCollum, and Ernest Bourner Allen.

The investiture of the Rt. Rev. James J. Bennett in the robes of the Monsignor will take place at St. Mary's church, Aurora, next Tuesday. The Rt. Rev. Peter J. Muldoon will preside. Mons. Bennett is vicar general of the Rockford diocese. He is at present chaplain of St. Charles hospital in Aurora.

The fifteenth annual Christian institute of the National Reform association will meet in Winona Lake, Ind., Aug. 4-14. Among the speakers will be the Rev. James S. Martin, general superintendent; the Rev. James S. McGaw, general field secretary, and the Rev. Larimore C. Denise, assistant general superintendent of the National Reform association.



The Rev. Francis J. Epstein

The Rev. Francis J. Epstein, P. R., begins officially today the irremovable rectorship of St. Michael's Roman Catholic church at Wheaton. Last Sunday he was at the church and organized an automobile parade to escort his predecessor, the Rev. Fr. De la Porte, who resigned after forty years' of service, to his future home in Lombard.

Father Epstein is 39 years of age. He was born in Chicago, his parents coming here over fifty years ago. He was the first pastor appointed by Archbishop G. W. Mundelein to organize a new parish, St. Williams, at Wrightwood and Newland avenues.

Father Epstein has made a record in promoting the Catholic employment bureau, which gave employment without charge to 6,000 in the last three years. He was moderator of the district union under which the employment bureau was inaugurated with the assistance and approval of Archbishop Mundelein.

Father Epstein was educated in St. Mathew's parochial school and St. Francis seminary, Milwaukee. He received his degree of A. B. and A. M. from Quincy, Ill., college. He then went abroad and studied for over four years in the University of Innsbruck. He was ordained there in 1905. After travel he returned to the United States and was appointed by Archbishop Quigley curate at St. Clara's, Woodlawn. He made a specialty of young people's work and organized the Catholic club of Woodlawn.

He was then five years at St. Martin's church, Englewood. In 1913 he was sent to Volo, Ill., where he opened a parochial school and began a fund for a new church. He was then appointed to organize St. William's.

He was associated with Father Frederick Siedenberg in the organization of the Catholic Historical Review and is assistant editor of the publication.

His promotion to be irremovable rector opens up a career of unusual promise in what is said to be one of the best parishes in the archdiocese.

His brother is the Rev. Charles Epstein, pastor of St. Frances Assissium church.

The Rev. John M. Bowen, for eight years pastor of St. Catherine of Siena parish, was given a reception last Friday evening in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Today there will be a religious observance of the occasion at the church, Washington boulevard and Humphrey avenue, Oak Park.

Dr. John Webster Melody was the speaker Friday evening. Mgr. Daniel J. Riordan will preach the sermon today. A purse was presented Father Bowen, and the children of the school presented him with a painting of his mother, recently deceased.

Father Bowen was born in Chicago in 1869. He attended a select school for boys conducted by the Sisters of Mercy at Twentyl-ninth street and Wabash avenue. He graduated from St. Ignatius college in 1889 and from the American college of Rome. He was ordained priest by Cardinal Parrochi at Rome, July 26, 1894.

He served as assistant at St. Pius church, Chicago, from 1895 to 1901 and as assistant at Corpus Christi church from 1901 to 1904. He was pastor of the Immaculate Conception church at Coal City, Ill., from 1904 to 1911. He became pastor of St. Catherine of Siena church in 1911.

The Bible conference at Northfield, Mass., will begin next Friday and continue to Aug. 17. Among the speakers will be four ministers from England, the Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, the Rev. D. J. Jones, the Rev. Charles Inglis, and the Rev. Thomas Tiplady, one of the famous chaplains of the British army. Ministers of the United States include the Rev. Harris E. Kirk of Baltimore, the Rev. A. T. Robertson of Louisville, and the Rev. Len G. Broughton of Nashville.

The Rev. S. P. Long will speak today at 10:45 on "Lessons from the Great War" in the Wicker Park Lutheran church, Hoyne avenue and LeMoyne street. Dr. Long in announcing his subjects stated he would go to the Deaconess hospital next Wednesday for an operation.

The Rev. J. O'Hearn, chaplain of the 108th trains, has been appointed assistant to the Rt. Rev. Mgr. E. A. Kelly, pastor of St. Anne's Roman Catholic church.

Herbert L. Willett Jr., son of the pastor of the church, will occupy today the pulpit of the Memorial church of Christ, Oakwood boulevard near Cottage Grove avenue.

The third world's Christian citizenship conference will meet in Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 9-16, under the auspices of the National Reform association. The former conferences were held in Philadelphia and Portland, Ore. Among the speakers for this conference will be Charles Evans Hughes, P. P. Claxton, Frank J. Cannon, Senator Arthur Capper, Congressman Henry M. Temple, Henry Van Dyke, Gifford Pinchot, Charles E. Jefferson, Charles Stelzle, Samuel Z. Batten, Edwin C. Dinwiddie, Charles L. Goodell, and Mrs. Ella A. Boole.

The Rev. Martin D. Hardin is announced as the speaker in the Third Presbyterian church, Ashland and Ogden avenues, for the evening of Aug. 27. Dr. Hardin was formerly pastor of the Third church and has since been lecturing for the Red Cross and other patriotic societies.

Headquarters of the Federal council of Lutheran Brotherhoods has been located in the Masonic temple, State and Randolph streets, Chicago. Those in charge are the Rev. S. S. Waltz, D. D., the national executive secretary, and Harry B. Gerhardt, field secretary for this district.

Abbe Earnest Dimnet is in Chicago in the interest of Lille university, which met great damage during the German invasion. He is professor of English literature at the college Stanislaus, Paris, and is the guest in Chicago of the Rev. Thomas V. Shannon, pastor of St. Thomas Apostle church.

MARKING SUMMER SOLSTICE.

THE time was 3,500 years ago. The ice sheet still lay over the northern quarter of America, damming back the outlets of the great lakes, and covering what is now northern Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and North Dakota under an enormous glacier.

In Egypt the Pharaohs were busily engaged in erecting magnificent pyramids as tombs for themselves. Assyria was a mighty kingdom then, the whole of Greece was still a wilderness and Italy a land peopled with barbarians.

The scene is in the island of England, or, as it could be better termed, Great Britain, to distinguish it from Little Britain, or Brittany, across the channel in France. In the center of Salisbury plain, then a densely populated district, a great crowd is gathered. It is the dawn of day on the summer solstice, and the people had come to witness the sacrifices which mark the beginning of the new year.

The rude temple around which they are gathered was of a type peculiar to the Celtic people of that time. It was set in a sort of pit, surrounded by a circular earthwork, and so oriented that it faced the northeast on the exact point where the sun was to rise at the beginning of summer.

The outside of the temple was a palisade of stones set in a gigantic ring. These huge monoliths were all capped by giant stone lintels. A few paces inside was a second circle, of smaller stones, blue in color, and evenly spaced about the ring. Inside of this was another giant ring, or, to be more exact a horseshoe shaped palisade and inside this a fourth circle, of blue stones.

The open side of the horseshoe faced the rising sun, and in the center was a great stone altar. The circular mound surrounding the pit was cut away on the northeast side to allow a free passage for the sun's rays. In this path a huge block of stone was set, so spaced that as the sun rose on this one day its shadow would reach out and just touch the altar.

Today, in the fast gathering light of dawn, victims lie bound on the altar stone, while the priests, or druids, as they are called, stand with their stone hammers, waiting. The day grows brighter, the purple shades slip into the west, and over the eastern edge of the hills there comes the gathering sunshine. The druids are watching carefully now, across the edge of the sunstone. A flash comes over the top, the sunlight streams down the long lane to the altar and upon the faces there, the druids make the bloody sacrifice, and a new year has begun in Britain.

This old temple, now known as Stonehenge, has withstood the ravages of weather, time, and man himself or thirty-five centuries. The people who built it belonged to the neolithic period, or age of polished stones. Iron was unknown to them, but bronze implements, such as swords and spear heads, were just beginning to be introduced. They were far too expensive, however, to be in general use, and the chisels used in cutting the stones were also of stone. These are found in great numbers near by, where the workers threw them after they had worn out.

Stonehenge is about 300 feet across. About two-thirds of the stones are still standing, the rest having fallen down and the smaller ones carried away to make foundations for houses, millstones, and what not. It is only too true that men have little respect for the monuments of those who lived before, and tear them down merely for the material they contain.

NEW LINES OF WORK.

To the boy and girl interested in a career and a future there are many new lines of work opening up; fields of endeavor which have only been cultivated the last few years and many of which are almost limitless in the opportunities they afford.

Of course there are the established occupations such as medicine, law, dentistry, pharmacy, teaching, journalism, and library work. And there are all the many engineering lines and the building trades and all the complicated machinery of the manufacturing industry and the business of transportation and commerce. But besides these old established lines of work from which the majority of men and women choose their life work there are also various miscellaneous branches of endeavor—side lines, as it were—which are steadily growing and enlarging their scope and which, as the world's opportunities increase, furnish infinite chances for the ambitious youth.

A few of these openings will be given here; not by any means an exhaustive list, for that would be practically impossible in any limited space, but some of the specific vocations which are not to be classified under the regular professions and trades, and which, of comparative recent development, are rapidly increasing in popularity.

Among the first to be mentioned might be social service work. This is a development of the old time charity work; established forms of public giving which town and country have always found necessary and which they have always performed according to their knowledge and means.

Now this simple giving of alms has branched out into a large system of constructive work. The poor are helped in every way; to health, to work, to a sanitary way of living. There is much preventive action being taken the country over and therefore there has sprung up a demand for the expert social worker; for positions as investigators, collectors, visitors, secretaries, lecturers, trained nurses, and officers called "probation officers."

More and more numerous are the large companies which are employing trained men and women for this same welfare in their own concern, and while as a rule the salaries paid social workers are not large, it is a most fascinating line of work for those who are interested in their fellow beings.

There are several schools for social workers, two of the principal ones being in Chicago and New York. It is not necessary to be a college graduate to enter these schools, although some college work is desirable.

Here might be mentioned the private secretary. For this typewriting and stenography are essential. The opportunities for advancement are great. One might quote many examples of private secretaries rising to high positions of executive importance.

There are a few schools which prepare directly for this work, but the majority of secretaries have taken the regular high school training and their additional training has varied according to the demands of the line of work they have taken up.

For the man or woman who is skillful with the brush there are many commercial lines of art which he or she can follow. Illustrating has crept into almost every field of work. All business houses want their products sketched on paper; catalogue illustrators are employed by big pattern houses two and three times a year; magazine and newspaper publications use illustrators for all their output, and advertising illustrators are probably the best paid of all the commercial artists.

Right here should be pointed out the opportunities in photography. Photography and business are rather closely connected, so the young man or woman entering on this line as a profession should have some liking and knack for business. There is studio work in photography and also commercial photography. Large concerns want pictures of their machinery for publications, and newspapers and magazines want pictures. There is a large field open to the man who is clever with his camera.

For this work higher education is not needed, but it is well to remember that for any and all vocations and trades a high school education is a real help.

In aeronautics the field is widening every day. The prospects in airplane engineering are many. The airplane industry is growing and is at once a fascinating line to the average boy and promises to be a profitable one as well. Aeronautical science is intensely interesting and the man of the future who knows how to undertake airplane construction work and why is going to be the man who will be a leader in this newest of industries.

For every man who flies there will be ten men needed on the ground and the construction departments of the factories will need thousands of experts—airplane constructors and airplane designers.

In connection with the opportunities open now in the trades, the business of expert automobile machanician is extremely good. There are about 5,000,000 motor vehicles in this country alone, and the number is growing all the time.

In the printing trades also chances are many because of the tremendous amount of printed matter put out each day. There are linotype schools in almost all of the large cities where boys learn to be typesetters. These courses are only a few months long. Then there is proofreading, too, the proofreader needing besides a technical education, a good knowledge of the English language.

Engraving is a skilled line of work; there are concerns which do exclusive business in this and the demand for workers is great. Then there are all the sidelines of embossing and binding and ruling as well as the work of pressmen and electrotyper.

The printer is steadily employed, too, which is another advantage of this trade. A boy should have good eyesightt and sound lungs in this line, and while a common school education is all that is absolutely necessary, he will find a high school education of material benefit to him later on in his work.

Women are finding many opportunities in domestic science lines. Courses of one and two years prepare women for positions as teachers, or to take charge of the catering in large restaurants and mercantile establishments.

Excellent paying positions as physical directors are open both to men and women. A two year course is offered to high school graduates by many of the best colleges, leading to positions in social service centers, industrial plants, playgrounds, public schools, and colleges.

Landscape architecture is a line in which many are making a good livelihood.

There are schools which are devoted to the teaching of dress designing, cutting, and fitting, and pattern drafting. There are schools which teach multigraphing in a few weeks and one of the newest professions for women is filing; intensive courses in this prepare one for a position in a month or so.

This is only the briefest résumé of some of the most modern occupations open to girls and boys. From every profession there are side paths leading to other lines of work.

There is the osteopath, for instance; not to be compared at all to the masseuse, and requiring most of the qualifications and education of the doctor of medicine. Because of the fact that there are not many osteopaths as yet, the opportunities in a career of this nature are many.

Then there are the schools of mechanical dentistry, where one learns the mechanism of the teeeth and the business of making the implements necessary to the profession of dentistry.

(For any information on trades and professions, the schools which teach them, and the chances of success in following them, write the School Counselor, THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"I have made up my mind to be a doctor and I have had one year of high school work. I am going to take work at night, too. Please advise me what subjects to take.—H. W."

You can take four years of Latin, four years of English, and then besides some science, history, and mathematics. The first two subjects are especially necessary to a physician.

"What course would you advise me to follow? I am a high school graduate, have had five months' intensive training, and am working as a stenographer during the day.—G. N."

I should think that a course in commerce and business administration would be excellent for you to take up. There is a college of commerce and business administration at 1326 West Fourteenth street. It is maintained by the board of education. There is no tuition charged to resident Chicagoans; the course is open to high school graduates and is a two year course.

"I should like to know if there is any free school where I could study mechanical drawing in the daytime. I work nights and could spend several hours during the day at my studies.—J. K."

There is a free public continuation school at Fourteenth and Union streets giving instruction in machine shop, mechanical drawing, and carpentry.

"Am anxious to take up mechanical engineering and would like some information regarding courses and tuition at the state university. Have had only a grammar school education. Am I handicapped seriously? G. V."

Before you can take up engineering at any technical college you will have to have approximately three years of high school work. You can get this work, however, in evening schools. There are private schools in the city which train directly for university work. A small tuition is charged at these private schools, and then beginning in September there are the free public night high schools. You will make progress faster at the private night schools than at the public night schools. If you wish send me your address and I will send you a list of these schools and also a catalogue of the state university's requirements for entrance in engineering courses.

TOPICAL AND TYPICAL

By Guy F. Lee.

EVEN TO THIS.

"A penny for your thoughts," I pled
Of Mae, whose brow seemed troubled.
"You'll have to bid again," she said,
"You see, the rate has doubled."

A FIZZLE.

'Tis easy sizzling rime to write
If one is spurred by Fahrenheit;
At 95 it's soft enough
To ooze out jingles of hot stuff.
But here in Chi the summer bard
Is up against it good and hard:
He no more gets his rythm warm
Than b-r-r; a chisly thunder storm;
He sweats a canto, then that old
Lake Breeze swoops down and leaves him cold.
Unhet, no pep, he lacks the chance
To pull a puff in short, sharp pants;
The opportunity's so fleet
He can't go crazy with the heat!

BOZZARIS 1919.

Strike, till the sun goes down, and then
Strike, till the sun comes up again;
Strike, be it which or why or when,
Just so you strike—that's all!

To Ten Thousand Women Ten Thousand Thanks!

No words can begin to express my appreciation of your response to my request for advice upon how to advertise

"JARDIN de ROSE"

The FRENCH FACE POWDER Made in America

The results of the contest have been beyond belief—not only in the number of responses, but in their uniformly high character, their knowledge of the subject, and their enthusiasm over a simple, straight-forward business proposition.

Because words are inadequate, and because I want to prove my gratitude, I am going to do my best to express it by action—I am going to award a special prize to every woman who entered the contest, and who has not been awarded one of the cash prizes. These special prizes may seem small to you individually—and they are—but in the aggregate they represent many times the total of all the cash and other prizes originally offered.

SPECIAL PRIZES FOR EVERYONE

I am going to give to each of you one full-sized box of "JARDIN de ROSE" Face Powder, and four miniature boxes of various tints, so that you may try it in the different shades, or share it with your friends if you care to.

No such thing was contemplated when my prize offer was made, but I am doing it as an act of simple justice—giving you only that to which your generous action entitles you.

I have already read hundreds of these letters myself and there is not one of them that is not worth more to me than the special prizes I am awarding.

The letters of adverse criticism are valued quite as much as the letters of praise and approval. I wanted women's real opinions and I got them. I ought now to know more about face powder advertising than any other man in America or elsewhere—at least I know much more about it than I thought there was to know—and I know it only because American women have told me.

THIS IS WHAT I VALUE MOST

The greatest thing that my first advertisement did was to win your confidence. Your letters prove that you recognized its sincerity. That is the greatest thing that any advertisement can achieve. Your confidence is the greatest asset that any business could have.

I want to retain that confidence. I want to prove to you tnat when I asked you for something, I asked for it in all sincerity and with no ulterior motive. I did not ask you to buy anything, and now, to prove that I meant it, I am giving you more than I promised. That is the reason for the special prizes.

A FAITH THAT WAS JUSTIFIED

My business is built entirely upon giving real values, telling the truth about them, and trusting the intelligence and discrimination of American women. If I had ever doubted the intelligence of women, your letters would have settled my doubts. Fortunately, I did not doubt it. My advertisement was based upon my faith in your intelligence, and you have justified that faith overwhelmingly.

JUST A WORD ABOUT BUSINESS

You who have tried "JARDIN de ROSE" Face Powder—you now know what it is. Hundreds of you already have told me that it is far finer and better than anything I have said about it. May I now ask you to give equal confidence to the other "JARDIN de ROSE" Toilet Luxuries—the Rouge, Toilet Water, Perfume, Sachet and Talcum?

You will find every one of these products to be a true French creation, far finer and at a fairer price than anything similar that has been offered to you. That is all that I care to say about them. Superlatives have been used so often and so carelessly that they have become meaningless—therefore I try to avoid them.

All I ask is that you try these products once—not at your risk, but at mine. They are fully guaranteed and your money will be refunded cheerfully if you are not entirely pleased. You know quality and value when they are put before you. Here they are—quality extraordinary and value plus.

Many dealers throughout the country already carry the full line of "JARDIN de ROSE" Toilet Luxuries. Those who do not can easily get them from their jobbers.

I thank you earnestly for this further co-operation and I know that you will feel repaid by the excellence of everything bearing the name "JARDIN."

HERE ARE SOME OF THE THINGS I HAVE LEARNED FROM YOUR LETTERS

1—What women want most of all to know about a face powder is whether or not it is pure. That point was made more often than any other in your letters. "JARDIN de ROSE" purity is fully guaranteed. Nothing purer could be made. It contains no white lead, no bismuth, no mercury, no arsenic, and no other ingredient that could possibly injure the finest or most sensitive skin—even a baby's. And "JARDIN de ROSE" is not only harmless—it is beneficial to the skin. It allays irritation, protects, soothes and heals.

2—Women want to know how I can sell for 50 cents "the most expensively-made face powder it is possible to make." Just because all good face powders must be made of similar basic ingredients. The secret of good face powder is not altogether in the ingredients—which are often the same in different powders—but in the proportions of each ingredient and in their scientific blending. These ingredients are not expensive. They cost every manufacturer the same, no matter what he charges for his powder. There is no way that a face powder could be made that would make it cost more, or make it worth more, than "JARDIN de ROSE." In some cases the extra price asked represents a fancy box—in too many cases it represents merely an extra profit. Manufacturers are at liberty, of course, to charge what they please. I choose to ask only what the best powder costs, plus a fair profit.

3—Many women ask—"Will your powder stay on?" The answer is—try it. I have said that it is "the most clinging face powder ever made." I would not dare to risk your trial if my statement were not true. But there is only one way for you to prove this to your own satisfaction—that is to try it. Your money will be refunded if you are not fully pleased. You take no risk.

4—The most gratifying letters of all came from those women—and there were many of them—who had used "JARDIN de ROSE" Face Powder for years—long before it was advertised. Without a single exception, these women say that my advertising does not claim half enough for "JARDIN de ROSE." As I have said before, I do not believe in extravagant claims. All I ask is that women try my products. They speak for themselves much more convincingly than anything I can say.

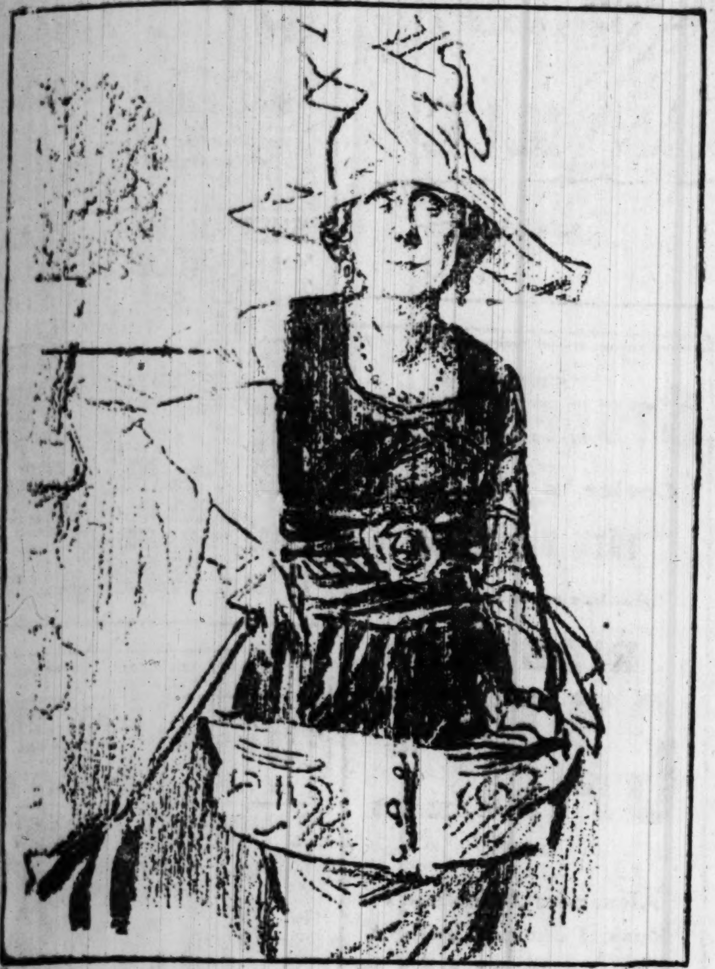
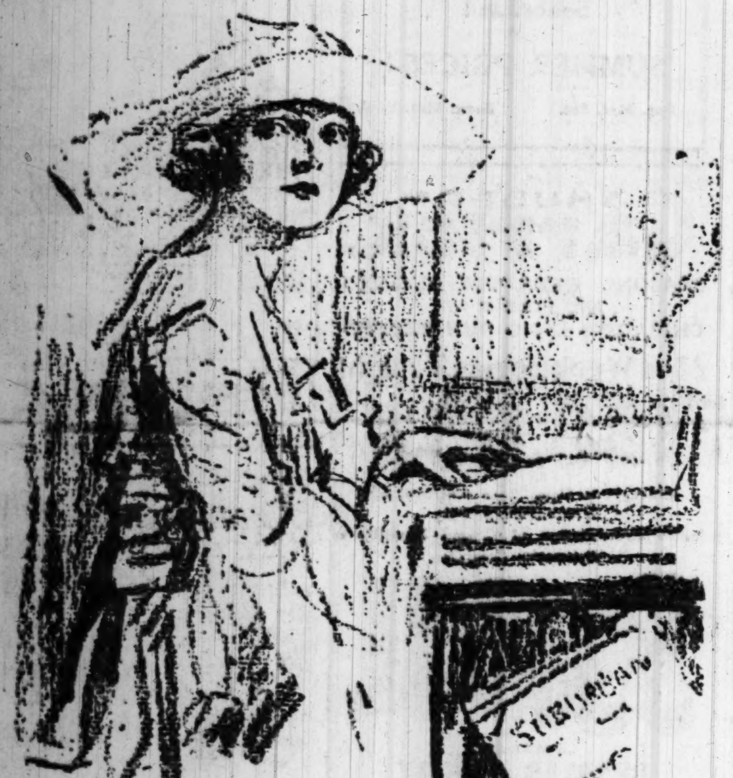
Keeping Down Expenses

By W. E. HILL

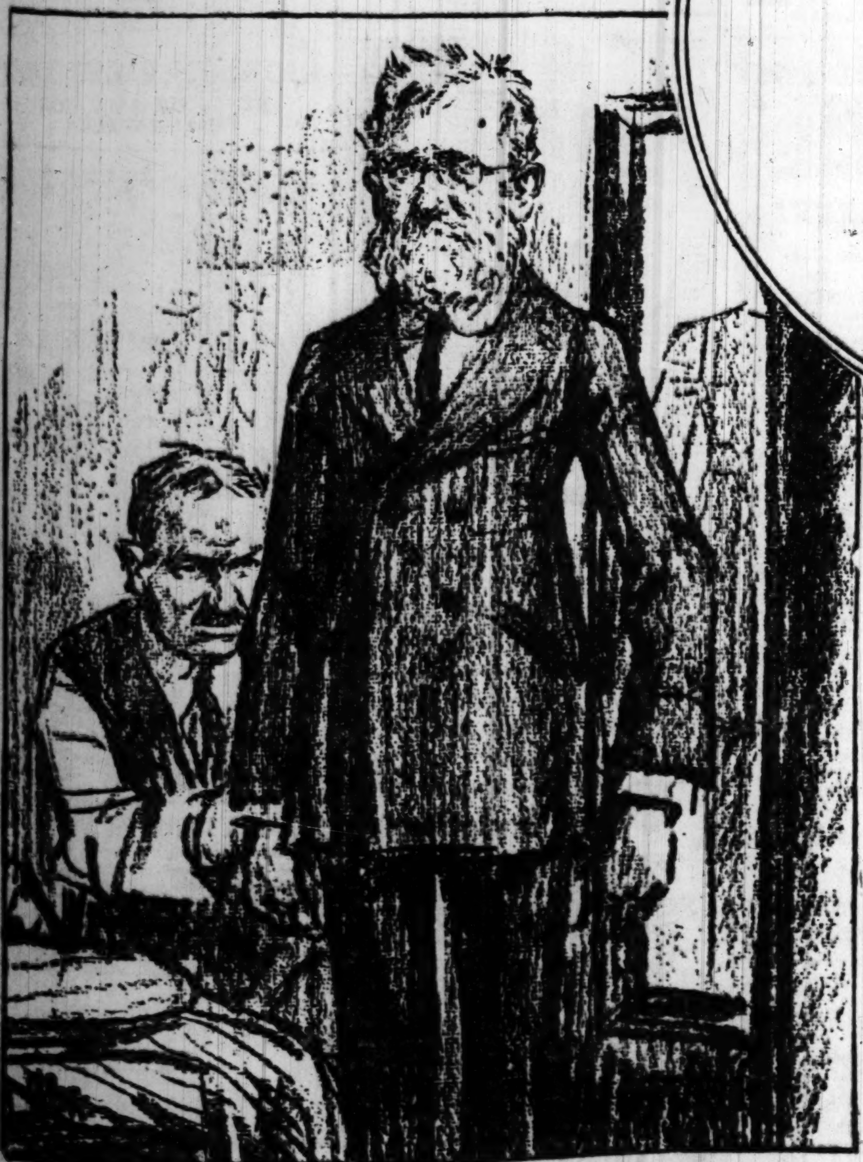
(Copyright, 1919, New York Tribune Inc.)



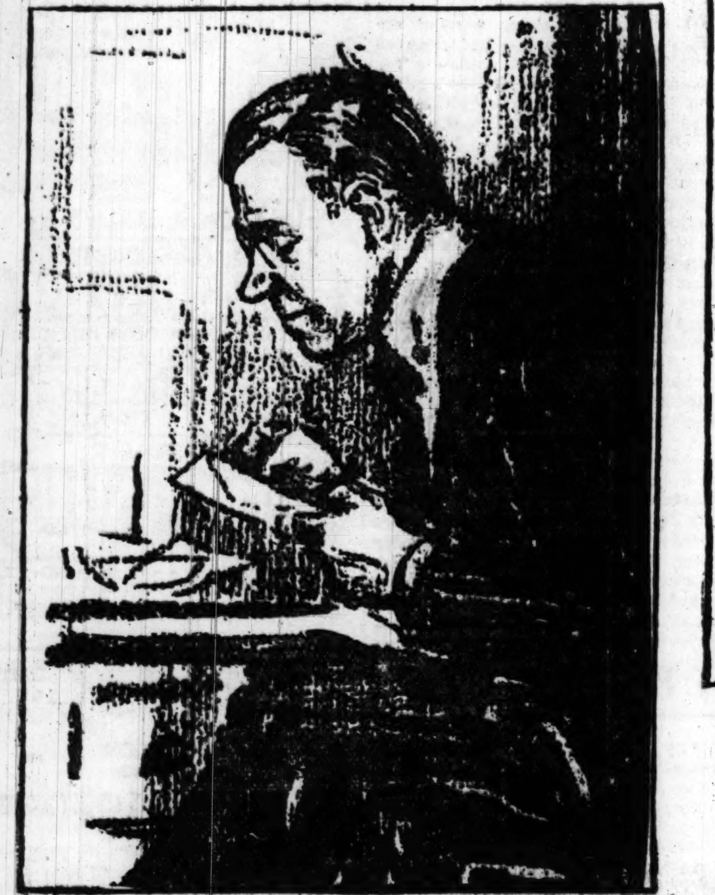
Mrs. Harry De Lossey Millyon will tell you at great length that she "just doesn't see how she and Harry can escape the poorhouse, with all these weddings and having to buy presents," etc. However, Mrs. Millyon has hit on the novel slogan of "Not so much the value of the gift as the thought that goes with it," and it saves considerably.



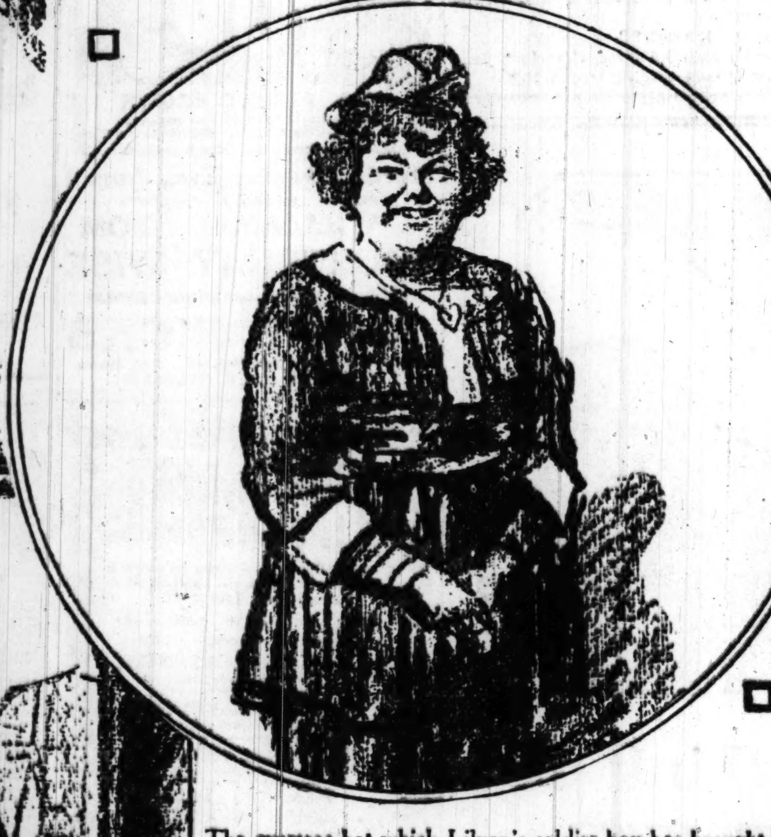
Ethel, who is all for strict economy these days, has discovered a roadhouse where you can get a steak—for two, mind you—for two dollars. It is only six or seven miles by taxicab, and Ethel is phoning Harry—who really ought to economize more—to take her there.



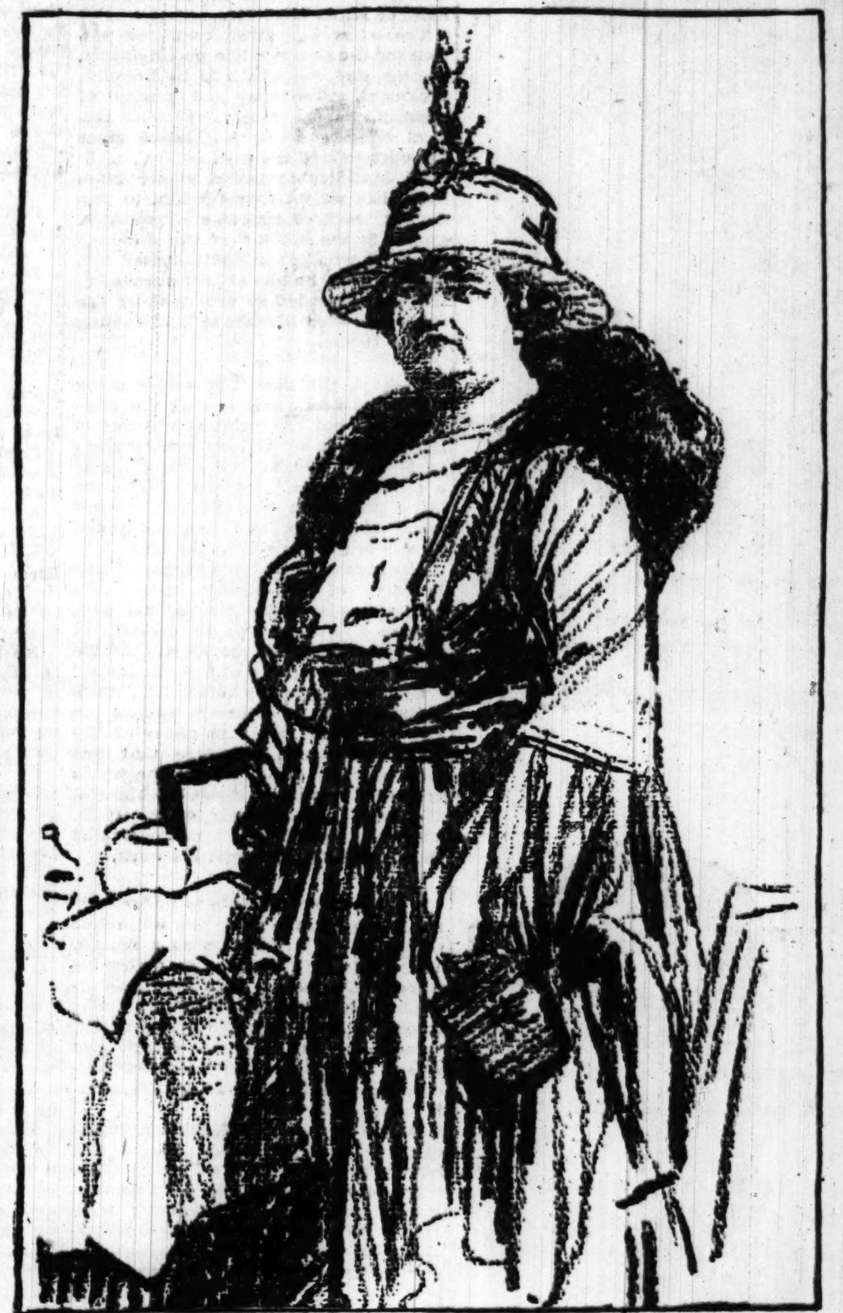
The salaries of our college professors have not risen proportionately with the H. C. of L. and it becomes necessary that Professor Dobey should patronize a more moderate priced tailor. It was Mrs. Dobey who discovered the "college cut" tailoring shop, "and," said that lady, "it seems as though you could hardly go wrong, since they advertise college clothes." Something seems to have gone wrong, although the professor, who is accustomed to leaving it all to the tailor, can't figure out what it is.



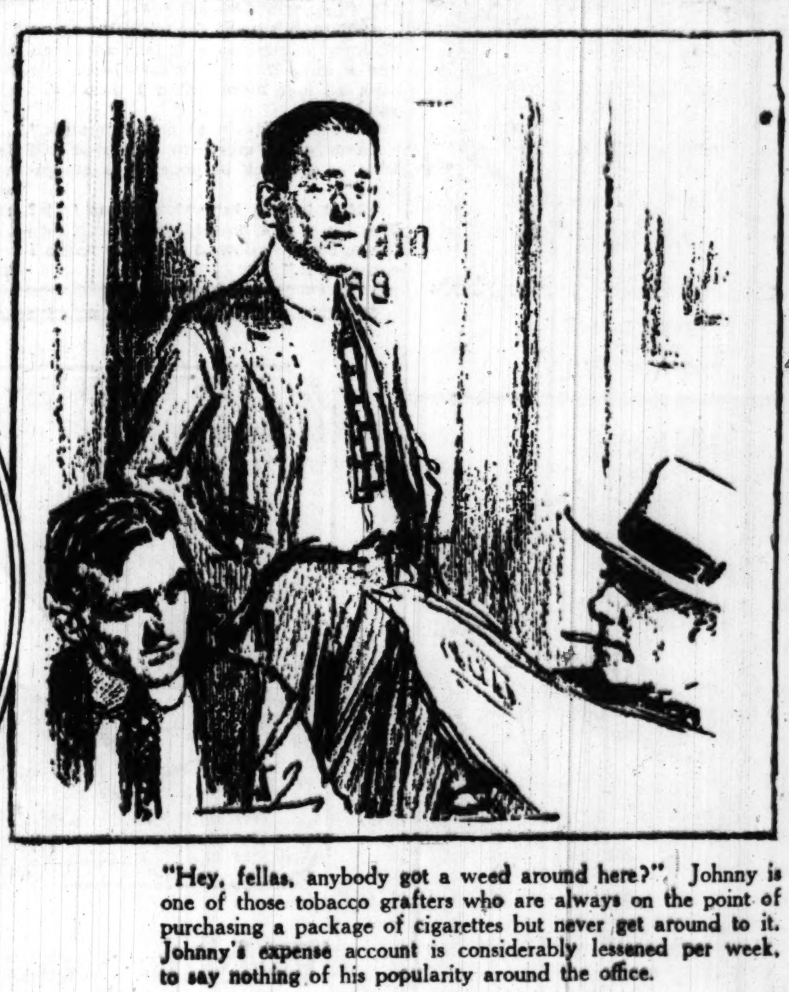
"A penny saved"—— Irving has found a stamp which has come through the mail in perfect condition—no cancellation—and he is going to pick it off the envelope if it takes the whole morning.



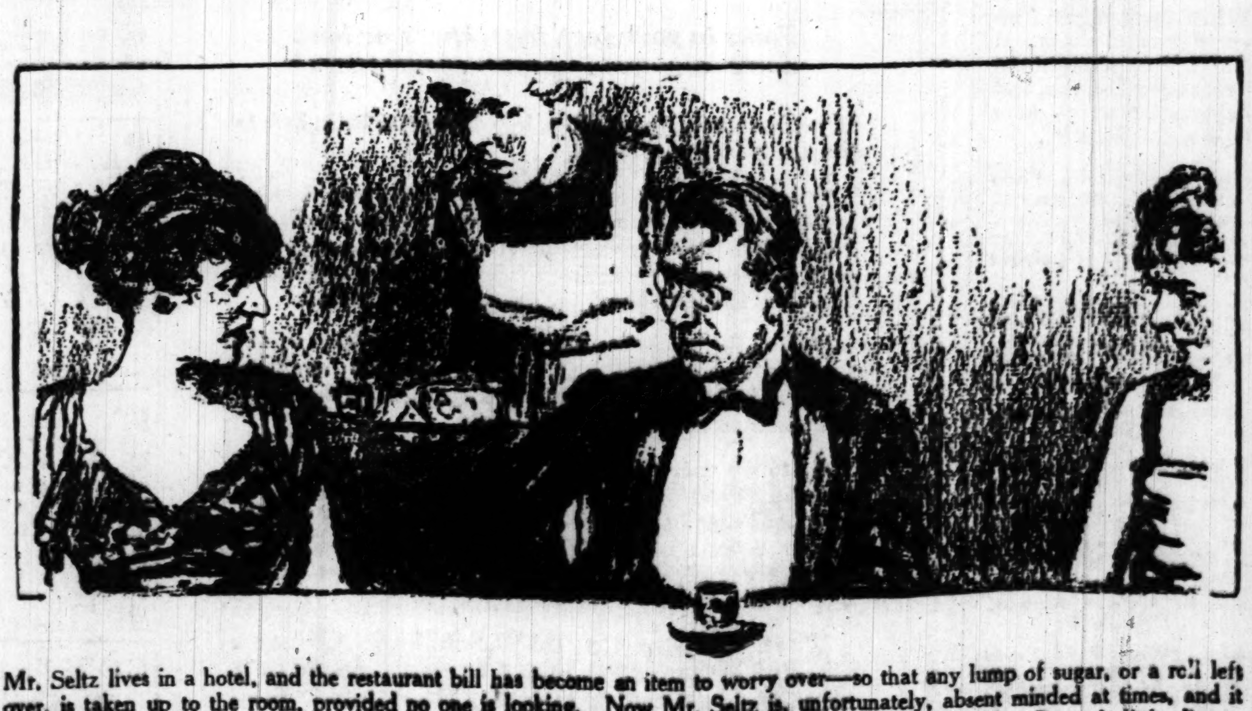
The overseas hat which Lilyan's soldier boy has brought her has been a great saving of millinery to Lilyan. Lilyan expects to keep company with a "gob" next fall, and if a sailor hat labeled "U. S. S. Texas" is forthcoming she will be nicely fixed for the autumn.



Mrs. Wilkie has no intention of tipping the waiter—not a bit of it—her chop was overdone—or maybe it was the check, which she had to wait for. Tipping is an unnecessary expense these days, and, anyway, why should she give 5 cents to a stupid waiter who lets a chop be overdone!



"Hey, fellas, anybody got a weed around here?" Johnny is one of those tobacco grafters who are always on the point of purchasing a package of cigarettes but never get around to it. Johnny's expense account is considerably lessened per week, to say nothing of his popularity around the office.



Mr. Seltz lives in a hotel, and the restaurant bill has become an item to worry over—so that any lump of sugar, or a roll left over, is taken up to the room, provided no one is looking. Now Mr. Seltz is, unfortunately, absent minded at times, and it was hard to explain why he should have emptied the contents of the sugar bowl into his pocket at Mrs. Brown's little dinner.

RICHARD CARLE is headed for the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York for a run. Gilbert P. Riswold, the sculptor, has completed a bust of him which is now being converted into a permanent bronze and will be exhibited here before going into competition in the east. This is Mr. Riswold's first treatment of a stage topic. He is known as the sculptor of the Stephen A. Douglas monument unveiled at Springfield within the year, and he has in hand an heroic undertaking for the Mormons in Salt Lake City. The star of "Sunshine" gave him ten settings and showed the adaptability for looking pleasant in clay.

Frank Tinney, and not Ed Wynn, will dominate the proceedings at the Garrick when "Some Time," a musical comedy by Rida Johnson Young and Rudolf Friml, succeeds "Scandal" at that playhouse on Aug. 24. Wynn was to have come, but, his manager intimates, wanted too much money. Tinney will appear in "white face," thus realizing an ambition cherished by most burnt cork comedians but attained by few.

Revelation of the Hattons' new play, "Madame Sappho," is announced for Aug. 24 at the the Olympic. Miss Grace Valentine will have the leading rôle, and others in the cast will be Miss Beverly Juneau, Miss Bessie Eyton, Miss Regina Richards, and Paul Sarvey.

Guy Hardy, formerly identified with the affairs of the Auditorium and the Playhouse, is to be henceforth the Chicago representative of George C. Tyler, at the same time officiating as manager of the Blackstone, which will be devoted exclusively to housing the Tyler attractions.

Mr. Tyler's plans for the season, announced last week, include the production of about a dozen new plays, nearly all of which are by American authors. Of these some will be produced in association with Klaw & Erlanger and others by Mr. Tyler individually.

Laurette Taylor, who continues under Mr. Tyler's direction, will be seen in New York late in the autumn in a new play by her husband, J. Hartley Manners. George Arliss probably will have three new plays during the season, the first of which will be "Voltaire," by George Gibbs and Laurence Dudley, with Mr. Arliss, of course, in the title rôle. Later in the season Mr. Arliss will play "Beau Revel," now being written for him by Louis Joseph Vance, and probably will appear also in a play which Louis N. Parker is now writing.

"On the Hiring Line," a comedy by Harvey O'Higgins and Harriet Ford, will be produced at the Blackstone on Aug. 25. The cast will include Miss Laura Hope Crews, George Howell, Miss Josephine Hall, Sidney Toler, Paul Kelly, Miss Genevieve Tobin, and Arthur Eldred. Miss Lynn Fontanne, who has been appearing in Laurette Taylor's company for three seasons, will be seen in October in the leading rôle of "Made of Money," by Richard Washburn Child and Porter Emerson Browne. During the same month there will be produced Philip Moeller's latest comedy, "Sophie," a historical play with a French background. In this Miss Emily Stevens will have the star rôle.

Also in preparation are "The Book of Judith," a play on the social unrest, now being written by Joseph Medill Patterson and A. E. Thomas, and "The Golden Age" by Sidney Toler and Marion Short.

Morris Gest finds himself in an unusual difficulty for a producer. Scenery, costumes, ballet, and choruses are ready or duly on their way for his forthcoming production of the great spectacle, "Aphrodite," but he can't find an actress to play the title rôle. As the best way out of the situation he proposes, with the aid of his associates, to make a whirlwind tour of the country, "scouting" among the summer stock companies in the larger cities. What he seeks, according to the instructions given his emissaries, is "a young Mary Garden."

Miss Grace George's new play, "She Would and She Did," brings to notice a new author, Mark W. Reed. He is a graduate of Prof. Baker's class at Harvard. The comedy, which is mostly about golf, was revealed tentatively last spring in Detroit and Cleveland, and will be submitted in New York next month.

Thomas Dixon will bask no longer in light reflected from Mr. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," which was based on one of his books. He presented at Stamford, Conn., last week "The Red Dawn," a play about the bolsheviki and the South Sea islands, with Doraldina, the dancer, in a leading role. If the Connecticut folks seem to like it Mr. Dixon will take the play to New York.

The oil boom has struck the theater. Marc Klaw has purchased "Petroleum Prince," a comedy by Richard Barry, for his first solo flight as a producer. The piece will be staged by Harrison Grey Fiske early in October.

Burford Hampden, an English actor, is on his way from London to succeed Ernest Truex in "Please Get Married." He will make his first appearance with the company when it begins its Chicago engagement.

A revised edition of "Take It from Me," soon to be seen at the Studebaker, will open tomorrow at Atlantic City. Miss Zoe Barnett will succeed Miss Vera Michelena in what is described as a vampire role, and Joseph M. Gaites, the producer, promises a bit of a sensation in the appearance of a new dancer who is yet in her teens.

Advocates of the theory that musical comedies aren't what they used to be will find encouragement in the tidings that "Floradora," offered in Boston by a manager who couldn't think of anything else to do, has played three weeks to capacity business and is doing so well that it's to be kept going indefinitely.

Anna Nichols has completed the book of a new musical comedy for Miss Charlotte Greenwood. It is to be called "Linger Longer, Letty," as a reminiscence of Miss Greenwood's popularity in "So Long, Letty."

Winchell Smith and John L. Golden are having trouble finding a title for the new play by Pearl Franklin and Ella W. Peattie, which is nearly ready to make known the desirability of the mountains of North Carolina as a location for popular drama. At its first reading at Atlantic City a month ago it was called "Sunrise." Now Mr. Golden is thinking of "Thunder," which he surmises will go well with "Lightnin'," another of his productions which is meeting with high favor in the east.

Barney Bernard will fare forth alone under the A. H. Woods standard in September. Montague Glass and Jules Eckert Goodman have prepared for his use a comedy called "The Honorable Abe Potash," in which Bernard will have the rôle of a business man who becomes enmeshed, humorously, in politics. The play will be revealed here before it is taken to New York.

Willard Mack, whose "Tiger Rose" is still remembered vividly by most of those who saw it, has written another melodrama, "Lady Lony," having to do with the picturesque "gold days" in the far west. It probably will bring Miss Pauline Frederick [Mrs. Mack] back from the movies, with Willard as her leading man.

From Mr. Kaufmann's column in the New York Times this morning:

John Cumberland, although he will have a new farce during the coming season, is beginning to take an interest in the films and will spend much of his time therein. He has appeared already in one of the pictures which Mrs. Sidney Drew is manufacturing, and that actress and producer believes that he is capable of playing the sort of rôles with which Mr. Drew was identified.

Oliver Morosco is rushing his returned soldier comedy to New York. This is Thompson Buchanan's piece, "Civilian Clothes," now in its fifth or sixth week in Los Angeles. The New York company, which includes several members of the Los Angeles organization, is now in rehearsal, and the piece will be produced in Atlantic City on Aug. 11.

Cyril Maude, who was to have played the Arthur Byron rôle in an English production of "Tea for Three," has abandoned that plan, according to advices from London. He will appear instead in a farce somewhat Britishly entitled "Lord Richard in the Pantry," the work of a pair of Englishmen.

Piping times of peace are great times for the theaters, and July has been a month prosperous beyond the dreams of the stage folk. Of the new early plays which have dared to anticipate the season, each and every one is doing well. The summer musical shows are crowding their houses almost without exception, and the holdovers from the old season are prospering to a degree never known by holdovers before.

Burns Mantle's Letter

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Every sixth person in Los Angeles, according to statisticians who would not lie, owns an automobile. Every third tourist who comes into the state brings one with him. And they are all needed. The city has recently been forced to annex all the surrounding suburbs in order legally to furnish them with water from the municipally owned plant, and a person either has to have an automobile or be possessed of a godlike patience if he is properly to cover the town.

It required the services of one car, for example, together with a week's time, to tour the motion picture studios alone, for they are scattered all the way from Los Angeles proper to Culver City, which is fifteen miles away, and as widely distributed in the intervening area as though they had deliberately sought to avoid a familiarity that would emphasize the natural contempt one competitor feels for another.

In detail the studios are much alike. Seeing one, the others fall into line as copies of an interesting original, as do the stages, scene lofts and property rooms of various theaters. Yet each is different. Some are new and some are old, some large and some small.

The new Tom Ince place at Culver, which he built after having sold to Goldwyn his "old" studio, erected as far back as 1917, is probably the most modern and complete, because it is the newest; but its modernity is apparent only in the freshness of its white paint and the perfect arrangement of its physical properties. From the road way that runs by the white fence on the way to Vernon the Ince studio has the appearance of a fine old colonial residence, with an abnormal sweep of wing. But from the rear porch it has the usual assortment of open and covered stages, property rooms, scene lofts, etc.

These are all new, and between them and the house proper is a concrete swimming pool, which serves several useful purposes. First, it helps to keep the actors clean; second, it provides a background for fishing, ducking, diving, or swimming scenes, for miniature seascapes, rescues from drowning, etc.; and, third, it is a protection against fire. In a small house alongside an electric pump is concealed to make this protection doubly sure.

Mr. Ince, they tell me, is quite set up about his new studio, as well as the pictures he makes there, and, considering the situation from all angles, he has a right to be. The day I was there young Louise Glaum was buried in the midst of a dark canvasroom, thrown around her to shut out the light of day while she practiced lighting a cigarette and casting the match together with a perfectly good vampirish chuckle simultaneously into the fireplace.

"Who are those guys?" queried her director, as we paused briefly to note the scene. I suspect he feared we had come to borrow his star's cigarette, or steal her pose, or something. Anyway, feeling crushed and unwelcome, we hurried on.

Two or three years ago, when Universal City was new and one of the show places of this movie kingdom, crowds of tourists spent much time there. A bus line carried them out from Los Angeles to the foot of the Hollywood hills, twelve miles from the city, and here they were permitted to wander around and watch the wild actor animals and the tamed wild animals work and play. They could buy their mid-day meal at the public cafeteria without which no studio is complete, and put in four or five hours quite agreeably.

Of late the tourist trade has been rather discouraged at Universal City. The public found a way of getting under the feet of actors and directors, and of wandering into sets just as they were about to be "shot." So, after the bus line had achieved its purpose as a publicity feature its activities were curtailed. It is still running, I believe, on a flexible schedule and now that the "U" is about to resume the making of feature pictures in competition with the bigger companies there is a plan to revive this feature of the Hollywood show on a little different basis, with certain visiting hours agreed upon and guides appointed to take the visitors about in groups, letting them see all that is interesting without unnecessary irritation to the inmates.

Universal City is still the most interesting of the "movie" lots, or was to me. Its acreage is both more extensive and more varied, and so, too, are its stages. Here, in the old sunlit days, the open stage was at its best. Practically all interior scenes—views of mother weeping alongside the lamp in the window, or father splitting wood by candle-light, or of Geraldine tearing off her beads in the privacy of her boudoir after the ball, or Harold petulantly flitting the ashes of his cigarette into the dancing flames of the grate fire—were taken in roofless sets with the priceless California sun furnishing the light, afterward tinted red or pink or amber to produce the desired night effects. But, as previously noted, nowadays they are taken exclusively on covered stages and carefully lighted artificially, so young Apollo is out of a job.

In the center of Universal City stands a hill, and from the top of the hill the visitor has a most interesting panoramic view of the studios and the "ranch," where the "western stuff" is kept, and where the zoo is located—a "zoo" somewhat less extensive than some others, but still generously stocked with every kind of wild animal known to a circus.

We made our way to the top of the hill in a motor car run by an Indian maid chauffeur, and found one of the "westerns" working up there in a stockade scene. Something was about to happen to little Paleface, held as hostage by Big Chief, and over at the farther end of the stockade, just out of range of the camera, two musicians, one with a 'cello and the other with a portable melodeon, were giving soulful rendition to a section of Mr. Grieg's "Peer Gynt" suite. "It's the only way this director can get these birds to act with any rhythm," explained my friendly guide.

The music idea, which, when first I read of it, I accepted as a bit of harmless guff originating in the publicity department, is really founded on fact. Many directors engage one or two musicians to play during the rehearsal and action of their dramatic episodes, and the extra who can double as an excited mob and a competent fiddler is already a preferred person around the studios.

At the Famous Players-Lasky home, which is in the heart of Hollywood and covers two full city blocks, I found Cecil DeMille directing "The Admirable Crichton," with Thomas Meighan playing the Gillette role of the useful butler. The scene was in the cabin hastily erected on the island which held the castaways, and over in the corner, the other side of the camera line, sat a weird young person in costume fiddling away with all his might. Even Mr. DeMille twined and untwined the fingers locked around the base of his brain to the rythm of the music, and young Mr. Meighan measured the rise and fall of his eyelashes to the beat of the tune. Perhaps the camera man turned his crank with metronomic precision, but just as I looked to see, young Lila Lee, whom we used to know as "Cuddles" in the varieties, and who is still in training as "another Mary Pickford," stepped from in back of the small crowd of studio spectators to put anothre dash of make-up across her fair young forehead, and that was disconcerting.

The Lasky "lot" is rambling but extensive and wonderfully complete. In the variety and completeness and artistic verisimilitude of its interior sets, I doubt if any of the others is quite in the same class. But the Lasky forces have been building and rebuilding stage sets to fit famous plays longer than any of the others, and their training in this, as in every other department, has been of a superior quality.

The Griffith studio in size is not imposing, but here, too, the visitor feels the class and quality that find their way into the Griffith pictures. There is little outward elaboration, and a great economy of space and properties, and there is a suggestion of stability that is lacking at most studios. One feels that here, even in so new an industry, there is an atmosphere inspired by history in the making and a gathering force of tradition.

Across the street, on a corner lot probably 200 feet square, the ruins of the mighty "Intolerance" rise fifty or sixty feet above the high board fence. And before "Intolerance" "The Birth of a Nation" was filmed on this city lot in all save its battle and pursuit scene. "Broken Blossoms," on the other hand, was practically a studio job, which is further evidence that directors are depending less and less on sunlight, even for their sunlight effects.

Notes on Paris Music

By J. H. Clayton.

PARIS, July 3.—Musical Paris has turned its attention this summer to the one act opera. The two most important premiers of the season thus far have been one act pieces, the first from the pen of that master of masters in France, Camille Saint-Saëns, and the second from the less known but none the less skillful hand of M. A. Mariotte.

The latter has given us a new setting for the Oscar Wilde poetic drama, Salome, and one which in its breadth, technical excellence, and purity of phrasing is the most important musical offering Paris has heard since the outbreak of the war.

M. Mariotte is not a young man. Paris has waited long for him to produce a work of supreme importance, and it is the opinion of the majority of critics who heard his "Salome" last evening that he has at last succeeded. He has succeeded so well that he has surpassed even Strauss in his handling of the theme.

Perhaps the most impressive thing about the new work is that the composer has not lost sight of the underlying tragedy of Wilde's great drama despite the boxoffice considerations of a sensual opera. He has caught the spirit in which the English author wrote the poem, and has attempted no subtle lyric to charm the sense.

His music has not the vulgarity and barbarty of the Strauss opera. Its purity has even led two of the best known French critics to declare, in their reviews this morning, that he is "a man incapable of evil thoughts."

Under the masterly baton of M. Ruhlmann the Opera orchestra sweeps the audience from phase to phase of the poem with such clearness that one does not need to understand the words or know the story to sense the bigness, the drama, the tragedy of it. It is, indeed, a triumph for the composer and the artists who interpret his work.

I have never been able to understand the fate which the poem met when first scheduled for production as a drama. Written in French more as a tour de force of the author than a serious attempt in writing for production, it was seized by Mme. Bernhardt as a fitting vehicle for her dramatic talent, and was in full rehearsal at the Palace theater, London, in 1892, when it was forbidden by the censor.

It was not until 1896, during the incarceration of the author, that it first saw light of day at the Theatre Libre here, with Lina Munz in the title role. It was produced intermittently until 1900, when it was translated into German and later into Italian, Russian, Dutch, Norwegian, Spanish, Slovak and even Czech. It was given with great success in all these countries, and in Berlin it attained more frequent performances than any other English drama with the possible exception of Hamlet.

But it was not until May 11, 1905, that it received its first production in the English language at the New Stage club, London. The same year Dr. Richard Strauss began work on his operatic score, using the admirable translation of Mme. Lachmann. The opera was first produced in December of that year in Berlin, and met with immediate favor.

Perhaps the cast might have been improved by a more petite and youthful Salome. Mme. Brevel, who has been a favorite at the opera for years, was chosen to create the part of the princess. There can be no quarrel with the intelligent manner in which she interpreted the score, but it did strike one as rather incongruous to hear the young Syrian singing of the little princess with two pretty white doves for feet. For Mme. Brevel is not little.

Cerdan as the prophet brought a youthful, sonorous voice to the Paris stage. With his vocal equipment and technique he will go far along the road to fame.

Gresse was the Herod. His excellent basso and remarkable portrayal of the drunken, licentious king made the role a living, breathing part. Mme. Lapeyrette was the Herodias.

M. Mariotte was given a most enthusiastic reception when he appeared in response to repeated demands for the composer. He was visibly embarrassed by the applause which forced him to take three curtain calls.

In Helene Saint-Saëns has not reached throughout the high excellence of most of his operatic work, but in the closing scene, beginning with the beautiful lyric of Paris, "Des Astres de la nuit," continuing with the lover's declaration and Helen's answer, and closing with "Viens, pour l'amour la vie est breve," he has written something which will take its place among the masterpieces of opera.

Perhaps much of its success was due to the superb voice of Franz, who created the role of Paris. He is by far the best tenor one hears in Paris today. Both as an actor and a musician he is a master of his craft.

Rebecca, that melodious biblical spectacle of Caesar Franck, was given a notable production as the opening number of the premier of Helene, with new costumes and scenery. It has now attained its ninth performance in Paris.

VAUDEVILLE WIT

RIALTO.

Hudson and Jones:

"Well, here he is now, my old friend, Mr. Hickory!"

"What do you mean by calling me by such a name as Hickory? You know well enough that Hickory is not my name. How did you ever come to name me such a name?"

"The only reason for me calling you Hickory is because you look so much like a nut. But say, where have you been all last month that I didn't see you?"

"I've been down to my bungalow."

"You don't mean to say that old joint of a shack of yours is a bungalow?"

"If it isn't a bungalow, what is it? The job was a bungle, and I still owe for it, so bungalow is the only name I can give it."

"Why don't you send your son to Sunday school?"

"The reason I've kept my boy from Sunday school is because the knowledge he received there was making him a wicked boy."

"He learned to be wicked at Sunday school?"

"Yes, sir."

"I don't believe it."

"Well, it's the fact. You see, it's this way. The last time he went to Sunday school the teacher taught him that people are made of dust."

"What's so strange about that?"

"Well, when he came home he tried to draw his little baby sister into the vacuum cleaner. I told him if he was a good boy I'd take him to the circus this year."

"And did it work?"

"No, he said he tried that last year and the circus wasn't worth it."

More or Less

Some folks think the more care a car owner gives his battery the more service it will render.

Others say "the less you bother with it the better."

Both are partly right and partly wrong.

We can show you some things that will make your battery serve better and last longer. At least drive around and let's get acquainted.

We test, repair and recharge storage batteries, and always carry a full supply of battery parts, new batteries and rental batteries.

Majesty

When you stand before the great Niagara, you are lifted by the majesty of that scene.

When there comes into your home a Grand Piano, the majesty of the instrument lifts you, and has its affect on you mentally and spiritually.

If you wonder at this, picture in your mind this graceful, diminutive Grand, in place of your present upright. No more floor space, scarcely higher cost.

What you think is rheumatism may be weak feet

Pains in your feet, legs, knees or back don't always indicate rheumatism!

If you have pains in your feet, legs, knees and back, look to the condition of your feet!

One of the most common of all causes of these pains so often ascribed to rheumatism is found in weak, falling arches, or "flat foot." "Flat foot" is caused by a weakening of the delicate ligaments and muscles which support the arch bones. The pains indicated above warn you of this condition!

Orthopedic specialists agree that only by bracing the weakened arch with a scientific support can it be kept from falling. And Dr. Scholl has designed a scientific support for every form of weak and falling arches.

Go to see your dealer today. In his store you'll find a graduate Practipedist—a foot expert, especially trained in Dr. Scholl's method of foot comfort. He will fit you with the Dr. Scholl appliance that will give you immediate and permanent relief! You will walk out of the store feeling like a new person.

TRIBUNE Advertisements Are Full of Inspiration for Successful Buying

1914—By Field Marshal Viscount French of Ypres

XI.

IN our appreciation of the situation at British headquarters on Oct. 1 it was considered that the reduction of Antwerp was at this moment the great objective of the enemy. Personally, I had no reason to think that Antwerp was in any immediate danger, and therefore a message which I received from the secretary of state on Oct. 2 came as a most disagreeable surprise.

I was informed that a serious situation had been created at Antwerp, which was in grave danger of falling in a short time.

Further information reached me at 3 a. m. on the 3d from London that the Belgian government, acting on the advice unanimously given by the superior council of war in the presence of the king, had decided to leave at once for Ostend. It was further stated that the king, with the field army, would withdraw from Antwerp in the direction of Ghent to protect the coastline and in the hope of being able to coöperate with the allied armies. The message added that the town could hold out for five or six days, and that the decision to evacuate was taken very seriously as a result of the increasingly critical situation.

It is needless to say that I was perturbed on receipt of this news. It was difficult to understand why the Belgians, who had fought so well at Liege, were unable to do more in defence of a fortress which was much stronger, and situated, moreover, in a position where it could be supported by the British fleet.

I fully realized the consequence of the capture and occupation of Antwerp by the Germans. It was impossible to say how much of the coastline the captured terrain would include, but there could be no doubt that the channel ports would be gravely imperiled.

Operating from such a base, there would appear to be no insuperable obstacle to an immediate German advance on Dunkirk, Calais, and Boulogne. The Belgian army was in no condition to resist such an advance. The occupation of these places and the formation of a defensive line which would include the whole of the Pas-de-Calais, might become a fait accompli before the troops could arrive from the main theaters to prevent it.

Overconfidence Possesses Germans.

BUT here, again, we have an example of the overconfidence which forever possessed that army which set out for "world conquest." As on the Marne, so at Antwerp, they were not prepared to seize the psychological moment and to play boldly for the great stake.

It is seldom that fortune offers another chance to a military leader who has once failed to gather the rich harvest which she has put into his grasp. Yet the German emperor presents, together with his great general staff, one of the few instances in history of a commander in chief so soon being given a splendid opportunity to retrieve such mistakes as those of Sept. 5 and 6.

With all these tragic possibilities in my mind in these early October days, I redoubled my endeavors to effect a speedy move of the British forces to the north. Added to the other cogent reasons to which I have already referred was now the most vital of all—the relief of Antwerp.

Lord Kitchener did not make things easy for me.

Keenly desirous to influence the course of operations, his telegrams followed one after another, each containing "directions" regarding a local situation of which, in London, he could know very little.

For instance, in one message he told me he was communicating with Gen. Joffre and the French government, but, as he did not do so through me, I was quite unaware of what was passing between them, yet all the time he was urging me to make what I knew to be impracticable suggestions to Gen. Joffre. This could only lead to misunderstandings and confusion of ideas, and I must repudiate any responsibility whatever for what happened in the north during the first ten days of October. I was explicitly told by the secretary of state for war that the British troops operating there were not under my command, as the following telegram shows:

"Have already given Rawlinson temporary rank. I am sending him instructions regarding his action Antwerp. The troops employed there will not for the present be considered part of your force."

Rawlinson, I may remark, had been sent for to meet the 7th division at Ostend and take command of it.

Had I been left to exercise my full functions as commander in chief of the British army in France I should certainly have made different dispositions with regard to the disposal of these troops. I regret that I must record my deliberate opinion that the best which could have been done throughout this critical situation was not done, owing entirely to Lord Kitchener's endeavor to unite in himself the separate and distinct rôles of a cabinet minister in London and a commander in chief in France. I feel it only right and in the interest of my country, with a view to any war we may be engaged in the future, to make this plain statement of fact. The calamity at Sedan was due in part to interference from Paris with the army in the field, and the American civil war was more than probably prolonged by the repeated interference on the part of the secretary of state with the commanders in the field.

As to the method of employing the 7th infantry and 3d cavalry divisions, the following telegram will show that the French commander in chief completely concurred in my views:

"General Commander in Chief to Col. Huguet, Oct. 8, 8:45 a. m.:

"The commander in chief has the honor to inform Marshal French that he entirely agrees with the ideas on the subject of employing the whole of the British forces united.

"He estimates that in the actual situation of Antwerp the reënforcement of the garrison by the 7th English division will not have any effect on the fate of the place.

"In these conditions he believes, on the contrary, that it is very advantageous that this English division should unite as soon as possible with the main body of the British forces in the northern zone.

"Will the marshal be kind enough to inform Lord Kitchener of the commander in chief's views of the situation?

"He will ask the president of the republic to confirm these views to the British war minister."

As to the confusion of ideas to which I have referred, the following telegram which I found it necessary to address to the commander of the 7th division, Sir Henry Rawlinson, will show that it existed up to the 11th instant:

"Your message, No. 19, addressed to Lord Kitchener and repeated to me, received. I really do not understand whether you regard yourself as under my orders or not; but if you do please be good enough to explain your situation clearly, without delay, as I have no knowledge of any necessity for your reëmbarkation or of your intention to do so.

"Hazebrouck will be in occupation of the 3d corps tomorrow morning.

"Be good enough to answer me by some means at once, as my own and Gen. Joffre's plans are much put out and perhaps compromised by all this misunderstanding."

To this Rawlinson replied that he was under my orders and proceeded to give me the information I requested.

Such, then, was the general atmosphere of doubt and uncertainty in which I had to work after the fall of Antwerp until toward the 10th of the month (October), when at length the secretary of state for war consented to allow me full liberty of action to direct the movements of all British forces in France.

Marines Land at Dunkirk.

SOME 3,000 marines had been landed at Dunkirk toward the end of September, and when Antwerp was threatened Lord Kitchener, saying nothing of it to me, arranged with Gen. Joffre that the latter should send one or two French territorial divisions to join them and act with them.

The first intimation I had of this was a wire from Lord Kitchener, received late at night on Oct. 3, which ran as follows:

"I do not know when the two divisions promised by the French government from Havre will be able to start.

"Could you ascertain this and let me know your views on the situation and how you contemplate acting?"

To this I replied in the early hours of the 4th:

"I do not know what has passed direct between English and French governments, but French general headquarters told me positively, in answer to repeated inquiry, that they are only sending one territorial division from Havre to Ostend, which they say is to start at once by sea.

"With reference to the last sentence in your message 1315, please refer to my message F272, dispatched last night at 7:30. I shall get report from officer I sent yesterday to Bruges and Antwerp directly and will wire again."

That part of my message F272 (referred to above) which bears on the subject runs as follows:

"French wish us to use Boulogne for 7th division and cavalry to disembark. . . . I am strongly averse to sending any troops inside the fortress [of Antwerp], even if they could be got there."

Gen. Joffre's telegrams for me of Oct. 8 has already been quoted, and I had previously been in constant communication with him on this subject. When I dispatched telegram F272 I knew that Joffre's views accorded with my own.

That the wishes of the allied commanders were ignored in London is further shown by the following message received by me from the secretary of state for war at 2:30 p. m. on Oct. 4:

"I am embarking 7th division and portion of cavalry division today, but I cannot get report from Antwerp on the military situation from which I can decide where they should be disembarked.

"My present opinion is Zeebrugge, where there are good landing facilities. Can you send Rawlinson by motor to Antwerp to take charge and study the situation before the troops arrive?"

This message was amplified by the following message which was sent later in the day:

"I am arranging following expeditionary force for relief Antwerp:

BRITISH FORCE.

"Seventh division, under Gen. Capper, 18,000 men, sixty-three guns; cavalry division, under Gen. Byng, 4,000 men, twelve guns. To arrive at Zeebrugge Oct. 6 and Oct. 7.

"Naval detachments under Gen. Alston, 8,000 men already there; also naval and military heavy guns and detachments already sent. Headquarters staff will be subsequently notified.

FRENCH FORCE.

"Territorial division, Gen. Roy, 15,000 men, proper complement guns and two squadrons to arrive Ostend Oct. 6 to Oct. 9; fusiliers marins brigade, under Rear Admiral Ronarch, 8,000 men; grand total, 53,000 men. Numbers are approximately correct."

In order to summarize the situation as it was reflected in my mind at this time I will quote two more telegrams:

Lord Kitchener wired on the early morning of the 6th:

"Please let me have a telegraphic appreciation of the situation of the allied forces, for information of the government."

To which the following reply was sent:

"Allied line extends from La Bassee, about fourteen miles southwest of Lille on the left, through Arras, east of Albert, Bray-sur-Somme, west of Roye, Ribecourt, Nampcelle, Nouvron, Soissons, north of Braye-en-Laonnois, Craonnelle, Berry-au-Bac, then south of Reims, then east to Verdun, then south to St. Mihiel, then east to Thiaucourt.

"On the extreme left is the 21st French corps, with two cavalry corps operating between Caryin and Lens.

"Hard fighting north of the Oise, where strength of French force equivalent to twelve corps and six cavalry divisions. Comparative quiet on the Aisne; British forces in progress of evacuating positions and moving north of the Somme near Abbeville; move should be completed by the 20th inst.

"The German line extends from about Lille, roughly parallel to the allies, west of Bapaume, Chaulnes, Roye, south of Noyon, thence along the hills north of the Aisne to Craonne, Brimont, Nogent-l'Abbesse, Somme Py, northeast of Verdun, where it turns south to Fresnes-en-Woevre, then to near St. Mihiel, Thiaucourt, and east of Thiaucourt.

"The strength of the Germans north of the Oise is probably eleven corps and nine cavalry divisions in position. In addition to the above forces, one brigade was detraining at Cambrai yesterday and reserve troops are holding entrenched positions about Mons and Valenciennes, numbers variously reported from 50,000 to 70,000.

"The object of the allies is to bring about a retirement of the Germans from their present line by turning their north flank and at the same time to hold in this theater of operations as many German corps as possible. French general headquarters anticipated that the northern turning movement would have been facilitated by the close coöperation of the Belgian field army.

"So far as I am able to have an object apart from the general French view of the situation, I place the relief of Antwerp as of the first importance as regards forces under my command."

Kitchener "Goes Over His Head."

LORD KITCHENER had dispatched these troops en route to Antwerp itself before he even asked me for an appreciation of the general situation.

The history of the rapid movement and fall of Antwerp, the evacuation of Ostend and Zeebrugge, and the retreat of the Belgians to the Yser is very well known now, and it is not my intention to go over the ground again here; but I feel sure that, had the views of the commanders in the field [Joffre and myself] been accepted, a much better and easier situation would have been created.

It is perfectly clear that the operations for the relief of Antwerp should never have been directed from London.

As things actually turned out, the troops which were landed at Ostend and Zeebrugge had, to quote Gen. Joffre's wire to Huguet on Oct. 8, no influence on the fate of the fortress, and what help they were in protecting the retreat of the Belgians and saving that army from destruction might have been equally well rendered from a safer and more effective direction. This would not have necessitated that dangerous and exhausting flank march, costing such terrible loss, by which alone they were able eventually to unite with the main British forces.

Dispatched from England on Oct. 5 or 6, and disembarking at Calais or Boulogne (Dunkirk could have been used if the Belgian army had required more help), they would have deployed six or seven days later in the valley of the Lys, south of the Third corps, and Lille might have been saved.

It is quite possible also to conceive a situation starting from these preliminary dispositions which would have resulted in saving Ostend, even Zeebrugge and that line of coast the possession of which by the enemy, dating from October, 1914, was a source of such infinite trouble to us.

Although I was given no voice in these Antwerp dispositions and was left in partial ignorance of what was going on, which, in my position as commander in chief was deplorable, I took what steps I could to keep in close touch with the progress of events.

Col. Bridges of the 4th dragoon guards was with his regiment in the cavalry division. He had formerly been military attaché in Brussels and understood the Belgians well. He had already greatly distinguished himself in earlier battles, and I sent for him.

In accordance with my instructions he arrived at my headquarters during the night of Oct. 3-4. I dispatched him at 5 a. m. on the 4th by motor to Brussels, instructing him to get into immediate communication with the Belgian general staff and endeavor to persuade them to hang on to Antwerp, promising support from us so soon as we could possibly get to them.

"I directed Sir Edward Henderson to establish air reconnaissances toward Antwerp, which he did.

Finally, I did my utmost to expedite the move of all the British forces to the northern theater. It appeared likely that there might be considerable delay in relieving the 1st corps. I therefore dispatched Henry Wilson to Gen. Joffre with the following note, dated Oct. 4, 1914:

"With reference to Sir John French's note and the importance, therein dwelt upon, of the earliest possible relief of the 1st corps from its present position, he suggests to his excellency the commander in chief the possibility of an extension by the 18th corps of its line to the left, as far as the point where the Aisne canal passes through the line of intrenchment occupied by the 1st corps in the neighborhood of Braye.

"In this connection Sir John French would particularly bring to the notice of his excellency the greatly increased strength of the intrenchment by reason of the work which has been carried out during the long time it has been under occupation by the 1st corps. He would also point out that the enemy is now much weaker than before, and that such feeble attempts as he makes on the line of intrenchment are entirely in the nature of reconnaissances, with a view to discover whether the intrenchment is still held or not. Another consideration of importance is that the new line held by the 18th corps and French troops attached to it is much less in extent than that occupied by the British 1st corps.

"In these circumstances Sir John French trusts that his excellency the commander in chief will be able to give such orders as will insure the troops occupying the portion of the line extending from the right of the British intrenchment to the canal being relieved by troops from the 18th corps, the change to be carried out on the night of Oct. 6-7."

TRADE MARK
Does It!

It is a metallic Gasket carrying a Turbine making twelve thousand revolutions a minute. The gasoline in passing is completely shattered, resulting in 100% combustion, increasing mileage more than 30% and entirely eliminating carbon.

Here's What It Does

1. Eliminates and prevents carbon.
2. Eliminates, to a large degree, the grinding of valves.
3. Eliminates necessity of cleaning spark plugs.
4. Eliminates carbon from piston rings, thus assuring high compression.
5. Brings combustion in cylinders to highest point.
6. Saves more than 30 per cent in gasoline bills.
7. Brings engine to the highest possible efficiency.

SPARK PLUGS

The Spark Plug That Saves Gasoline

HERE'S something new, Mr. Motorist. A spark plug that not only explodes your gas, but actually gives you more miles per gallon and added power to boot.

The Derf plug is so constructed that the spark is an unbroken triangle of fire—the hottest spark that ever jumped across the bottom of a spark plug. This necessitates a leaner mixture than can be used with any other plug.

Put a Derf in every cylinder, then thin your mixture down, or if you can't reduce your carburetor, give it all the air it will take. You'll feel a new kick to your motor; have more power, and go further on a gallon of gas than you ever did before.

We don't ask you to accept this on faith. Actual tests made by the Automobile Club of America and the Motor Truck Club of America proved that Derf Plugs make a definite gasoline saving of from twenty-five to thirty-four per cent. Get a complete set of Derf Plugs today and be convinced. Four plugs $6.20. Six plugs $9.30. At all dealers.

We guarantee less gas—more power, and reduced carbonization—AND YOU CAN PROVE IT

A HOT SPOT Chalmers Shuns a Repair Shop

MANY of the large Chalmers merchants of America report that it costs them but $3 per car per year for service. They have had so very, very little trouble with the car that their figures have come down to a point reached, we believe, by no more than one or two cars.

There's good reason for this. Most car troubles come from two sources:

1. Poor lubrication. 2. Excessive vibration.

Hot Spot and Ram's-Horn aid and make sure an extraordinary lubrication of the engine, and provide such silky smoothness in power that few persons can tell, whether in the car or at the curb, if the engine is running.

Moreover, Hot-Spot and Ram's-Horn add to the long life of car and engine; and hence endear it to the owner.

A repair shop is shunned. Let us tell you just exactly how Hot-Spot and Ram's-Horn do the trick. It's well worth any man's time; and not to know is to be behind the times.

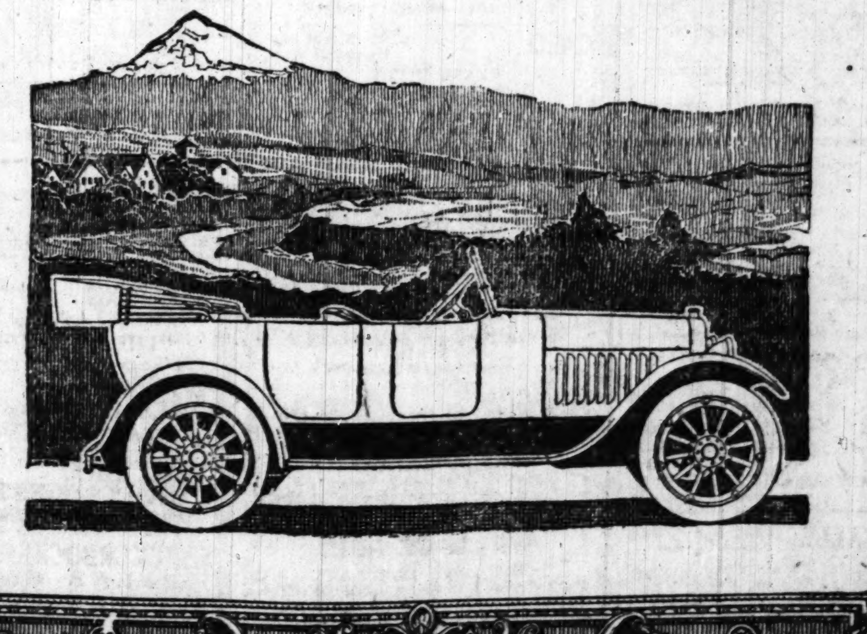
CHALMERS MOTOR CARS
Quality First



Stretched, as in the tire, good tubes do not rip when cut. They cut but do not rip.

The slightest cut in an inferior tube—Rip! and the tube is ruined. Make your dealer prove that the tube he sells will stand the Norwalk test.

One-Two-Three-Go!

One—That's the scissors test. It proves that Norwalk Tubes red and gray, do not rip. It shows that cuts from puncture or blowout can always be repaired.

Two—That's the Norwalk floating stock* Tube itself. You will say it's the highest quality tube made.

Three—And then you're ready for the Norwalk Casing. You will ask for it after the Norwalk Tube has proved the Norwalk standard. The Norwalk, either cord or non-skid fabric, has a black tread and snow white sidewalls.

The Scissors Test

Take sample piece of tube ¼ in. by 3 in. Stretch to 9 in. or three times its original length. Cut on the edge with the scissors. The cut should not be more than ⅛ in. across the sample. If the strip tears apart the rubber is inferior.

LATEST IN MERMAID RAIMENT.

By Mae Tinée.

LOT of busy little bees about the Ziegfeld today. Tomorrow, you see, those bathing girls come. The Mack Sennett bathing girls, you know, who set the fashions in mermaid raiment.

The theater looks as nearly like a beach as a theater can look. Sand and everything. The ushers, they tell me, will wear bathing suits—which is going to be awfully nice for the ushers if the weather stays warm. As for the bathing girls—the bathing girls—

After being introduced to you singly and all together and having announced singly and all at once that they can neither sing, dance, or in fact do anything but bathe, they will proceed to sing, dance and do everything but bathe.

None of them has a great deal to do in the picture, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," but it's a Mack Sennett comedy and they are the Mack Sennett girls and it makes a good background for them. The entire show is more or less of a novelty, but they do say that New York ate it up. Which of course means nothing to Chicago until she sees and puts her heel or her O. K. on a production.

That Dr. W. J. Hickson, certainly started something! He's the fellow out at the psychopathic hospital who declared that "all heroes and heroines of movie scenarios have dementia praecox," and that "movies amuse only persons of the mentality of children." Goldwyn, with its brand new conglomeration of star writers, among whom are Rex Beach, Gertrude Atherton, Rupert Hughes, Basil King, Mary Roberts Rinehart, etc.; all of whom have engaged to write stories to be produced through Eminent and released through Goldwyn, got terribly excited over the good man's words. Since they were uttered, this company has been accumulating a large and fast growing collection of telegrams on the subject and you should see what Rex Beach et al. have to say about Dr. Hickson. O, what they think of the good Dr. Hickson!

A score of society girls from a fashionable New York school appear in the wedding scenes of "Bunkered," the new comedy featuring Mrs. Sidney Drew.

Remember that pretty Ora Carew? She's gone to make a picture or two for the Universal, having completed the feature of her own she has been making.

Lew Cody is to make a series of romantic satires in which he will be directed by J. A. Barry, who formerly directed Pauline Frederick. He has a pretty good supporting cast, consisting of Eileen Percy, Doris Pawn Kathleen Kirkham, Walter Morosco, Andrew Robson, Frances Raymond, and Jack Mower.

Annette Kellerman and her husband are living now at Catalina. It is announced that Miss Kellerman will soon be featured in an underwater picture to be made by the Catalina Island Submarine company.

A silver cup has been donated by Kathleen Clifford to be awarded the best Japanese spaniel at the Santa Barbara dog show on Friday and Saturday.

And now comes word of Florence Turner, who for so long has deserted the films. She's at Universal, directing herself in a series of one reel comedies. Miss Turner was a Vitagraph favorite in the good old days.

Tom Moore has water on the brain. That is, between pictures he spends his time at his beach home, swimming, diving, surf riding—and sech. His latest light occupation is endeavoring to fit a motorcycle engine to a board so he can ride far out and then coast in on the breakers.

Ethel Clayton, who was reported as "lost or kidnaped" by an enterprisng press agent, has turned up not missing. She only ran over to Japan to get a kimono.

Rupert Julian has left Universal. As yet no announcement has been made of his future plans.

That ring worn by David Powell has been in his family for hundreds of years. The stone, which is an inch in diameter, is a cross between a moss agate and a black opal. (He wears opals and defies fate, you see.) "Once," Mr. Powell tells you, "it used to be in an anklet." And then he goes right on and talks about something else.

Zazu Pitts says she likes her name because it just fits the "pathetic jazz kid" she's always supposed to be in the pictures.

Miss Dorothy Haver
AT THE ZIEGFELD

ASK ME! ASK ME!

DOROTHY W.: You suppose my course is "all mapped out"? You suppose wrong. It happens, however, that the pictures of the people whose names you have underlined have all been printed in the rotogravure. Perhaps they will be repeated some time. Since you missed them, I hope so.

P. DE LA PLATA: Ocloolala chirography! Well, I'll tell the hero to write more plainly next time he sends a letter to his lady fair. And where did you get the name?

LES MISERABLES: It is quite possible for a star to pass through town and not notify me. These people are constantly traveling between New York and the coast and sometimes are remiss in notifying the press. (Not often, however.)

STEPHANIE W.: There is an Anthony Fernandez with the Dorothy Gish company, 4500 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal. Perhaps this may be the "Roy" you mention—a rose under another name, as 'twa. Lewis Cody took the part of Reggie Drake in "Mickey."

ESTELLE: A letter addressed to Paul Gilmore, Tampa, Fla., will reach him. I haven't seen him in pictures for some time, but the last I heard he was with Pathe. Alfred Whitman was last with Vitagraph. His home address is 4500 Franklin avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

J. G. F.: They won't send you their pictures? That's too bad! Try mailing a quarter with your request next time, old dear. Address Lottie Pickford at Hollywood, Cal.; Alice Joyce in care of Vitagraph, Hollywood, Cal.; and Enid Bennett in care of Ince studio, Los Angeles, Cal.

P. F. M.: Yes, thank you, I'm well and happy. Are you?

INTERESTED: No, Wyndham Standing isn't really blind. I wouldn't dare say the man you mention is cross-eyed in this column. He might sue me. But he might just as well be, mightn't he?

CLINTONIAN: Those who profess to know tell me that Wilfred Lyttell is no relation to Bert Lytell. His home address is Brightwaters, Long Island, New York. Robert Ellis is playing in the Selznick picture "Upstairs and Down" with Olive Thomas. The Selznick address is 729 Seventh avenue, New York. You're entirely welcome.

M. N.: I'm in receipt of your ode and shall always keep it. How nice of you to take the time to send me such a pleasant surprise! Perhaps you didn't know it, but we live not far apart.

AIN'T YOU: Well, I pronounce Nazimova like this: Na-zim-o-va, with accent on the second syllable. Please let me keep my little secret.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

"AND ON THE ROAD TO JERICHO HE FELL AMONG ROBBERS."

They told me (and by "they" I mean a host of canny folks)
That those who ran vacation joints were Jesse Jimmie blokes,
That they were ambidextrous at coagulating tin,
Abstracting tourists' money with a firm, unfeeling fin.
"But no," I cried; "it cannot be that one would gyp a guest
And let an avaricious thought pervade his manly breast;
The wayside host would never take the tourist for his sou—
I can't believe the unkind things you say of him are true."
Well, I used to think he didn't,
I was pretty sure he didn't,
In fact, I knew he didn't—
But he do!

Ah, yes, beside the dusty road he patiently awaits
The travel weary tourists who will knock upon his gates,
The tourists who'll be faint for food and swooning for repose,
When he'll arise and take them in (for plenty, having knowsl),
And then he'll page that evening meal of chicken, frog, or fish
(With taters in their jackets and that pickalilly dish),
And stick them in a dingy room that's hotter than a grill,
And when they go it takes two men to carry in the bill.
I used to think he wouldn't,
I was pretty sure he wouldn't,
In fact, I knew he wouldn't—
But he will!

So do not sing the wayside host and hospitality
Or I will speedily arise and do some dirt to thee;
My passion for the human race was once a nifty pash,
But now the rosy dreams I dreamed have turned to bitter ash,
For I've been loping o'er the roads and flitting here and there,
And mostly I have got it where I part my raven hair.
Yes, Jessie Jimmie may be gone, but mighty is his clan,
With more efficient methods for the motor caravan.
I used to think they couldn't,
I was pretty sure they couldn't,
In fact, I knew they couldn't—
But they can!

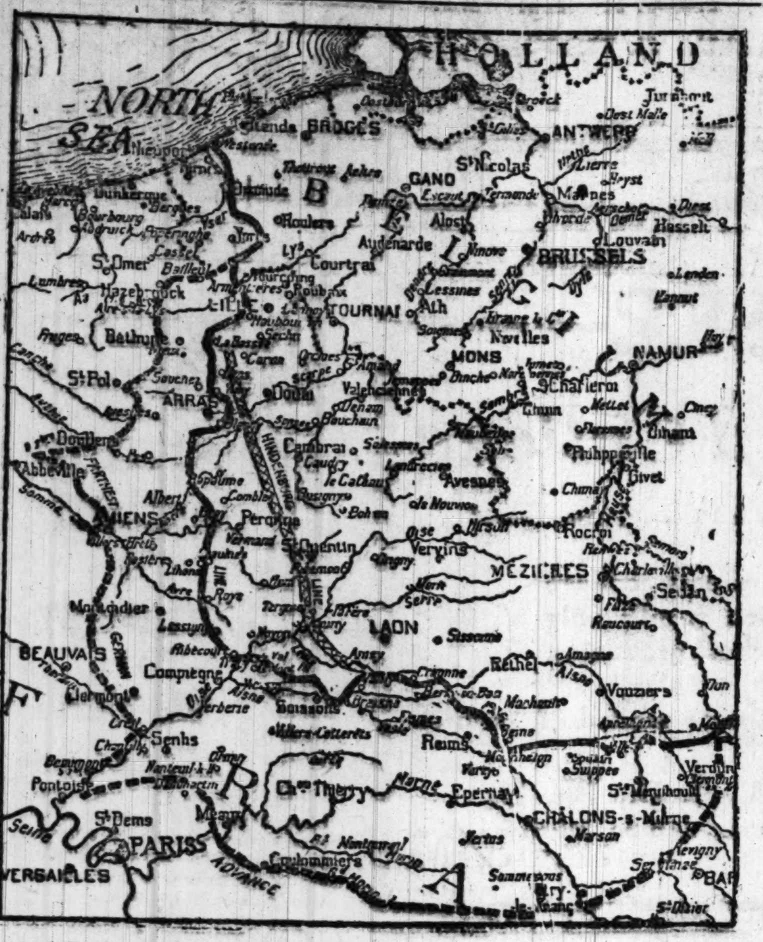
THE CAMPAIGN OF 1918

By Maj. Gen. Sir Frederick B. Maurice



VI.

FOCH having prepared the way for his decisive thrust by his series of preliminary punches was about to launch the allied armies against the most formidable of all the German defenses. The name Hindenburg line originated with the British soldiers, who so entitled a great system of German works which had been discovered toward the end of 1916 behind the Somme battlefield. In the middle of the campaign of that year Falkenhayn, whose plans for the capture of Verdun had failed ignominiously, was removed from his position as chief of the great general staff, and Hindenburg, with Ludendorff as his first assistant, was brought over from the Russian front to succeed him at the great headquarters. The pair had not been there very long before it became clear that Hindenburg was little more than a figurehead and Ludendorff was de facto chief of the German war organization.

Hindenburg had won the deep gratitude of the Berliners by his great victory of Tannenberg, won at a time when they were trembling in their shoes at the Russian invasion of East Prussia. We built high hopes upon the Russian steam roller and during the first months of the war the German public regarded it as being as formidable as we did. They were never easy in their minds until the Russians were driven back, and when this result was achieved they contrasted Hindenburg's performances, with armies composed at first largely of second rate troops, and the manner in which he restored the military efficiency of their feeble Austrian ally, with the failure of their generals in the west, who had the pick of the German army at their disposal, to make good the promises they had made.

Hindenburg's square head, his burly figure, his strong character, his contempt of the arts of peace, and his prowess with the bottle, of which stories were in circulation, made him an admirable embodiment of Prussian militarism, a living exponent of the gospel of might is right, which the German people had adopted with enthusiasm. He provided the kaiser with just the personality needed at great headquarters to keep the war fever in the fatherland at boiling point. Ludendorff, who did his work at the office desk and was first and foremost a military thinker, could never make the same appeal to the popular imagination as did his chief. The pair therefore made an excellent combination.

The Germans have always been good at such combinations, at providing the strong personality or the royal personage with just the right brain. The classic example is that of Blucher and Gneisenau in the closing years of the Napoleonic wars. Blucher was then the personality, Gneisenau the brain. Both of them came to England for the fetes which followed the peace of 1815, and it is told of Blucher that he then made a bet in a London drawing room that he was the only man in the room who could kiss his own head. He won his wager by walking up to Gneisenau and giving him a smacking kiss on both cheeks. I doubt if Hindenburg were ever so frank as Blucher, but the relations between him and Ludendorff were very much those of their predecessors of 100 years before.

Task Confronting Hindenburg.

WHEN Hindenburg and Ludendorff first arrived at great headquarters the German military situation was by no means rosy, Russia was still formidable, the Austrian army required a great deal of support, Roumania was about to enter the field, the Verdun offensive had proved to be a disastrous failure, the British army had grown to formidable dimensions, and the Franco-British attacks on the Somme were pressing the Germans hard and eating up their reserves. Ludendorff wished first to finish off Russia and Roumania and in order to do this he had to make the situation in the west safe and be able to economize troops there.

The only way in which he could do this effectively was by shortening his front. He could not give up any ground in Belgium without endangering his hold upon Ostend and Zeebrugge, which were invaluable as bases from which submarines and destroyers could attack the British communications across the channel, while the country about Bruges and Ghent gave him an excellent jumping off place for airplane raids upon London and the southeast of England. He did not wish to abandon Lille, because great pains had been taken to fortify the place, which had become the northern pivot of the German offensive system, while the great manufacturing district surrounding the town was of the utmost value.

Nor did he wish to come away from the Vimy ridge, for it covered a great part of the Lens coal fields and in the hands of the allies would be a strong barrier against a German offensive when he was ready to attack in the west. West of Laon the St. Gobain massif formed a pivot for his center, which it was important to hold. Between Reims and Verdun a withdrawal would not shorten his front and would bring his enemy dangerously near the railway which connected Metz with Sedan Mezieres, part of his main lateral line of communications.

In the east he could not yield any territory without exposing Metz to bombardment and Alsace and Lorraine to invasion. Between the Vimy ridge and the St. Gobain massif, however, his front formed a great arc, into which the French and British had bitten deep during the battle of the Somme. By coming out of this arc he would shorten his front, get his troops out of an embarrassing position, and would be yielding French territory which was of no special value to him. Accordingly he determined to construct a chord for the arc and to draw back to the chord in his own time. So the Hindenburg line was begun.

Where the Line Started.

The original section of the Hindenburg line started just east of Arras, where it connected with the defenses of the Vimy ridge and ran southeastward to the Canal du Nord, eight miles west of Cambrai; thence it followed an almost north and south line past the western outskirts of St. Quentin through La Fere to the St. Gobain massif. It was this portion of the line which leaped into fame when Ludendorff carried out his withdrawal in the early months of 1917. He had realized that he would probably be attacked again on the western front in the spring of that year, and had all his plans prepared before the allies were ready to begin. Having completed his defenses, he slowly brought back the bulk of his troops and material, leaving only rear guards in his front line. He then proceeded to lay waste systematically the country he intended to abandon.

Every article of value was removed from the French towns and villages, all the able bodied inhabitants were deported, and most of those who were too young, too old, or too feeble to be of service were collected in two or three centers, to be rescued by the allies when they advanced. The trees were cut down, not even the orchards being spared; the villages were set on fire; the towns were gutted, explosives being used for the more solid buildings which fire could not damage sufficiently; the wells were fouled; every road and railway bridge was destroyed; the railway embankments were blown in, the rails were torn up, and mines were exploded under every cross roads, making craters which effectively barred wheeled traffic.

As a last refinement a series of devilishly cunning booby traps was devised, consisting of wires connected to German helmets, pianos, door handles, the steps of dugouts or of houses, which when touched exploded charges and cost us the lives of many of our men. The systematic and skillful savagery of the modern German created a devastation which shamed the best efforts of his untutored forebears. This was all part of Ludendorff's scheme of defense. He knew that the time and labor required to restore the communications, to repair the bridges and provide water and shelter for their troops would derange the plans of the allied generals, and as a purely military measure the scheme was an unqualified success, for it unquestionably contributed very largely to the failure of Gen. Nivelle's offensive.

Nivelle had intended that one of his attacks should be made against the southern part of the front from which the Germans had retired, and he had no time to prepare properly for another to take its place, with the result that his attack on St. Quentin was a complete failure, while Ludendorff, by shortening his front, obtained the reserves necessary to meet and check Nivelle's main attack on the Aisne. Only the British part of Nivelle's campaign met with any considerable measure of success. In the battle of Arras in April, 1917, the Vimy ridge was captured and a part of the Arras arm of the Hindenburg line was rolled up.

Before the battle of Arras had started the Germans had begun to prepare for the possibility of the capture of the Vimy ridge by digging a northern extension of the Hindenburg line, which ran from Queant, ten miles east of Cambrai, and thence northward through Drocourt and east to Lens to the southern defenses of Lille. This was the line known to the British army as the Drocourt-Queant switch, and broken by them on Sept. 2, 1918. It was a beginning of a vast extension of the Hindenburg system, carried out throughout 1917, during the whole of which year the Germans were on the main pivots of this extended system. The term line as applied to it is a misnomer, for nowhere did it consist of a single line of trenches. It was composed of a whole series of trench lines enclosing a heavily fortified area, many miles in depth.

The Germans to mark their sense of its importance named its various sections after the heroes of German mythology. The Drocourt switch they called the Wotan position, the section covering Cambrai and St. Quentin the Siegfried position, the south of St. Quentin the Alberich position, and the southernmost position which ran east of the Argonne and across the Meuse was called the Kriehmilde position. Thus a great barrier was built up from north to south covering Douai, Cambrai and St. Quentin and protecting the railway connecting Metz with Sedan and Mezieres.

Of the various sections of this barrier the Siegfried system in front of Cambrai and St. Quentin, which was begun first, was the most elaborate; the Kriemhilde section had not the same depth or artificial strength, partly because the ground on the Meuse-Argonne front was naturally very defensible and the approaches to the Kriemhilde line were more difficult than those leading to other sections, and partly because the original German trenches between the Meuse and the Argonne were never penetrated by Allied troops from the first days of trench warfare until they were stormed by the 1st American army on Sept. 26, 1918.

How the Line Was Built.

THE principles on which these lines were elaborated were worked out by the Germans as the result of a close study of their experiences in the first battle of the Somme. If that battle cost us dear, it and the battle of Verdun destroyed the flower of the German army and it became evident to the German leaders that a few more such struggles would exhaust their military strength. By the summer of 1916 the work of Mr. Lloyd George at the British Ministry of Munitions and of M. Albert Thomas at the French ministry, had begun to take effect. For the first time in the war the allies on the western front were superior to the Germans in gun power and in the number of shells at the service of their guns. The bombardment preliminary to the infantry attack by the British in the Somme battle lasted seven days and was heard in the suburbs of London, 150 miles away.

The Germans realized that at this period of the war bombardment had become th eprincipal means of attack by the allies and that their strongest trenches would crumble to pieces if exposed to the full blast of the tornado of shell which could be hurled against them. The accuracy of the fire of artillery depends upon observation.

The Germans therefore designed the Hindenburg lines so that observation of them from the ground should be as difficult as possible. Whenever it was possible to do so they were constructed along the back slopes of ridges, not along the top or on the front slopes, where they would be easily seen. In order to keep the observers and the guns at a distance and to disorganize the attacking infantry, strong outpost positions were built, often as much as three or four miles in front of the main positions.

The troops in these outpost positions were intended to fall back before a heavy attack after delaying it as much as possible by machine gun and rifle fire, and with this method of defense it would not be necessary to keep large numbers of troops in the very front lines, which would be exposed to the worst of the bombardment. This was in fact an early version of the system of defense which Gouraud applied so brilliantly when he defeated the great German attack of July 15, 1918.

In the Siegfried section the system was given great depth so that if the attackers succeeded in storming the first lines it would be necessary for them to pause until the guns had been moved forward and the stocks of shell brought up for a renewed bombardment of the rear lines. Between Cambrai and St. Quentin the Siegfried system from the outpost positions near Epehy to the rearmost line near Beaurevoit was as much as ten miles deep.

The most elaborate wire entanglements were provided in front of each line of trenches. They were arranged in geometrical patterns so that the angles could be swept by machine gun fire, and there were often as many as eight or nine belts of barbed wire in front of the trenches. Standing after the great battle had been won and the Siegfried system had been pierced on the ridges east of the St. Quentin canal, in the heart of the system, one looked over miles of dense entanglements running in every direction and was filled with amazement that it should have been possible for flesh and blood to storm a way through such obstacles. Heavily concreted shelters for the infantry and machine gunners were provided in the firing trenches, while further back, great underground barracks were constructed at a depth to make them proof against the heaviest bombardment.

Break Into the Line.

WHEN we first broke into the Hindenburg line with Byng's tank attack of November, 1917, we found that the Germans had hollowed out the ground under many of the villages, piling the chalk into the buildings, so that it would not attract attention and would add to the immunity of the dugout from bombardment. These dugouts were fitted on a lavish scale, so as to provide for the comfort of the occupants. They were furnished with numerous stairways, so that the men in them could come out quickly when the bombardment was over, were often boarded in and furnished with electric light, while water and sleeping bunks were provided.

Through the middle of the Siegfried system ran two canals. The Canal du Nord and the St. Quentin canal, which, near Cambrai becomes the navigable Scheldt. Both of these canals, which ran in places through deep cuttings, were used by the enemy, who dug deep into the banks, to provide shelter for his men. Between Bellicourt and Vendhuile the St. Quentin canal ran underground for a distance of 6,000 yards and this tunnel, when blocked up, provided the Germans with a ready-made underground barrack, which was fitted out for occupation, and connected by numerous shafts with the trenches above.

Along the top of the canal, which constituted a very serious natural obstacle, numbers of concreted machine gun emplacements were built, so that the whole length of the canal where it ran above ground could be swept by cross-fire. Such were the defenses upon which the Germans, not without justification, pinned their faith, defenses which they held to be absolutely impregnable, but were stormed in the great battle by British and American infantry, who in so doing broke the morale of the German troops, the resolution of the German leaders and the heart of the German people.

The allied defences have often been contrasted unfavorably with these elaborate and intricate German trench systems, but the conditions on the two sides were very different. In the first place, from the beginning of 1915 until the end of 1917 the allies were, with the exceptions of the German gas attacks at Ypres and the battle of Verdun, almost always attacking, devoting all their energies to the attempt to break through the trench barrier, and the vast preparations required for the battles which were fought during that period left little labor over for the elaboration of defences.

In the second place, the Germans were much more favorably placed than the allies as regards labor. They had Russian prisoners of war in great numbers and the fact that the Hague Convention forbade the employment of prisoners of war upon military work counted as nothing with them. They were able also to employ forced labor from the populations of Belgium and the occupied districts of northern France, and with these two sources of supply they could carry out the most extensive works without calling upon the army for more men than was necessary for planning and supervision. The construction of these great defensive systems therefore did not involve the withdrawal of any soldiers from the fighting front and did not interfere with the rest and training of the troops in war.

The allies, on the other hand, could only provide labor for the construction of rear lines of defense at the expense of their armies or of the factories in the home land which provided for the great and ever growing demands of the armies and fleets, and had to meet the urgent call for more and more ships. It is quite true that in the first years of the war the German infantryman dug better and worked harder at his trenches than did the British infantryman or his French comrade, but this industry would not have sufficed for the construction of the Hindenburg system, and as time went on and the quality and discipline of the German troops declined the new German trenches, on ground won in attack, which had necessarily to be constructed by the soldiers, grew less and less formidable. Mangin in his attack of July 18, in the second battle of the Marne, found little behind the enemy's front line, and Rawlinson had the same experience in the battle of Amiens of Aug. 8. Time and labor made the Hindenburg systems possible.

No Need for Systems.

THOSE systems had, as I have said, been designed primarily to meet a great bombardment, but by the time Foch was ready to assault them the conditions had altered fundamentally. Bombardment had ceased to be the only or even the chief means at the service of the allies for opening the road for the infantry attack. The perfected tank was able to break through any belts of barbed wire, however dense, and force its way across any trenches, given reasonably favorable conditions of ground.

I do not maintain that tanks alone would have enabled us to break through the Siegfried system, for the two canals formed an obstacle which tanks could not cross, and the gaps in and between the canals were not sufficiently wide to allow of a really effective breach being made where they occurred. Both methods of attack had to be combined and were combined with rare skill.

It is quite probable that neither Foch's skillful preparation for the great battle, nor the valor of the infantry would have brought us victory if we had to rely upon bombardment alone in order to batter down the German defenses; indeed, it is almost certain that the Siegfried system would have stood an indefinite hammering by artillery. Sooner or later in war an antidote is usually found to every device of attack or of defense and the combination of gun and tank proved to be the antidote to the Hindenburg lines.

The question is often asked whether, if the war had continued, the tank would, have completely abolished trench warfare and restored the war of maneuver to its former place. This is the least doubtful, for the factor which prohibited maneuver in the old sense was not so much the trenches as the fact that the armies were stretched out between the North sea and Switzerland in a continuous line, which prevented the enemy, if he had not, as he was, been decisively beaten when driven out of his Hindenburg lines, from getting time to build any more of them until he had found his antidote to it, which he might perhaps have done in the Meuse or the Rhine, the Dutch frontier taking the place of the North sea on his northern flank. It is hardly safe to assume, therefore, that the breaking of the Hindenburg line rang the death knell of trench warfare, but it did win the war and that is all that matters.

O-Cedar Polish
Stoltz

THE most surprising of the O-Cedar results is how long your car will retain the bright, shining, reflecting lustre. You will notice it will not collect dust easily. And what dust does settle on it can be removed with a duster or dust cloth.

O-Cedar Polish is sold by All Dealers. 25c to $3.00 Sizes.

Channell Chemical Company

Use O-Cedar Polish the O-Cedar Polish Way

First, remove mud, dust, etc., from your car by washing with water in the usual way.

If you have used oils, or wax, it is best to use Ivory Soap to remove them.

Pour about 4 ounces of O-Cedar in a pan and add a quart of warm water. Saturate a clean cloth in this and go over the body of the car. Do not attempt to clean too much at a time—take one side of the body or a fender, first. Follow by rubbing with a dry cloth. But little rubbing is required to produce a hard, dry, lasting lustre.

City Figures Toll Knell of Horse on Chicago Streets

Motorcycles and High Powered Cars Also Show Decrease.

FIGURES furnished by City Collector Forsberg of Chicago to the Trailer Manufacturers' Association of America, from the records of licenses issued for vehicles under the wheel tax law, show that during the last four fiscal years ended April 30, 1919, the number of horse drawn vehicles licensed decreased from 49,582 to 32,489, or 34¼ per cent, while the automobiles and motor trucks licensed increased from 43,129 to 77,332, or 77¾ per cent, in the same period.

There were slightly fewer motor vehicles, including motorcycles, in the city April 30, 1916, than there were horse drawn vehicles, but at the end of April this year there were two and one-half times as many motor vehicles as horse drawn.

The changes have been fairly consistent, but the greatest increase of motor vehicles occurred in 1916-'17, when 17,752 were added to the license list, and was followed, as might be expected, by the largest decrease in horse drawn vehicles the next two years, when 6,874 and 7,107 disappeared from the records in the respective periods.

The highest percentage of increase during the four years was in motor trucks, busses, and coaches of more than one ton capacity, which increased 164 per cent, and the next largest increase was in motor delivery wagons, which increased 104.4 per cent in number. On the other hand, the greatest decrease in horse drawn vehicles was in one and two horse buggies, amounting to about 71 and 80 per cent, respectively.

It is surprising to note that motorcycles decreased nearly 53 per cent, due, perhaps, to the fact that during the two years the United States was at war, the government demand for motorcycles for the army greatly curtailing sales to civilians. There also was a decrease of nearly 14 per cent in the number of passenger automobiles of more than thirty-five horse power.

BLAZING THE TRAIL TO DETROIT—Posting of the so-called Michigan-Detroit-Chicago highway has been completed by the sign crew of the Detroit Automobile club, which has distributed the blue and white markers plentifully along the 308 mile route by way of Kalamazoo and Battle Creek. It can hardly be said that this is now the best way to drive to Detroit, but it will be some day, probably, when the road improvements under way or planned are completed. In the picture at the left Chairman W. B. Bachman of the club's signboard committee is sharing the honors with one of the typical "blue band" markers; at the right the elaborate sign which indicates the Detroit end of the trail.

U. S. Convoy Stirs Interest in Army Training Schools

DENNISON, Ia., July 26.—The government's first great participation in the national good roads campaign is receiving a royal welcome throughout Iowa. Street dances, big outdoor barbecues, automobile parades, and speeches by state and city officials have marked the progress of the transcontinental motor convoy across the state this week.

This is the section of the Lincoln highway which most needs preparation for the great caravans of heavy truck trains and passenger cars to come. The motor transport corps of the army is preparing for these. Its army schools will turn out annually 6,000 mechanics trained in the operation of gas engines and motor equipment.

The opportunities for young men in these army schools are attracting great attention, and many who have enlisted as the train has passed near their homes have expressed their desire to enter the classes.

The convoy's itinerary for next week is: Monday, Council Bluffs; Tuesday, Omaha; Wednesday, Columbus, Neb.; Thursday, Grand Island; Friday, Lexington; Saturday, North Platte.

Road Opening Delayed.

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 26.—[Special.]—The opening and dedication of the Goodyear cut-off on the Lincoln highway across the desert in Utah has been indefinitely postponed. The ceremonies were to have been held this week.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Muleless Magic.

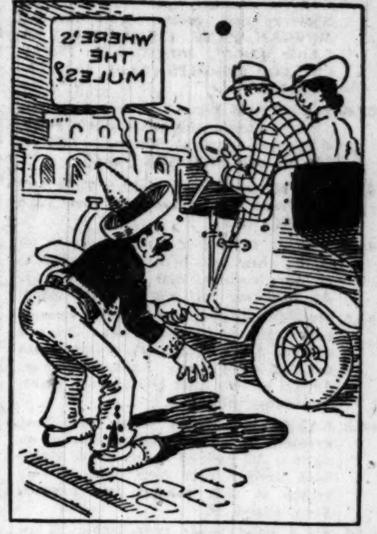
We lived in Mexico when automobiles were first invented, and were among the first people to own one in our American colony.



WHERE'S THE MULES?

One day we stopped at a house in the country for some water. As our "one lunger" came toward the house all the people hid from fright of the new thing on wheels.

Finally we induced the man of the house to come out, which he did reluctantly. Looking underneath the car he asked in a puzzled tone, "But where are the mules?" L. B.

Friend Wife Helps.

My wife and myself were out riding in our first new car. We were in the country, on a smooth macadam road, and I was anxious to learn what speed I could get out of the car. I was going about forty-five miles an hour and I told my wife to keep watch and let me know if any one was following me.

We had gone about ten miles at this rate of speed when I again asked my wife if any one was following. She replied, "No, only a man on a motorcycle. He has been behind us for about two miles."

I slowed down and the motorcyclist drew up and told me to follow him back to town. Needless to say I got $25 and costs. S. B. S.

It Wasn't Tom.

Living in a small town I always drove a horse and wagon for delivering groceries. We later bought a car and I was not very familiar with the clutch and brakes.

One day as I was nearing the house where I had some groceries to deliver, I drove up close to the curb and, forgetting about the car, I hopped out and yelled "Whoa, Tom!" while the car kept on going until it ran into a ditch and smashed both lights and the fender.

I soon found out that an automobile is unlike a horse. H. C.

Rear Axle Needs Intelligent Care; Seldom Gets It

Small Troubles Quickly Develop Into Big Ones.

BY HIGH SPEED.

AMONG the hardest working units in the mechanism of the modern motor car is the rear axle. The function of this part is not only to help carry the weight of the car but also to transmit the power. Whenever the car is in motion the rear axle is the scene of intense mechanical activity.

It will be obvious then that this part of the mechanism should have the most scrupulous care. It does not always get it.

Rear axles fall readily into two distinct classifications, dead axles and live ones. It is live axles which are used on all modern passenger cars. The term "live" simply means that the axle turns. Dead axles do not turn and they are only used on vehicles having double chain drive.

When we come to examine live axles we find it necessary to classify them still further into three minor classes, known respectively as floating, semifloating, and three-quarter floating. A further classification comes later, according to the type of gearing used to transmit the power.

The live axle consists principally of a hollow spheroid, from which project on either side two tubes. In the central spheroid is located the differential unit embodying a number of gears. From the differential project two shafts, which occupy the tubes projecting from the central spheroid of the rear axle. At the ends of these shafts the wheels are attached.

The classifications of floating, semifloating, and three-quarter floating are derived from the method used in attaching the wheels to the shafts.

The floating axle does do very nearly that thing. It is not called upon to bear any of the weight of the car. It simply transmits the power to the wheels and takes a little of the torsional or twisting stresses. The floating axle has its bearings outside the tube, so that the wheels really rest on the tubes and not on the shafts. In this type of axle the shafts may be removed without disturbing any other parts.

The semi-floating axle has its bearings on the inside of the tube, so that the shafts are called upon to bear some of the load as well as to transmit power. The shafts are not as easily removed as in the case of the floating axle.

The three-quarter floating axle has the bearings on the outside of the tubes, and there is a rigid connection between shafts and wheels. This type demands that the shafts shall bear some of the load in addition to transmitting power.

When it comes to the types of gears used in transmitting power we find that the passenger cars of today employ three—straight bevel, spiral bevel, and two speed bevel. In the truck field we find three additional types—the worm, internal gear, and double chain drive, though the latter is growing less every year.

During the last few years the spiral bevel has come rapidly to the front, until today it is the most popular type. There are obvious reasons for this, its quiet running and general efficiency being the leading ones. Many makers still stick to the straight bevel, while the two speed bevel has only one prominent adherent.

The car owner who has experienced that most tenacious trouble commonly known as "rear axle trouble" will not need the advice to do everything possible to guard against it. Many serious troubles may develop in this unit and only the utmost care will obviate some of them.

Axle shafts sometimes break or are twisted out of their proper shape. Bearings are sometimes crushed. The differential gears are peculiarly liable to chipping, which may probably result in the ruin of the whole unit.

As is generally the case, the principal item in the proper care of the rear axle is lubrication. Never make the mistake of using grease in this part, as used to be the rule. Oil is the proper lubricant for the rear axle. Once or twice during the running season the rear axle should be drained, and after being flushed out with kerosene fresh oil should be put in.

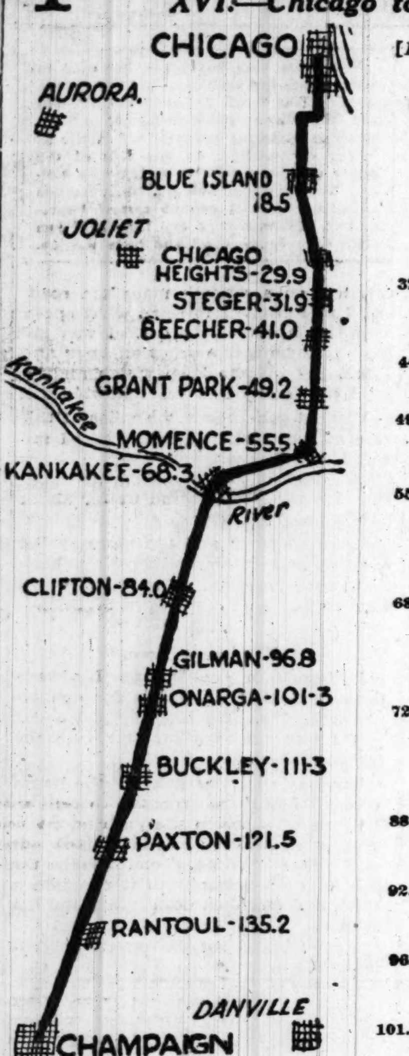
Note also that while the part should be kept well filled with oil all the time, an excess is not desirable, for the extra quantity is likely to work down and into the braking system, with the functioning of which it interferes. Sometimes it is necessary to place felt washers in the axle tubes to prevent the excess oil working out in this way.

But lubrication is not all in the case of the rear axle. As we noted above, the function of this part involves the taking of torque or twisting stresses, which involve heavy strains. If the shafts or other parts are not heavy enough breakage occurs.

In case a part of the rear axle mechanism breaks, the proper thing to do is to find out the fundamental cause of the trouble. Mere replacement may not be enough, because it is quite likely that there may be a misalignment, that will quickly cause another breakage after the new part is in place. The only thing to do in a case of this kind is to have the offending part lined up and that is a job for the service station or an expert mechanic.

Tribune Tours 1919

XVI.—Chicago to Champaign.



HERE is a general utility route which should be in every Chicago motorist's scrapbook, for it is almost sure to be used at one time or another during the season. More than half of it lies over the characteristic Illinois dirt roads, but these are hardly to be avoided on any reasonably direct route into the central or southern part of the state.

Moreover, Champaign and Urbana, with the University of Illinois between them, always afford a reason for making the trip, which lies through one of the most beautiful farming sections of the middle west.

The route indicated follows a continuous stretch of pavement for the first thirty-two miles—Cook county's part of the Dixie highway. From the southern boundary of Cook county there is pavement under construction to Momence (where the route leaves the Dixie highway), concrete and gravel to Kankakee, and dirt roads for the most part the rest of the way. The latter are good in dry weather, but should not be ventured over after a heavy rain.

The itinerary as a whole is a part of the Egyptian trail, which is marked with a black pyramid surmounted by the initials E. T.

NOTE—The Dixie highway between Steger and Momence will be found closed for construction work at present. This is a temporary condition, however, and is not referred to in the route directions, which are designed for permanent use. The necessary detours are easily found.

Caravan Ready to Carry Truck Gospel to Farm

PLANS are virtually complete for the first national motor truck development tour, which leaves Grant park Monday, Aug. 4. The tour will go through the states of Illinois, Iowa, North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin, over a route 3,000 miles in length.

The trucks in the caravan will be equipped with every conceivable type of body that the farmer could wish and these bodies will be used to demonstrate the practicability of the truck on the farm.

If possible local committees in each community will select some demonstration of hauling and an accurate account of the entire cost of this hauling per mile will be kept. The gasoline consumption, oil consumption, size and weight of the load, road condition, all will be recorded. A comparison will then be made with typical performances of the horse drawn vehicle.

A. H. Kroh, who has had fourteen years of practical experience in farming and has given close study to the motorization of the farm, will discuss this topic with the farmers and business men. About twenty trucks with a personnal of some eighty men are expected to make the trip.

To Buy Camp Sites.

As the result of a law passed at the recent session of the Colorado legislature, county highway commissioners are authorized to purchase camping sites along the highways of the state for the convenience of motorists.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

DISCUSSING the prevailing shortage of automobiles, a statement issued by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce says:

"Some who are chafing at the delay in securing cars are at a loss to understand why the factories should be so behind in their orders. The reasons are several and good ones. To begin with, the demand has greatly increased, as many people from patriotic and other motives withheld their buying of new cars while the war was in progress. The factories were down to a very low rate of production toward the end of 1918 and it took a little time to get back into the swing after the restrictions on production were removed. Even the plants that are back to a peace time basis find difficulty in securing material and parts. Not the least of the factors aggravating the present situation is the urgency for the makers to take advantage of the present psychological moment to extend foreign business even at the risk of sacrificing some business in the home market."

Haynes prices go up $200 on all models this week. The increase takes effect next Friday, Aug. 1. Incidentally, it is announced that all Haynes models hereafter will be furnished with cord tires as standard equipment.

Buick models for 1920 are announced, the new cars being marked by refinements of detail rather than by any marked mechanical innovation. Current prices are maintained on some models, with slight increases on the coupes and sedans.

Cole is equipping its present models with a new automatic brake adjuster designed to make adjustment of the service brake unnecessary. The device is mounted at the junction of the service brake pedal and the brake rod. As wear on the brake band takes place notches within the adjuster automatically move back on the brake rod and absorb the surplus length occasioned by this wear.

"Important developments" are promised by the builders of the Doble-Detroit steam car. Just what they are is not specified, but the presumption is that plans are under way to invade the passenger car market in earnest—a proceding which the war and various other things delayed.

The Ambu Engineering institute is in process of organization in Chicago to provide a school of instruction for men in automotive electrical repair work. Temporary offices have been established at 1603 Michigan avenue, and plans for a permanent location and the selection of a faculty are now under way.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS—By High Speed

The rims on the rear wheels of my automobile have developed a chronic squeak. The tires have been off and on a good many times, for the car is a 1916 model. In tightening up the lugs the inside ends of the bolts have been pulled down into the wood of the felloe somewhat. I have not been able to find a garage man who knows how to stop this squeak, which occurs with each revolution of the wheel. I understand there is some system of putting a small circular piece of copper wire underneath the lug, which is said to be effective. Will you kindly advise me as to the best method of remedying this difficulty?

R. J. W., Aurora, Ill.

I should not recommend that you try to stop the squeak by the wire method, for this will only intensify the pressure on the wood and make the flange with the wire dig deeper into the felloe. It is much better either to fit new bolts with larger heads and washers behind them, to distribute the pressure over a large surface, or else, using the same size bolts, to fit a lug on the inside of the felloe, which will act as a support for the bolt.

Kindly give the best automobile route to Denver, Colo., from Chicago, and the distance.

F. J. WALKER, Lake Forest, Ill.

Start west on Jackson boulevard and follow the Lincoln way markers through Wheaton to Geneva. Here pick up the Lincoln highway proper, following it west through De Kalb, Dixon, Sterling, Clinton, Ia., Cedar Rapids, Marshalltown, Boone, Denison, Omaha, Neb., Lincoln, Grand Island, Kearney, North Platte, and Big Spring to Cheyenne, Wio., then drive south through Greeley, Colo., to Denver. The distance is 1,193 miles.

Kindly inform me as to the best way to Minneapolis, going by way of Milwaukee if the roads are fit to go that way. If not I would like to go by Janesville and Madison.

E. A. MELZE, Des Plaines, Ill.

Go east to Evanston and north through Waukegan, Kenosha, Wis., Racine, Milwaukee, and Menominee Falls, to Fond du Lac. Turn west to Ripon, north through Berlin to Waupaca, and west through Stevens Point to Marshfield. Continue north and west through Abbottsford, Chippewa Falls, Eau Claire, Menomonie, Hudson, and St. Paul to Minneapolis. This is a better route to Minneapolis than that by way of Janesville and Madison.

Please publish an automobile route to Rhinelander, Wis., from Elgin, Ill.

B. F. HUTSON, Elgin, Ill.

Drive north through Crystal Lake, Lake Geneva, Wis.; Oconomowoc, Waupun, Ripon, and Berlin to Waupaca. Turn northwest to Stevens Point, north through Wausau and Merrill to Cassian, and east to Rhinelander.

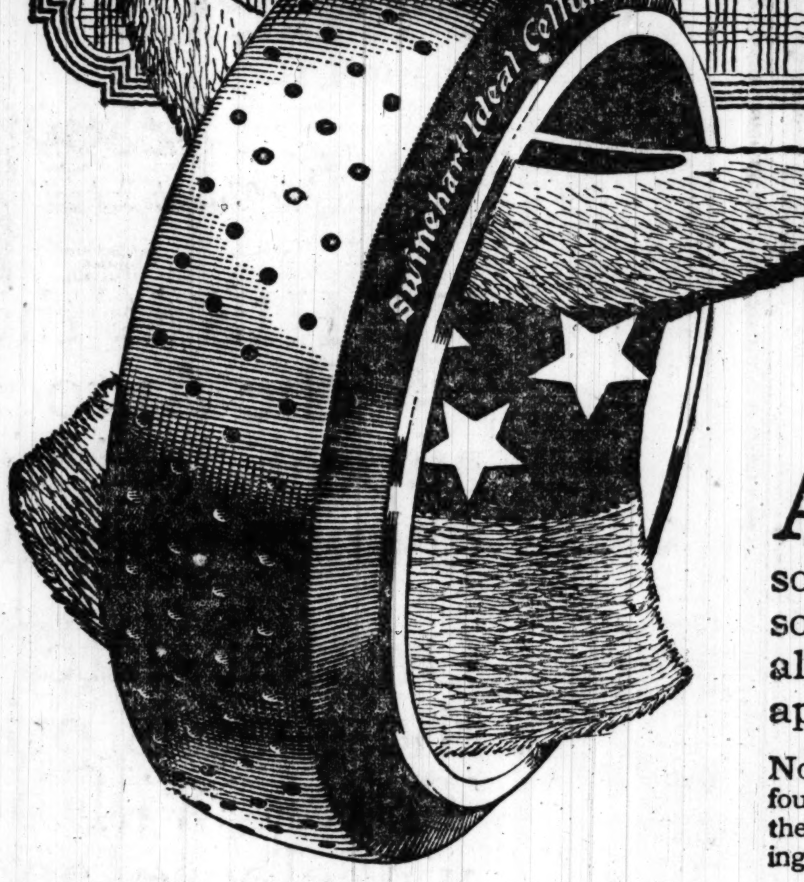
Swinehart Tires



When his hat was in the ring

A true story about tires and the war

ABRAHAM LINCOLN wasn't talking about Uncle Sam exactly, when he said: "you can fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time." And yet the same old principle applies: you can't fool Uncle Sam—at all.

Not even on tires; and there were a lot of pretty good concerns that found out to their cost that when Uncle Sam put in his order for tires he wanted the best that his money could buy, and proposed to get it. The best and nothing but the best would answer for the terrific service "over there."

NOW let us tell you what happened—this is the story. The Government placed tremendous orders for tires, tires for trucks, tires for ambulances, tires for officers' automobiles. The factories went to work. They worked night and day to meet the government demands.

And then the deliveries began, carloads and trainloads of tires. Tens of thousands of them. Akron led the country in this gigantic task. And so the tires were turned over to the Government and it was assumed the job was done. But not so—

Uncle Sam took it into his head to inspect those tires and when it comes to inspecting, your Uncle Samuel is some inspector.

He inspected every tire in all that tremendous consignment and what happened makes bitter reading for some folks, even to this day. For what Uncle Sam did was to throw out, refuse point blank, and send back bodily whole car loads of rejected tires. They didn't look good to the sharp eyes under the old beaver hat of Uncle Sam. He didn't want them and he didn't take 'em.

It was the biggest record breaking rejection in history. A heart breaker clear along the line practically, but it didn't affect Swinehart Tires at all.

Out of thousands of solids and pneumatics shipped by the Swinehart Tire & Rubber Co. on Government orders there was not one single rejection.
Not one.
Not one.
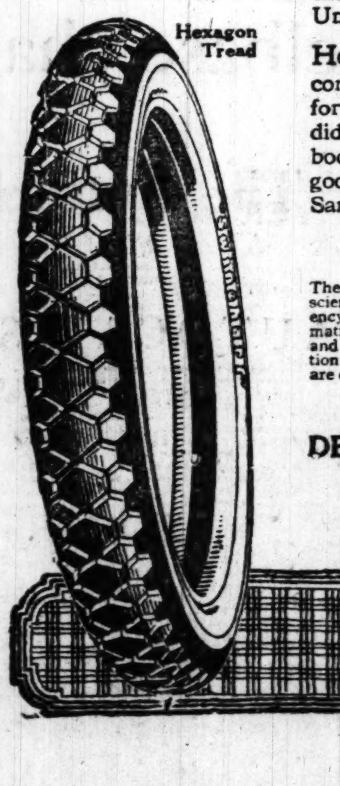
Not one.

Every tire shipped bearing the Swinehart name had in it the integrity of Swinehart manufacture and Swinehart stamina—and was accepted. Every Swinehart Tire turned over to the Government stood the test and staid sold.

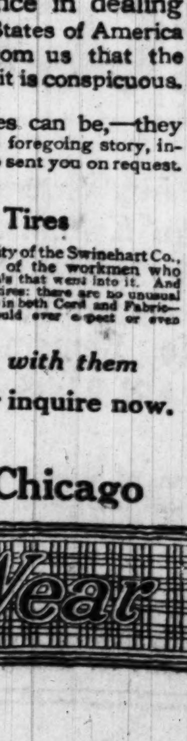
If you've ever had any experience in dealing with the Government of the United States of America you will need no added argument from us that the moral of this story is as significant as it is conspicuous.

Swinehart Tires are all that good tires can be,—they wear, and wear and wear. The proof of the foregoing story, insofar as Swinehart Tires are concerned, will be sent you on request.



Swinehart Ideal Cellular Truck Tires

The angle, depth, and width of the cells or holes in this remarkable tire are scientifically correct. This patented construction provides sufficient resiliency to make this tire ideal for truck use. Blowouts and punctures in Pneumatic truck tires are fatal. The Swinehart Cellular eliminates this danger and makes the use of a spare tire absolutely unnecessary. This construction also makes the tire anti-skid and non-heating. The many advantages are obvious.



Swinehart Pneumatic Tires

Back of every Swinehart Pneumatc Tiire is the integrity of the Swinehart Co., the brains of the men who produced it, the skill of the workmen who wrought the finished product, and the quality of the materials that went into it. And after all these are the only essentials in the making of good tires: there are no unusual "tricks" in the process. Swinehart Pneumatic Tires are made in both Cord and Fabric—both give more guaranteed miles for your money than you would ever expect or even have a right to expect.

Let your next tires be Swinehart—or see that your new truck or car is equipped with them

Could You Have Loved As Aimee Did?

Why did Jack Ryder, an American, fall so rapturously in love with Aimee, a beautiful French girl budding into womanhood in an Egyptian haremlik? Was it the fiery tingle of a stolen kiss? Was it the fervent magnetism of youth in love's first embrace? Was it the glamour of languorous eyes? Was it the charm of her radiant smile? What was it that impelled Jack Ryder to brave death—that gave Aimee the courage to risk the fate of an odalisque of the haremlik? Mary Hastings Bradley tells the story of Aimee's love for Jack Ryder in the most amazing romance of the year—a new Egyptian love story of adventure, of astounding dramatic climaxes—"The Fortieth Door." It starts in the color section of next Sunday's Chicago Sunday Tribune. Don't—don't miss it!

READ THIS—

"From his own eyes a flame seemed to pass into hers. Breathlessly they gazed at each other like dim shadows in a garden of still enchantment.

"And then, as from a palpable clasp, she tried to slip away. 'Truly, I must go! It is so late—'

"Ryder's heart was pounding within him.

"She caught her breath. 'O, never again! Tonight has no tomorrow—'

" 'Outside this gate,' he persisted, 'I shall wait—and other nights after that. For I must know—if you are safe.'

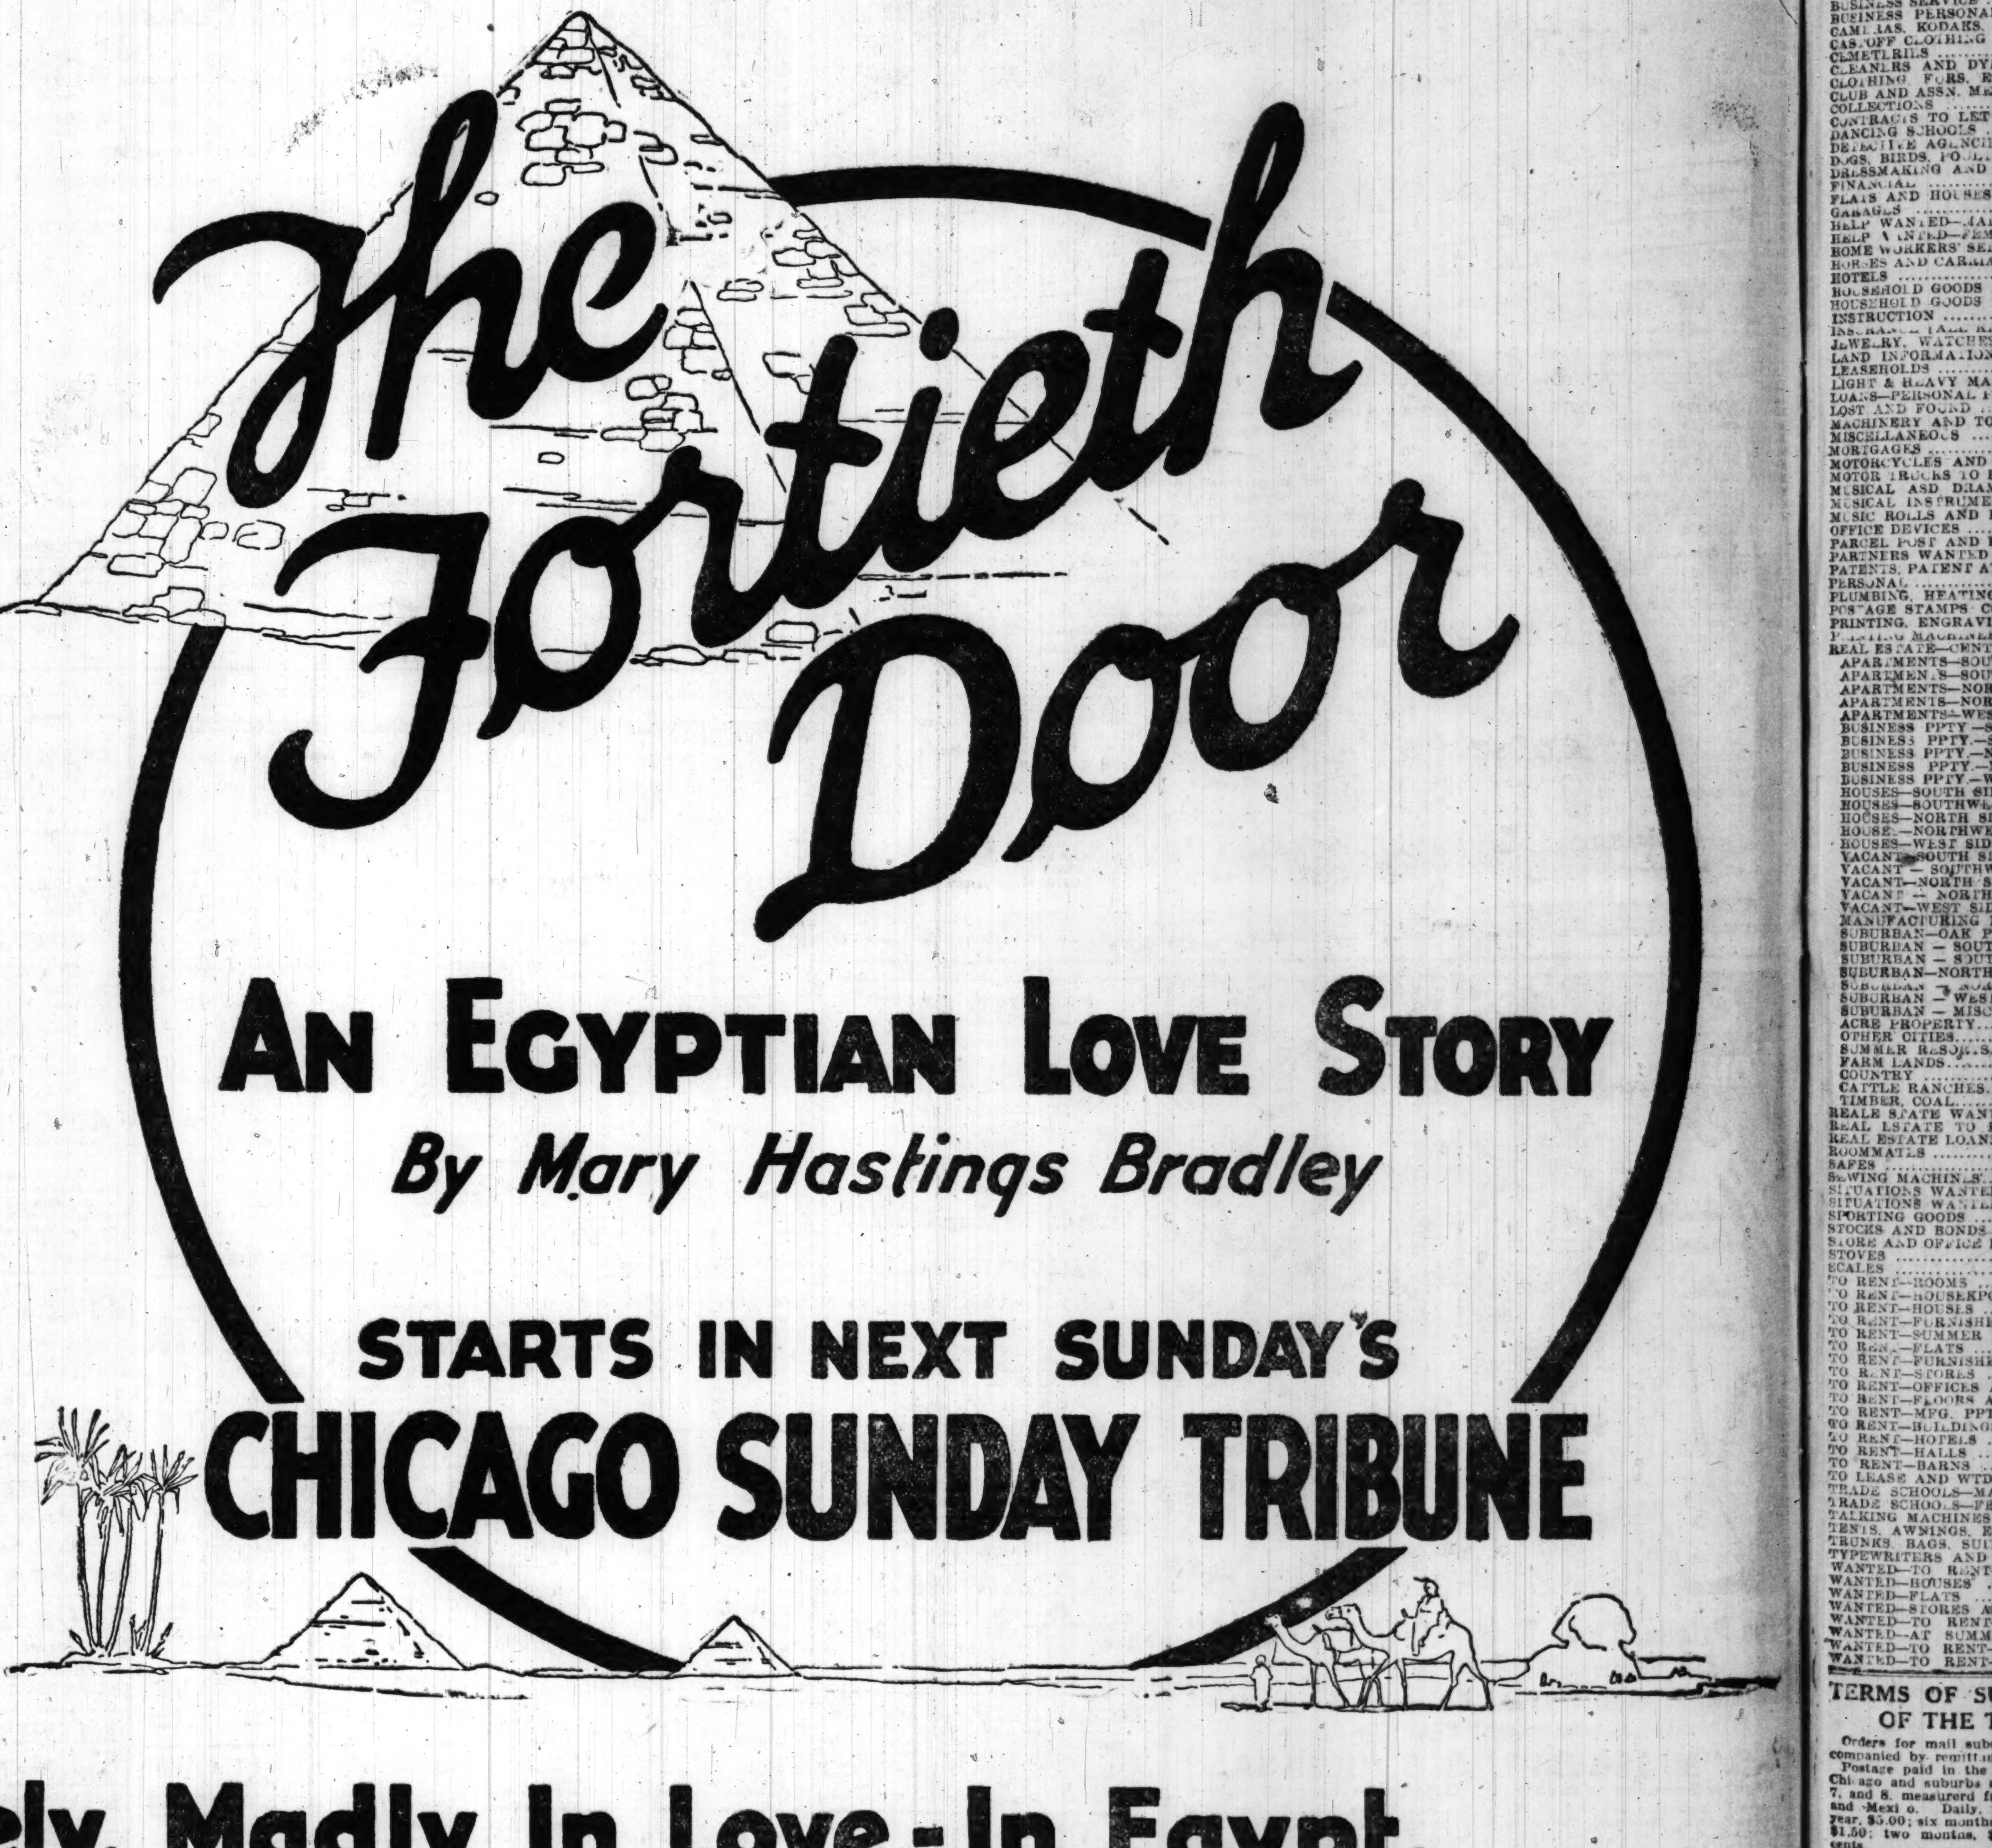
" 'See, I am very safe now. For if I were missed there would be running and confusion.'

"He only drew a little closer to her. 'Tomorrow night—or another—I shall be waiting.'

"She moved her head in denial.

" 'Neither tomorrow nor another night.'

"Again their eyes met. He bent over her. He knew a gleam of sharpest wonder at himself as his arms went swiftly round that shrouding drapery, and then all duality of consciousness was blotted out in the rush of his young madness. For within that drapery was the soft, human sweetness of her; his arms tightened, his face bent close, and through the sheer gauze of her veil his lips pressed her lips."



AN EGYPTIAN LOVE STORY

By Mary Hastings Bradley

STARTS IN NEXT SUNDAY'S

CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE

Passionately, Madly In Love-In Egypt.

What was it that awakened in Jack Ryder such ardent emotion? What was it that made Aimee so adorable, so lovable? She, a charming French girl, had grown into womanhood in an atmosphere of mystery and conspiracy of an Egyptian haremlik. Was it to save her from a fateful marriage to a Moslem she had never seen, or was it her passionate Egyptian love that made him risk death to win her? The story is told in "The Fortieth Door"—this year's most sensational story of love, mystery and adventure in cryptic Egypt. It starts in the color section of next Sunday's Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Every chapter of "The Fortieth Door" teems with the burning emotion of Egyptian romance. The atmosphere of the Nile, of Cairo, of the Pyramids, lends a flaming touch to this international romance of an American archaeologist and a French girl. "The Fortieth Door" is a new story by Mary Hastings Bradley, the famous author of "Wine of Astonishment." It has never before been published in any form. It will be presented for the first time starting in the color section of next Sunday's Chicago Sunday Tribune. You must not miss it! To avoid disappointment order your Chicago Sunday Tribune in advance from your newsdealer.

TRUE VALUES ON UNCLAIMED STORAGE

Prices on new household furnishings are high. They have advanced 200% and more. This condition cannot be altered by the manufacturers or the retail merchants.

Compare the existing market conditions on new furnishings with those influencing the sale of used and unclaimed storage merchandise. Storage goods should be low priced, and are lower at our warehouse than any place in Chicago.

Our business is built upon repeat sales. We call the attention of our old customers and all prospective buyers to the wonderful display of BETTER STORAGE we now have ready.

This midseason clearance will stand as an epoch in furniture sales. When we say true values we mean values which will make every buyer a permanent customer.

MAIL ORDER OFFICE MANAGER.

A very unusual opportunity has presented itself in our organization for an executive who has a tried record for successful mail order office management.

However, you will not be able to satisfy us that you can successfully fill this position unless your claims are backed by a record of several years' standing with some of America's larger mail order houses where you have received a minimum of $5,000 per annum.

This position has nothing to do with auditing or finance, but only mail order handling, such as mail opening, entry, index, adjusting, correspondence, return goods, filing, billing, etc., etc., etc.

Have you handled a force of 300 employes and upwards? Can you qualify in all other respects? If so, state briefly but accurately your complete experience, salary you have received at each position, salary you will expect.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

GOOD SALESMEN MAKE $25,000 AND UP A YEAR WITH US. YOU CAN MEET OUR SALESMEN IN OUR OFFICE WHO ARE DOING SO.

One of them will close your first sales for you right in your territory if you so desire.

If you have sales ability, ambition, and energy, this is your opportunity to get into the big money making class. To begin with, we are selling a proposition which is in far greater demand today than anything similar has ever been, and which is more than twice as profitable and twice as good in every way as every prospect already has, and practically every prospect you call on already has something of the same nature that is not half as good as what you have to offer.

No purchaser needs to take a loss on what he already has in order to do business with you, and your proposition in nearly every case costs less.

Our sales are all made on approval, although it costs us hundreds of dollars for each sale that is not accepted, and one-half of the commission is paid when the conditional sale is made. Less than 5 per cent of our sales fail to stick, whereas 65 per cent are increased when the purchaser signs his acceptance, which is in a short time after the sale is made. The commission on a sale averages upwards of $1,000. It is often much larger than this amount, and is seldom less than $500.

If you can qualify for this work we will give you permanent, exclusive, virgin territory which contains from 500 to 1,000 logical prospects financially able to buy, to whom we will extend credit. As soon as you have developed six or more prospects, which any real salesman should do within ten days or two weeks, one of our experienced men will come into your territory and close them for you if you so desire. This makes it practically impossible for any salesman of ability who will work to fail.

We have hundreds of indorsements from satisfied purchasers. We are thoroughly established, with capital and assets of several million dollars, doing a business that will stand the strictest investigation. Our business is good every month in the year.

Our Salesmen work in a strictly commission basis, as the type of men necessary to succeed in this business would seldom work on any other basis. The type of man that is particularly interested in taking up this work is a Salesman who is accustomed to making from $6,000 to $12,000 a year, but who realizes that we have several years of prosperity and big money making ahead of us, and is ambitious to get into the big money making class. To receive consideration you must have made, better than $5,000 per year and expenses, and be willing to go into an exclusive permanent territory. The territory we are organizing at the present time is from 100 to 400 miles of Chicago.

The men who accept this ad and qualify for our work can meet men in our office from the field making far in excess of $25,000 per year and who will do your first closing for you if you need their assistance.

Write, giving an outline of your experience and earnings, or call between 10 a. m. and 3 p. m., Room 801, 109 N. Dearborn-st.

A DEAD ONE.

How often you hear that expression applied to some acquaintance—it signifies much.

Many a man is a dead one in the eyes of his friends, not because he hasn't ability, but simply because he lacks the will power to go after the proper position and demonstrate his ability.

Mr. Man, is YOUR efficiency improving and are you now doing constructive work that assures you a positive future?

Every day we place scads of men in positions that are 50% to 100% better than they ever held before. What we have done for over 300,000 others we can do for you. Get out of the rut. See us Monday—all details confidential.

WORKERS OF ALL TRADES & OCCUPATIONS.

We are an industrial syndicate and are anxious to double our present force of employes, who are composed of American speaking people of all nationalities. We need men who are first class workers in their various occupations, and who would like to be kept steadily at work every day in the year at more than the usual wage rate, but those who apply for work with us must be prepared to be transferred from one plant to another when required, though this will not necessitate their moving away from their permanent homes. The reason for this is that we are establishing an efficiency system of our own, and those whom we employ from now on will be expected to assist us in keeping this plant going. While away from their homes workers will be allowed their transportation and living expenses. This is not an employment agency. Absolutely no fees are required. If you feel that you would like to make a change and want the chance to make good in the efficiency corps we are organizing and make the additional wages we are paying, write to us, stating what your exact line of occupation is, what you can do in addition to this; where you have been employed; what your present earnings amount to by the week; whether you are married or single, and if you are prepared to leave your home town to be gone for indefinite periods, and you will receive a prompt reply from us as to whether we have a pleace for you. TRADE SCHOOLS.

LEARN THE AUTOMOBILE BUSINESS BY PRACTICAL METHODS.

Our methods are similar to those of manual training schools. Students are taught to make repairs and run cars by actual practice under master instructors. We do not require you to make money for us. Every student receives usable knowledge right from the start. It pays to go to the oldest and best equipped school in Chicago.

We train repair men, chauffeurs, truck drivers, lighting and starting experts, demonstrators, salesmen, etc., individual instruction, simplest and quickest methods known.

SPECIAL COURSE FOR AUTOMOBILE OWNERS.

Tuition rates: Day course, $25, $65, to $85. Evening courses, $35, $40, and $20. Time payments accepted. Students may enroll any time.

You are invited to pay us a visit. If you cannot call, write for free booklet.

DOGS, BIRDS, POULTRY, ETC.

MAKE YOUR HENS LAY — IT'S YOUR fault if you do not have summer eggs. Only the surplus vitality goes into eggs. If hens are sick, cure them; if sluggish, give them a tonic. Cholerine is both a remedy and a tonic. It prevents and cures Cholera, Roup, Limberneck, and White Diarrhoea in baby chicks, and gives the "pep" that means eggs. A 65c package of tablets treats 17 gallons of drinking water. We give a positive guaranty. If dissatisfied we will give your money back. Germo Lice Powder is death to mites; large can 30c. Germo Head Louse Killer, 25c. Use of Germo preparations makes poultry pay because they keep hens healthy and producing eggs. If dealer cannot supply you send us the price and his name and we will send it postage paid. Address Germo Manufacturing Company, 4078 Germo Building, St. Louis, Mo.

WORKERS OF ALL TRADES & OCCUPATIONS.

We are an industrial syndicate and are anxious to double our present force of employes, who are composed of American speaking people of all nationalities. We need women who are first class workers in their various occupations, and who would like to be kept steadily at work every day in the year at more than the usual wage rate, but those who apply for work with us must be prepared to be transferred from one plant to another when required, though this will not necessitate their moving away from their permanent homes. The reason for this is that we are establishing an efficiency system of our own, and those whom we employ from now on will be expected to assist us in keeping this plan going. While away from their homes workers will be allowed their transportation and living expenses. This is not an employment agency. Absolutely no fees are required. If you feel that you would like to make a change and want the chance to make good in the efficiency corps we are organizing and make the additional wages we are paying, write to us, stating what your exact line of occupation is, what you can do in addition to this, where you have been employed; what your present earnings amount to by the week; whether you are married or single, and if you are prepared to leave your home town to be gone for indefinite periods, and you will receive a prompt reply from us as to whether we have a place open for you. Address Director of Personnel, P. O. Box 568, Chicago.

CLOTHING, FURS, ETC.

DEAR MADAM,

If you are going to buy a Fur Coat this season you will shop around considerably and buy where you can get the best and most for your money.

There are now two Furriers in Chicago that do and can afford to sell the same Fur Coat at the same price, and the reason for it is, that some don't manufacture, others have enormous ground floor rents and then again there is the small Furrier who doesn't sell enough and the customer usually has to pay a greater profit on the few coats that he does sell to cover his expense.

We have three very good and substantial reasons for being able to save you from $50 to $100 on your Fur Coat.

We are manufacturers—therefore there is no middleman's profit.

We do a large volume of business and have no tremendous ground floor rents to pay, which tends to reduce the price per garment to the customer.

We carry an enormous stock—AND GUARANTEE EVERY HUDSON SEAL COAT WE SELL FOR A PERIOD OF THREE SEASONS.

If a square deal and saving of $50 or $100 means anything in your young life, we would be pleased of the opportunity to convince.

REAL ESTATE—SUB'N—NORTH.

FOR SALE—ONE OF THE MOST BEAUTIFUL homes on the North Shore, located in Highland Park, close to the lake and surrounded by a wonderful variety of trees, shrubs, perennials, flower beds and garden; concrete driveways; the bldg. is of concrete and brick construction, with Spanish tile roof. The basement under entire house is high and dry, with laundry and storeroom; Webster vacuum heating system and Spencer boiler, which means plenty of heat at all times and under the most severe conditions.

THE 1ST FLOOR has a large reception hall with tile floor, toilet and lavatory under stairs; living room, Italian room, dining room, breakfast room, butler's pantry, kitchen, maid's room.

THE 2D FLOOR has four large master rooms with separate bathrooms and connecting two very large sleeping rooms.

3D FLOOR has a large ballroom. Provision has also been made for three large sleeping rooms with bath, etc.

The lot is 150 ft. more land can be had with this beautiful home, as there are several hundred feet on either side. The building is absolutely new and has never been occupied. I will be pleased to furnish any one wishing to purchase a superior home, photo and further information by addressing
WM. T. WOODLEY.

A Cozy Home of Your Own,
out where your children can play and enjoy life in a healthy atmosphere, should be one of your worthy ambitions, especially so with spots combining rural charm and environments, with city conveniences so near at hand.
Being a matter of sufficient importance to warrant quick action, we suggest that you take this very afternoon off and met us at EDISON PARK.
Should you never before have visited this corner of our great city you will no doubt be agreeably surprised at what you will see there in attractive homes and beautiful home sites, offered at most reasonable prices.
Take a surface car to Jefferson Park and the train from there on—or a train from the C. & N. W. depot direct to Edison Park.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

TIME TO STRIKE

THE TIME TO STRIKE and strike hard is when opportunity presents itself. The saddest words are "It might have been." So, when you see a chance to better yourself, be quick and take advantage of it, for you may never have another as good.

HERE IS YOUR CHANCE for a farm of your own. 40,000 acres of hardwood land in Kalkaska and Antrim counties, Michigan, are waiting for you to come and select a spot to build your farm home. No other offer holding such splendid possibilities has been presented to the public in the last 10 years. We have been in the land business over 20 years and know whereof we speak.

YOU MAY GET any size tract from 10 up to 160 acres or more, with a small down payment and the balance on very easy terms.

$15 TO $30 AN ACRE is the price just now and the land will produce most any crop grown in the north central states. You know the big profits there are in cattle, hog and sheep raising, and the high prices paid for wheat, corn, clover, hay, alfalfa, rye, oats, beans, and practically all foodstuffs.

THIS DISTRICT has good schools, churches, market towns, hard roads and railroads.

FREE INSURANCE goes with each contract while you are paying for the land. We will loan you money to build and make other improvements. There is a Michigan law providing exemption from taxes to new settlers for five years. We have experts who advise you of the best farming methods and crops to grow.

WRITE TODAY for big free booklet explaining all about our splendid offer. Offices keep open Saturday afternoons. Ask for rate and date of excursion. Free trips over the lands in our own autos. Good accommodations for both men and women at our fine clubhouse.

Swigart Land Co.

BIG CROPS ON THE NEW LINE OF THE SANTA FE.

The Federal Railroad Administration has authorized the completion of the new Shattuck Branch of the Santa Fe Railroad, to take care of this year's big crops—wheat, oats, and sorghums. This will open for immediate settlement and development a large block of my land in a wheat and stock farming section of Ochiltree and Hansford Counties, in Northwest Texas, near the Oklahoma state line, where the first crop has in a number of cases paid for the land, and where cattle and hogs can be raised at a low cost. Land is of a prairie character, ready for the plow. NO STONE, STUMPS, NO BRUSH TO BE CLEARED. At attractive prices on easy terms. Climate healthful; rain falls during growing season. Write for free illustrated folder giving experience and results settlers have secured in short time on small capital. T. C. SPEARMAN, 993 Railway Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

OUR BUYERS

represent our past, present, and future. If our settlers of yesterday are not making good today, and our settlers of today have no chance to make good tomorrow, the settler of tomorrow will not come, our Company will not have any business, our lands will not be sold.

We have in our previous statements told you about ourselves. Many of our readers of the past have become successful settlers of today, and many are ready to become settlers of tomorrow.

We have promised many things to our settlers that no other company in the United States promised. These promises must be redeemed. That we have satisfied our settlers hitherto can be easily proven, and we shall in the future let our settlers speak for us, telling you what they think of our district, the opportunities there, our Company and its way of doing business.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Lowe Write.

Home Lands, Inc.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: We have just returned from our trip to Mountain and we wish to express our opinion in regard to the land and surroundings up there.

The land you selected for us could not have been better had we gone over the whole tract ourselves, and we feel confident that it will make a very good farm. One thing that made quite an impression on us was that the people we found located in your district were men and women such as you are likely to find in any high class American community in Illinois, and that the schools are located in such a way that the children can receive a good education. A grammar school is to be located on the 80 we have selected, and there is a very fine high school at Mountain.

We were surprised when we heard that the first two selections one of your men made for us were already sold before you could get word to Mr. Mordt, but I am sure we wouldn't wish for a better piece of land than we have now. There is an abundance of wild berries all through the section. On our place there is a patch of wild red raspberries that covers at least two or three acres. Our land is gently rolling to rolling, and, judging from the crops we saw on the different farms, the soil must be excellent for general farming as well as for dairying.

Thanking you for all the kindness shown us while we were up there and for the good selection you made for us, we are

Respectfully yours,
MR. AND MRS. C. R. LOWE.

Mr. M. H. Bower.

writes on July 17, 1919, the following:

Home Lands, Inc.,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs: At the request of Mr. A. L. Mordt, I will write and tell what I have done and how I like the place. In April I came to this country with Mr. Treat, your District Superintendent at Minneapolis, Minn., and bought a tract of land under unfavorable circumstances. I did not get here until the 3d of June, which is the date I started to improve the place. Since then I have cleared some land and got in three bushels of potatoes and some small garden, which is doing well, as we ate radishes that grew in the garden for dinner today.

I have built the barn you agreed to build, as I preferred to save the cost of labor, and I am living in it until I can build the house.

I like the place better than I thought I would when I first came here. The Company has done as well by me as could be expected under present pressing conditions, as the volume of building is so large that it is almost impossible to fill the orders promptly, because of the scarcity of labor. We must not expect too much to begin with.

Wishing the Company all the success, and if any one wants any information I will gladly give it and answer any questions. I remain are located in the Oconto River Valley, Forest and Oconto Counties, Wis. They are close to railroad towns, schools, roads, etc. Our prices range from $20 to $30 per acre for agricultural land. Stony land is sold at much lower prices as grazing land. Sandy and swampy land unfit for agriculture we do not offer for sale.

Yours truly, M. H. BOWER.

Our Lands.

Sales Plans Nos. 1. and 2.

1. We build you a house and barn; furnish cow, calf, pigs, sheep, chickens, fruit trees, tools. We also furnish dynamite on credit for blasting stumps and rent you clearing and farming machinery. On this plan we require $500 down, with no further payments for five years.

2. Land without improvements, $25 down, $10 to $15 per month, or annual payments of $100 down and $120 per year on 40 acres. When $500 is paid we give you the benefits of Credit Plan in Sales Plan No. 1.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

Does not bother MR. WISCONSIN FARMER. He gets his potatoes, cabbages, tomatoes, onions, and other vegetables from his own back yard, his milk from the cows, his eggs from the chickens, and HIS PAY CHECK from the creamery every two weeks—not to speak of the oats, rye, timothy, clover, buckwheat, etc.—crops which are selling at RECORD PRICES.

OUR STOCK FARMS are REAL FARMS—some with, some without stock, with substantial bldgs.; 10 to 50 acres under cultivation; fences, well, etc. Prices $3,000 up; 1-5 down, ten years' time on the balance. Interest 6%. WE ARE OWNERS. We have 40s, 80s, 120s, and 160s.

We operate in TAYLOR, LINCOLN, LANGLADE, MARATHON, PRICE, AND CLARK COUNTIES in Wisconsin. Read the following written by WILLIAM T. EVJUE, Editor of the Capital Times, a leading daily in Madison, capital of Wisconsin.

"A visit to Lincoln County just now shows record breaking crops. Farmers this year have not the barn space in which to store the mammoth hay crop. Corn is in excellent shape. Farmers are prosperous. Many a lumberjack who twenty years ago had the sense to buy some land now has a farm worth from $15,000 to $35,000. Lincoln County has its head up and is confident of the future."

What Mr. Evjue says of Lincoln County is true also of the adjoining counties. There are 23 cheese factories in Taylor County alone. This is a section of good soil, with clay subsoil, very rich in nitrogen; many creeks and streams, good roads, excellent schools and churches, nearby markets, thrifty and hospitable neighbors.

Ask for FREE booklet, "Letters from Satisfied Customers." We have been operating in Wisconsin for more than forty years. Reference, Fort Dearborn National Bank or any bank in Wisconsin. No excursions. Our MEDFORD, WIS., and MERRILL, WIS., offices are open all the year round. R. R. fare refunded to buyers.

SEE FOR YOURSELF. Talk to the farmers. This is not a get-rich-quick proposition. Lots of hard work, but it is work for YOURSELF. WORK WINS on a WISCONSIN DAIRY FARM. Dairying is the big industry, but general farming is successfully carried on.

WE SOMETIMES TAKE IN DESIRABLE INCOME PRODUCING PROPERTY, NOT HEAVILY ENCUMBERED; ON PART PAYMENT, TAKING MORTGAGE BACK FOR BALANCE. We sell horses, cows, wagons, etc., on very liberal terms. Also help finance on bldg. material.

LABOR UNREST STILL CHIEF FACTOR IN REAL ESTATE

REALTY MARKET INFLUENCED BY STRIKE SITUATION

Only Slight Letup in Properties Suitable for Homes.

Despite the fact the week's real estate market reflected the depressing effect of the disturbed labor situation, particularly in the building trades, there was much doing of an important character, although there was an evident slowing up as compared with the previous week. Naturally this was most in evidence in those properties being purchased for purposes of improvement, although to a small extent only in those outlying sections where home building has been a particularly conspicuous feature. While larger projects, involving business and investment undertakings, moved more slowly, there seemed to be little letup in the movement of cheaper outside properties suitable for home purposes, such as bungalows, two flats, and cottages.

This is thought to be due to a considerable extent to the fact that many of these are being put up by owners, and are not included in the ban laid down by contractors and the unions.

Seek to Escape Rising Rents.

Another suggestion is that the continued activity in this field is to a considerable extent due to the desire not only to own a home, but also to escape the prospect of rapidly advancing flat rents throughout the entire city, as the result of the stoppage of building activities during the last two years.

With the rapid increase in the volume of building operations during the last three months, there was promise of sufficient flat construction by late fall, at least, to partly restore the equilibrium between supply and demand as regards these structures.

As it is now, unless the present labor trouble is quickly settled, the outlook is anything but encouraging to tenants as regards fall renting. Many leases are now being made, it is said, at 10 and 20 per cent increase, and even more, in some instances, if reports from some brokers' offices are to be credited.

May Stimulate Market.

The only consolation is that the greatly increased earnings of all classes of buildings, especially for residential purposes, will make them so attractive as investment propositions as greatly to stimulate the market for this class of property.

Transactions in manufacturing and outside business property constituted the feature of the week's market, and the showing was an excellent one as regards both classes of property. There also was an interesting theater lease in the downtown district and several good sized loans.

The most important of the manufacturing deals was the exercise of an option of purchase contained in a lease by which Albert Pick, president of Albert Pick & Co., manufacturers and dealers in hotel and restaurant equipment, acquired from John A. Spoor and A. G. Leonard, trustees of the Central Manufacturing district, the property now occupied by the company in the district, for a cash consideration of $800,000. This will be improved with a warehouse building to cost $400,000.

$100,000 Annual Rental.

The entire holding, including another building of 200,000 square feet, has been leased by Mr. Pick to the Albert Pick company for twenty-five years at an annual rental of $100,000. The transaction was negotiated by the Hool Realty company, H. E. Poronto representing the district. In connection with the transaction the First Trust and Savings bank has underwritten a serial bond issue of $800,000, three to fifteen years at 5½ per cent.

The property fronts 355 feet on the south branch, 300 on Thirty-fifth street and 340 on Racine avenue back to the Chicago Junction railway. The Pick company has occupied the property under lease with option to buy since 1911. The proposed new building will contain 200,000 square feet of floor space.

Roosevelt Road Deal.

In another important deal in manufacturing property, involving extensive improvements, the estate of Rockwell King will finance the construction of a building to be erected at the southwest corner of Roosevelt road and Talman avenue, and will sell both land and building to the Ellis Drier and Elevator company, in payments covering a period of ten years.

The land involved fronts 169 feet on Roosevelt road by 263 on Talman avenue, extending back to Twelfth place, and is the north half of a tract of switch track property which Mr. King acquired in 1901. It is across the street from the property purchased by the Simmons company from the Allis-Chalmers company about a year ago, and one block north of the new Sears, Roebuck & Co. warehouse, now in course of construction.

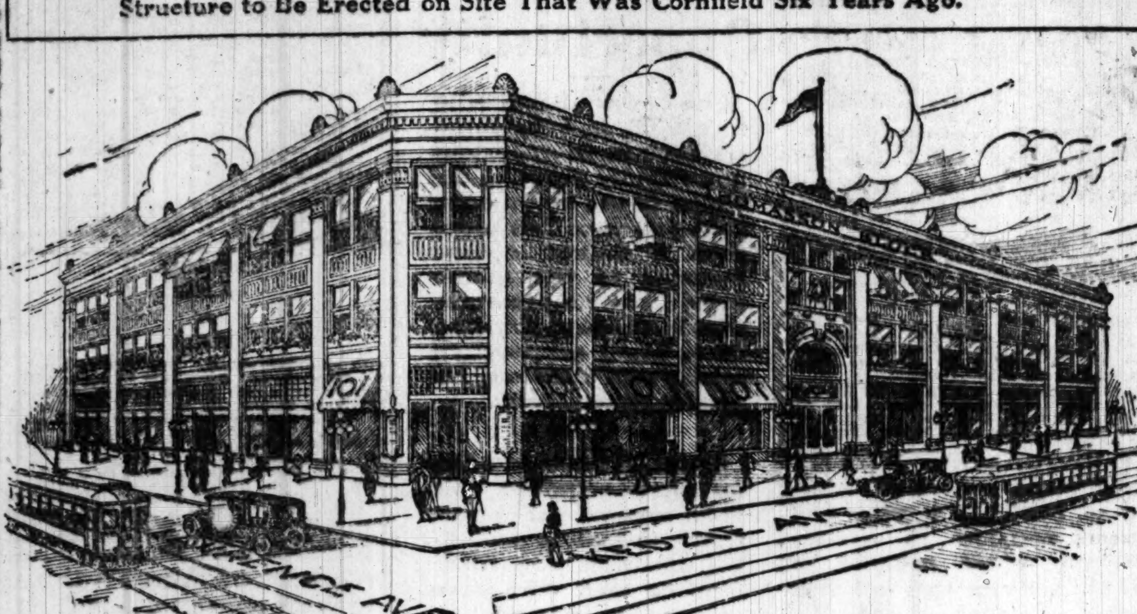
It is served by switch track from the Panhandle and Chicago and Northwestern roads. The building to be erected will cover approximately one-half of the lot, and will be constructed at once. It will be a modern, one story shop, to be used exclusively for the manufacture of driers. The consideration is not disclosed. The transaction will give the company a total of about 70,000 square feet on which to build its plant. Gilbert Scribner of Dibblee & Manierre negotiated the deal.

Downtown Corner Site Sought for Big Building

Negotiations are said to be in progress looking to the acquiring of the property at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Harrison street by William G. Shedd as the site for a twelve story building to be occupied as a film exchange. It will be 75x125 feet, ground dimensions, and is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $1,250,000. Charles W. James & Co. are the brokers.

NEW ALBANY PARK BUILDING

Structure to Be Erected on Site That Was Cornfield Six Years Ago.



101
KEDZIE AVE.
LAWRENCE AVE.

An interesting building development in the Albany Park district is in connection with three story store and office building, known as the Thomasson block at the northwest corner of Kedzie and Lawrence avenues. It is being erected by Col. Nelson Thomasson, a large owner and operator in that district, and, together with the land, will represent an investment of about $225,000. It will be 125x100 feet ground dimensions, and will contain nine large stores, thirty offices, a business college, and twenty bachelor apartments. It is interesting to note that the site of this building was a cornfield six years ago. Feltz & Brand are the architects. The same architects have just completed plans for the erection one block north of this corner of the Palais Royal theater, to cost about $400,000.

BUSINESS SITE DEALS FEATURE REALTY MARKET

$3,000 a Front Foot Is Paid for Northwest Side Property.

There was much activity in outside business property, the week's business including an unusual number of noteworthy transactions in which all sections of the city were represented except the downtown district.

The transfer of Milwaukee avenue frontage just east of Wieboldt's department store, near Mautene court, at the rate of about $3,000 a front foot, was an important feature. It was the sale by Nate Sugar to Ben and Ida Arkin of the property at 1263, lot 24x100 feet, with three story and basement building, on the north side of the street, opposite Mautene court, for a reported consideration of $75,000, subject to $25,000, the purchasers also giving back a purchase money mortgage for $20,000, payable in one and two years, at 6 per cent.

The purchasers conduct a millinery store adjoining, and after extensive improvements have been made in the building just acquired they will also occupy it with their business. Hugo Ash represented the seller and Sidney C. Edenberg the buyer.

Make 99 Year Lease.

There has been filed for record a 99 year lease of the property at the southwest corner of North Michigan and Austin avenues, which takes the place of a twenty-five year lease of the premises held by Ray C. Griswold and Wellington Walker, warehousemen, the lessor being the Union Trust company, trustees for William M. Hoyt et al.

The property fronts 83½ feet on Michigan avenue by 129 feet on Austin avenue, improved with a six story building. The new lease, which runs from July 1, 1919, provides for an annual rental of $12,500 for the first twenty years and $15,000 for the remaining years, with the privilege of extending for an additional ninety-nine years at an annual rental of $20,000. Capitalizing the rental for the first twenty years on a 5 per cent basis gives a leasing value of $250,000, or $3,000 a front foot.

It is understood the lessees plan to remodel the avenue front for store and office use.

Bank Buys Home Site.

According to the deed filed for record, the Madison and Kedzie State bank paid $150,000 for the vacant 100x125 feet at the northeast corner of Madison street and Kedzie avenue, the site of the bank's proposed new home.

The bank acquired the property from Harry M. Lubliner and Joseph Trinz, owners and operators of several large moving picture theaters, giving in part payment the present home of the bank at 3131 West Madison street for a stated cash consideration of $50,000. It is 266 feet west of Albany avenue, lot 41.7x99 feet, improved with a three story building.

Lubliner & Trinz had previously acquired from the estate of Byron L. Smith this parcel, as well as a plot 217x125 feet just to the east, for a total consideration of $257,500. This last named parcel, which has been conveyed to the Panacea Theater company, owned by Lubliner & Trinz, will be improved with a theater to cost around $500,000.

In connection with the construction of the theater the company has given a trust deed to Benjamin Culp, president of the Madison and Kedzie State bank, securing a loan of $400,000, payable July 1, 1926, at 6 per cent.

The building to be erected by the bank will be of the monumental type, and will, it is said, be the finest bank building outside of the central district. It is expected to cost about $300,000, and work will begin as soon as the plans are completed.

$145,000 Loan Obtained on Shoreham Apartments

Record has been made of the purchase by Mrs. Beulah V. Tagney from William Mitchell of the property at the southeast corner of Sheffield and Cornelia avenues, 151x124 feet, for a stated consideration of $32,500. Mrs. Tagney has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $145,000, five years at 6 per cent, in connection with the construction of the Shoreham apartments, to contain sixty apartments of three, four, and five rooms, to cost about $250,000.

Campaign of Education Needed.

The only real cure for the traction troubles that are now oppressing most of the large cities is in educating the public to the point of grasping the entire problem. Unfortunate investors in traction stocks and bonds—often called securities—are in a good position to begin the task.

Rapid transportation at low cost is a basic necessity to the continued existence of great cities, and the inhabitants of those cities must pay for it. Nobody else will foot the bills. For two years past the fares collected have been insufficient in many cases to cover costs and keep plants in good condition. As a result, dividends have stopped, stocks have become nearly worthless and bonds have depreciated. The public has been riding at the expense of investors. Now employés are demanding higher wages and there is nothing with which to pay them.

For the cities to operate the plants would be no solution. All experience in the United States shows that government operation is more costly than private management. The cost of carrying a passenger would certainly be greater under such a plan, and if the passenger did not pay it the taxpayers would be called on to make up the deficit. There is a common impression that this load would rest on the taxpayers, but this is a fundamental error. The burden would be passed on in the form of higher rents for apartments and rooms, higher restaurant prices and higher everything, and the lowest paid employé in the loop would have to bear part of the load, even if he walked to save car fare. The people must pay for their transportation, and the ultimate cost will be less if those who get it pay when and as they use it.

The idea that stockholders can be forced to advance more money is foolish. They have already lost part of their investments, and will not throw good money after bad. Unless they are treated fairly, the traction investor soon will become extinct.

Metropolitan Stores.

A. S., Rockford, Ill.—The Metropolitan 5 to 50 Cent Stores balance sheet of May 31 last shows $2,046,583 of preferred stock outstanding and $4,009,750 common. Net tangible assets are shown at $3,141,266. A profit and loss account from Jan. 1 to May 31 shows earnings of $117,567 after interest. This is about double the preferred dividend. Since the statement was prepared the company has absorbed the Gerge Kraft company, increasing the number of its stores to 114. The showing is much better than that made in the report of a year previous. The preferred stock is not yet seasoned, and the common is a speculation. The company apparently has capable management.

Penn Seaboard Steel.

L. C. W.—The Penn Seaboard Steel corporation is a consolidation formed in December, 1915. It issued 60,000 shares of no par stock. An initial quarterly dividend of $1 with 25 cents extra was paid May 1, 1916. Quarterly payments of $1 each continued till Nov. 1 last. Extras amounting to $1 were paid in 1918. Last February $1.50 a share was paid, and nothing since. Only incomplete information is available.

Brief Answers.

J. U., Peru, Ind.—There have been reports recently that the Denver and Rio Grande and Western Pacific companies are reaching a compromise by which the $36,903,509 claim of the latter can be adjusted. This is the cause of the advance in Denver and Rio Grande preferred stock.

J. Y., Creston, Ia.—The first Liberty loan 3½ per cents cannot be converted to victory loan bonds.

Building Permits

Five building permits were issued yesterday. Those in excess of $5,000 are:

55th-st., W., 5300, one story school; Rev. T. Bona, owner; Arthur Foster, arch.; Anderson & Wudblack, mason .... $ 5,000

Western-av., S., 4052-53-58, two story brick store and flats; P. Contes, owner; Worthman & Steinbach, arch.; William & Grag, mason; Anton Ziegler, carpenter .... $ 20,000

WEEK HAS DROP IN APARTMENT PROPERTY DEALS

Small Transfers Are Numerous; Large Ones Few.

While there was in the aggregate a fairly large movement of apartment property, there were fewer large transactions than during the last few weeks.

Archie Macfarlane conveyed to John W. Dunklau the thirty apartment building of four and five rooms at the northwest corner of Howard and Ashland avenues for a reported consideration of $130,000, subject to an incumbrance of $90,000. The building is known as the Howard Manor apartments, and is said to have a gross annual rental of about $16,500.

$300,000 Deal Listed.

The apartment property at the southeast corner of Franklin boulevard and Trumbull avenue, with 50x150 feet of ground, has been conveyed by Ella Louise Mahin to George R. Bennett for an indicated consideration of $62,000, subject to $32,000.

In connection with the recent sale by Richard Curran to Meyer Wheeler of the Sterling apartments, on Sheridan road between Airdrie and Crescent places, for a reported $300,000, Mr. Wheeler has conveyed to Richard Curran Jr. the four story apartment building on 50x111 feet of ground at the northwest corner of Forty-seventh street and Woodlawn avenue, for a stated consideration of $60,000.

Fifteen Apartment Block Sold.

The eighteen apartment building at the southeast corner of Logan boulevard and California avenue, lot 72.9x160½ feet to Malden street, has been conveyed by Kathryn M. Haskell and husband, George S., to John S. Holmes for an indicated consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the residence property in Prairie avenue 220 feet north of Eighteenth street, lot 50x177 feet, east front, for an indicated consideration of $20,000.

The fifteen apartment building of five and six rooms, on 62x150 feet of ground, at the southwest corner of Halsted street and Bradley place, has been sold by Alexander W. Hannah to John W. Brewis for an indicated consideration of $33,000, subject to an incumbrance of $16,000. In part payment Mr. Brewis conveyed the property at 3326 North Clark street, improved with a building containing seven flats and store, at a valuation of $18,000, subject to $9,000. A. Trestler represented both parties.

Flat Deals Reported.

The flat property at the southwest corner of Pine Grove and Waveland avenues, with 54x99 feet of ground, has been conveyed by O. C. Hagen to Frank Falwell, for an indicated consideration of $29,500, subject to $17,500.

Albert C. Houlf has purchased through the Hool Realty company from James A. Hool, the fourteen flat building at 1617 North Wells street, lot 33x125 feet, for a reported consideration of $32,000, subject to $15,000 incumbrance.

The flat property in Wabash avenue 148 feet north of Fifty-sixth street, lot 75x161 feet, west front, has been conveyed by Marcel Burdzinski to Kurst A. Niedbalska for an indicated $30,000, subject to $15,000.

The same brokers report the sale for George E. Wentworth to William Carter of the four story flat building on 50x120 feet of ground at 5415-17 Cottage Grove avenue for a reported cash consideration of $15,000, subject to $8,000.

Record Purchase of Site for $300,000 Warehouse

A transaction involving the construction of a warehouse to cost around $300,000, on Sangamon and Morgan streets, 475 feet south of Fourteenth place, has been made a matter of record. It was the purchase by Griswold & Walker, warehousemen, from Charles D. Clark of the property comprising 100 feet frontage on Morgan and Sangamon streets, 214 feet deep between the two, for an indicated consideration of $82,000. Plans are being completed for a reinforced concrete warehouse, seven stories high, to cost about $500,000. The purchasers own and operate a number of warehouses in various parts of the city.

WEBSTER HOTEL COMPANY FLOATS $400,000 LOAN

Playhouse Theater Is Taken Over by Movie Men.

There were several notable transactions in both leases and loans reported during the week, the showing being the best for some time.

In an interesting transaction in the downtown district, Oliver & Co., real estate, have leased the space on the bank floor of the Real Estate Exchange building occupied by them at the southwest corner of Dearborn and Washington streets, to the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, Ltd., for ten years from Aug. 1 at an annual rental of $6,300. The lessee is the steamship line of the Canadian Pacific railroad, operating fifteen steamships in the Atlantic service and four in the Pacific, with two new boats in course of construction for service in the Orient.

Their present offices are on the ground floor of the Merchants Loan and Trust building.

Oliver & Co. have secured new quarters in the Bedford building at the southeast corner of Dearborn and Adams streets, where they will be after Aug. 1.

Playhouse Theater Leased.

A theater lease in the downtown district was closed covering the Playhouse theater at 410-18 South Michigan avenue, in the Fine Arts building, which has been leased by Mrs. Emily G. Chapin, Homer C. Chapin et al., trustees of the Charles A Chapin estate, to Archie G. Spencer of the Metro Pictures corporation. It will be occupied for the exhibition of high class motion pictures, the terms of the lease not being disclosed. Seymour Marks was the broker.

$400,000 Loan Recorded.

There was filed for record a trust deed given by the Webster Hotel company to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, to secure a loan of $400,000, due Nov. 1, 1927, at 6 per cent. It is on the Webster apartment hotel, now in course of construction at the southwest corner of Lincoln Park West and Webster avenue. It is to be a sixteen story structure on 120x126 feet of ground, and is subject to a prior incumbrance of $1,500,000.

Industrial Plants Leased.

Hart & Whetston have leased for John F. Gubbins to the Western Bag and Burlap company the three story building at 2435-43 West Fourteenth street, containing 40,000 square feet of flor space, for a period of six years, at a term rental of $48,000. It is a heavy mill building, with switch track connections with the Chicago and Northwestern road.

The same brokers have leased for Griswold & Walker to the Pioneer Metal company the three story building being rebuilt at 1528-36 South Halsted street for ten years at term rental of $50,000. The property is served by a Chicago and Northwestern private switch.

The store at 115 West Madison street has been leased by Mark Levy & Bro. for Thomas Hunter to Benjamin Miller at an annual rental of $6,200, to be used for a men's furnishing goods store.

SEVERAL DEALS IN STORES AND FLATS RECORDED

In addition to sales of business property noted elsewhere, the following interesting transactions were reported:

The property at the southwest corner of Halsted and Lake streets, 100 feet on Halsted by 50 on Lake, improved with six one story store buildings, has been purchased by Samuel Kohn from Abraham Bernstein for a reported consideration of $46,000. Mr. Bernstein acquired the property in 1910 through George S. Lurie for $38,500. Benjamin Rosenberg & Co. were the brokers in the present transaction, and Mr. Cohn conveyed in part payment the two flat building [illegible] 230 Michigan avenue at $20,000.

The property at the southwest corner of Forty-seventh street and Evans avenue, lot 128x125 feet, improved with row of six one story stores, has been sold by William Herbert Johnson of Glencoe to Louis D. Schmidt for a reported $38,000, subject to $15,000, the seller taking in part payment the property in Ashland avenue, just north of Sixty-third street, 50x125, with a three story store and flat building at a reported $31,000, subject to $13,000. William H. Mulholand & Co. were the brokers.

Record was made of the purchase by the American Cereal Coffee company from the estate of M. Herely of the property in Chicago avenue, 125 feet west of Franklin street, north front, 75x130 feet, with two and three story buildings, for a stated consideration of $67,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000. The company has been occupying the property for some time.

NEW CAR WHEEL COMPANY PLANS HAMMOND PLANT

Buys Twenty-seven and One-half Acre Site.

The Liberty Car Wheel company of Indiana, a new concern, said to be backed financially by Chicago and Hammond men, is about to establish a new plant on twenty-seven and one-half acres in Hammond, just north of the Illinois Car and Equipment company plant, purchased from the East Chicago company for a reported consideration of $27,000. The tract has both Indiana Harbor Belt and Pennsylvania railroad frontage, and preliminary work has begun on the construction of a plant to cost several hundred thousand dollars. The company manufactures cast iron wheels under a new and improved process.

Will Employ 500.

Among those behind the new concern are P. H. Joyce, president of the Illinois Car and Equipment company, the Steel Car company of Cleveland and the Illinois Nut and Bolt company; F. O. Bunnell, formerly vice president of the Southern Wheel company of St. Louis; Peter W. Meyn, president of the Lake County Savings and Trust bank of Hammond; John E. Fitzgerald, vice president First National bank of Hammond; and Bryan Tighe, vice president Bicket Coal company, etc. It is expected the new plant will give employment to 500 persons. The sale of the land was negotiated by Gostlin, Meyn & Hastings of Hammond. C. A. Westberg, vice president of the East Chicago company, represented the seller.

West Side Sale.

The Northern Trust company, trustee under deed in trust from Harriet B. Bosley, has sold to the American Parlor Furniture company the property now occupied by the company at the southeast corner of North Lincoln street and Austin avenue for a reported consideration of $30,000. The lot is 125x133 feet and is improved with a three story building. It is stated the company contemplates the erection early in the fall of another building in order to meet its business needs. Levinson & Hoffman attended to the legal details for the company.

NORTHWESTERN 'U' AFTER SITE FOR BUILDINGS

An important development in the near north side district is the announcement that the Northwestern university has nearly completed negotiations for the tract bounded by Chicago avenue and Superior street from Fairbanks court to the lake. The property is being acquired from Arthur L. Farwell of the John V. Farwell company, and will house the down town departments of the university. It is said the plans contemplate the removal of the law, dental, pharmaceutical and commerce departments of the university, now housed in the old Tremont house property at the southeast corner of Dearborn and Lake streets.

The site in question is nearly two blocks long east and west and was occupied by the tabernacle used during the Billy Sunday campaign here. The negotiations are being conducted by the Bowes Realty company.

BUILDING MATERIAL.

SAVE 40% ON LUMBER
I have purchased 700 cars of slightly used yellow pine lumber from the cantonment at Macon, Ga., which I will sell, in carload lots, at the extremely low price of $32.50 PER THOUSAND FT.
f. o. b. your own shipping point. Cars run from 15,000 to 17,000 feet.
This lumber is sound, practically free from nails, ends are squared, and no split boards are loaded. It is of three classes.
Class one—Solid cars of boards running from 6 to 18 feet in length, and from 4 to 12 inches wide; not more than 5% will be less than 8 feet long and very little less than 6 inches wide. All S2S.
Class two—Solid cars 2x4 from 8 to 18 feet long, not more than 5% below 8 feet. All S4S.
Class three—Mixed dimension or framing lumber, mostly 2x4, but there can be mixed with it some heavier dimension, such as 2x6, 2x8, 2x10, and 4x4. None of heavier dimension is less than 8 feet long. All S4S.
In every case a full car must be ordered, but cars may be divided between two or all of the above classes.
Terms—$100 cash with order, and balance sight draft attached to bill of lading.

Directions for Cutting Out the Bride and Her Trousseau

Mount the doll on heavy paper—an old magazine cover will do nicely—when dry trim off the black lines around the doll; cut into the double lines on the bases to make locks, and into the double lines on body to make slits into which the fastening tabs of the dresses fit. Fold over directly on the dotted lines at the top of the head and the dotted lines at the feet in opposite directions. Bring the bases together and slide the locks from one side into the locks on the opposite side. The doll will then stand alone.

It will not be necessary to mount the dresses, etc., but cut into the slits of the dresses; fold directly on the dotted lines and fit the fastening tabs into the slits. Dolly's clothes are put on and taken off like real dresses, they fit on tightly and will not drop off; and just think! you will have backs to all the dresses as well as fronts, and Dolly herself will stand up straight without any unsightly easel. Next week a Stenographer Doll with complete wardrobe will appear on this page.

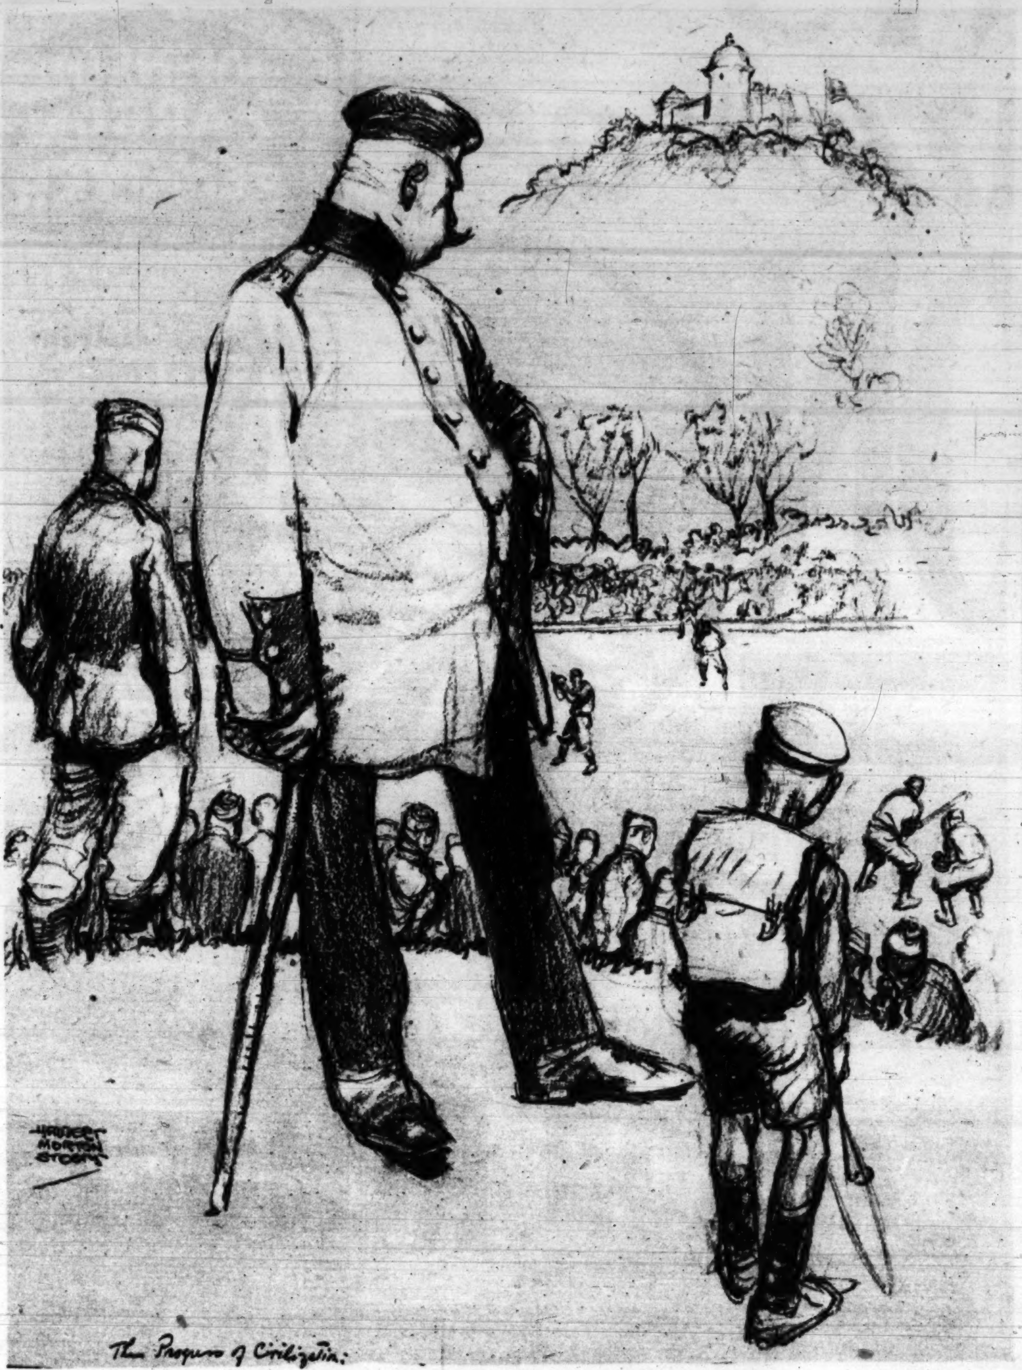
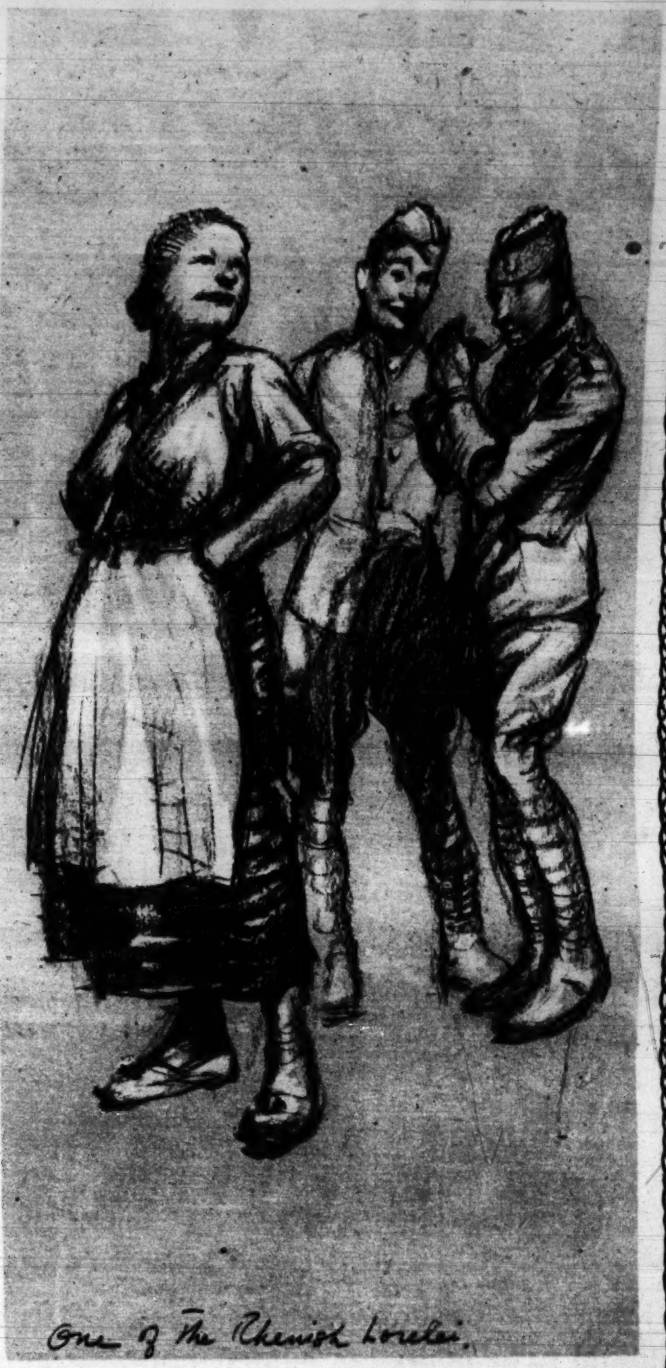
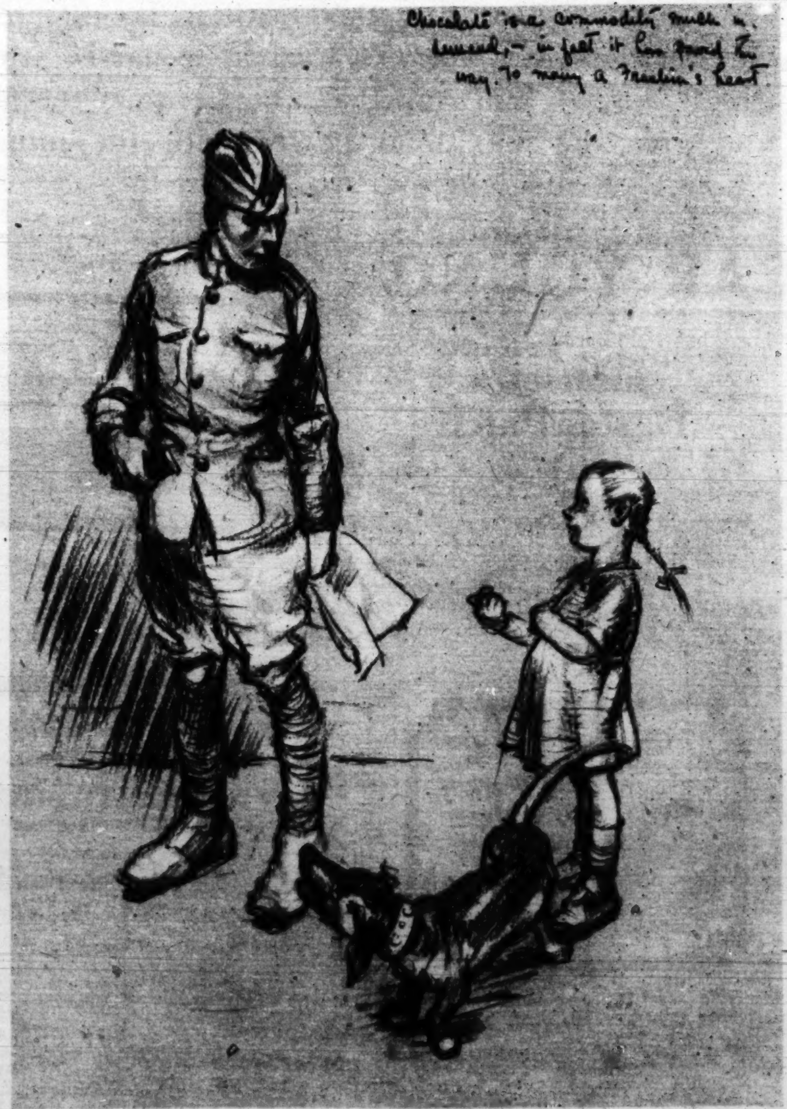
A "TRIBUNE" ARTIST IN THE RHINELAND



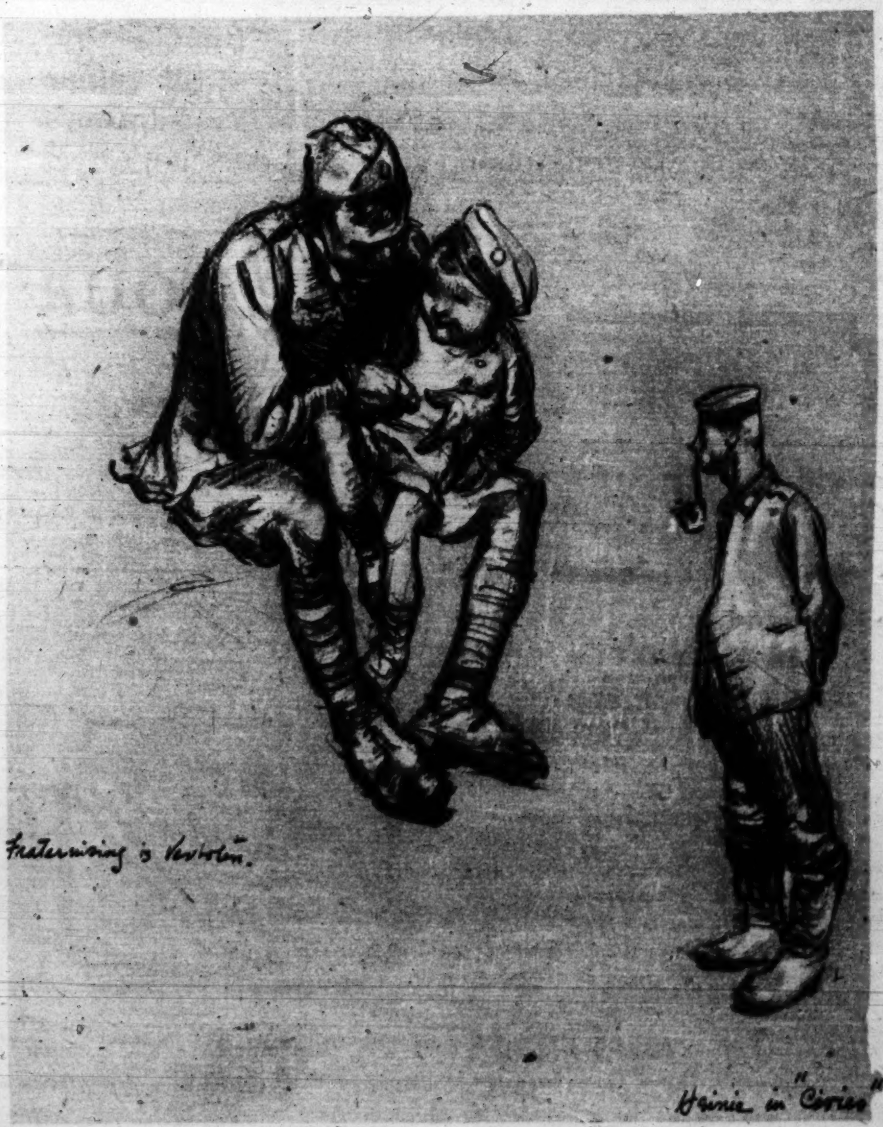
The Progress of Civilization.



One of The Rhenish Lorelei.



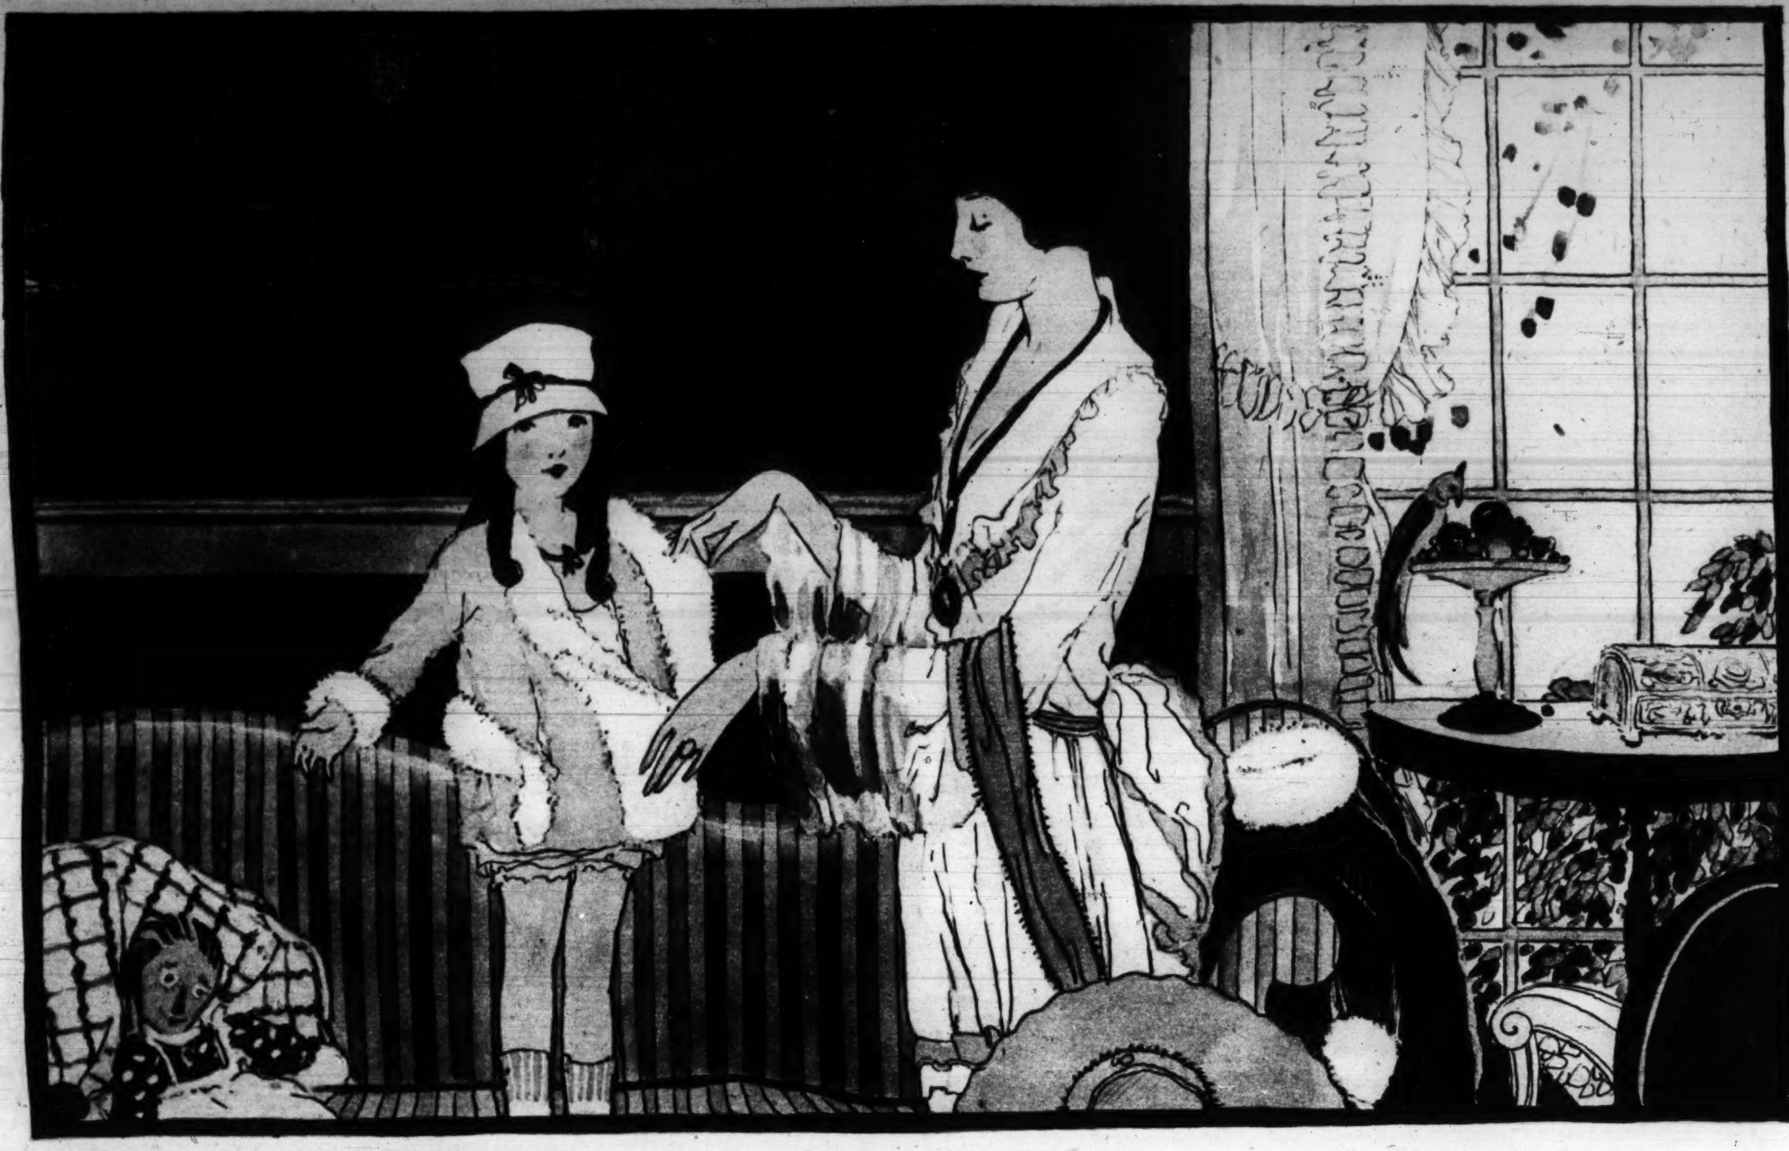
Chocolate is a commodity much in demand,—in fact it has found the way to many a Fraulein's heart



Fraternizing is verboten.

Heinie in "Civies"

The mere fact that the war is over hasn't interrupted the series of sketches with which Lieut. Herbert Morton Stoops of "The Tribune's" art department has recorded his observations as an artillery officer in the A. E. F. Here are some notes on human nature as the "Amaroc" sees it in occupied Germany.



Soft, shapely, unshrunken!

How to make your precious sweaters stay new

YOU used to watch your sweater get soiled, with a wry smile. What could you do to bring it back to life? There was the laundress. But she would ruin it the very first time she washed it. The cleaner's? That way seemed such an inexcusable expense.

But now. You can wash your sweater yourself—in rich Lux suds—and it won't shrink! Won't lose its shape! Will come out just as soft and shapely as the day you bought it.

Sweaters should never be rubbed. Wool fibre is the most sensitive fibre there is. When you twist wool or rub it, it becomes stiff, matted and shrunken. You simply don't dare trust it to ordinary soap.

But Lux comes in pure delicate flakes that dissolve instantly in hot water. In a moment you whisk them up into a rich, foamy lather.

With Lux, there is not a tiny particle of solid soap to stick to the soft woolen and injure it. Not a bit of rubbing to mat and shrink the delicate fibres. You simply dip your sweater up and down in the rich Lux lather—squeeze the suds through the soiled parts—and take it out again so soft and fresh and fluffy you can't believe it has been washed.

Wash your sweater this year the gentle Lux way. Have it stay new all summer long. Lux won't hurt anything pure water alone won't injure. Your grocer, druggist or department store has Lux. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

USE LUX FOR ALL THESE

No suds so wonderful as Lux for dainty things

TO WASH COLORED SWEATERS

Whisk Lux into a rich lather in very hot water—two tablespoonfuls to the gallon. Add cold water to make the suds lukewarm. Swish your sweater about in suds. Wash quickly, pressing the suds through the sweater, but do not rub. Rinse three times in lukewarm water. Dissolve a little Lux in the last rinsing to leave your sweater soft and woolly. Never wring sweaters. Squeeze the water out, and spread on a towel to dry in the shade.

LUX

IF YOU ARE NOT SURE A COLOR IS FAST

If you are not sure a color is fast, first wash a sample and dry it. If the color runs, try to set it in the following way, first testing a bit of the fabric: A half cup full of vinegar to a gallon of cold water may be used to set most colors of sweaters. Soak the article, then rinse thoroughly before washing it. After washing, add vinegar to the last rinsing to hold the color. Always wash colors as quickly as possible.

Lux won't cause any color to run which pure water alone will not cause to run.

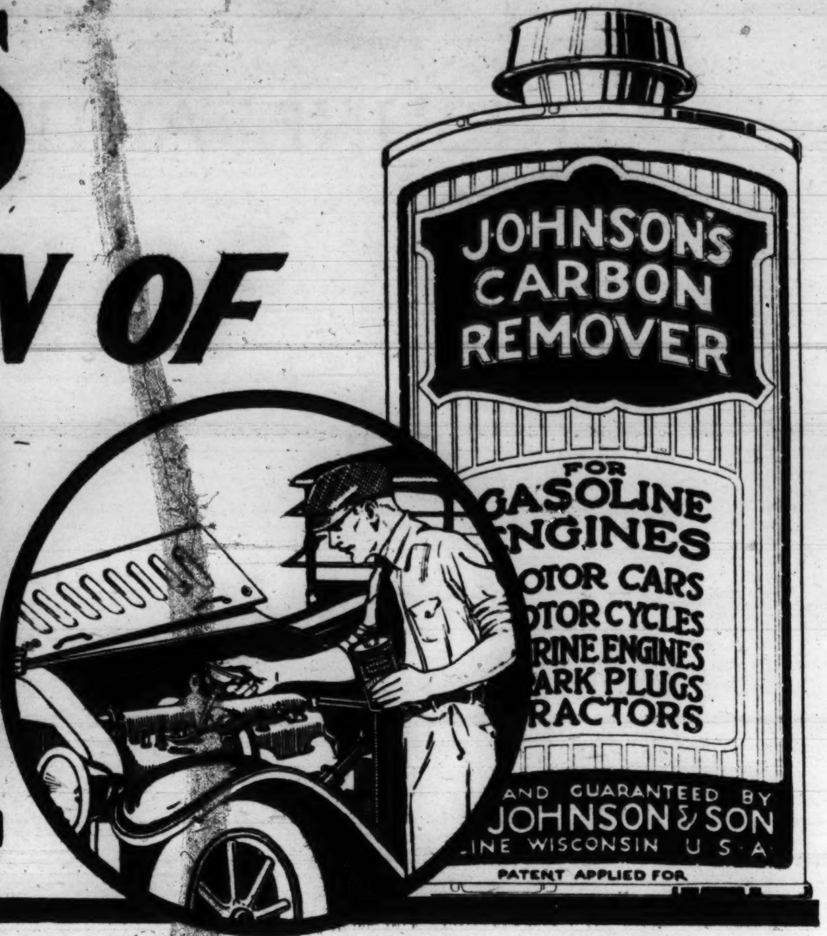
PREVENTS ACCUMULATION OF CARBON



YOU can keep your motor snappy and full of "pep" by preventing the accumulation of carbon. Don't wait until your engine is choked and caked with it. Use Johnson's Carbon Remover every 500 miles, then the carbon is removed while it is soft and powdery, eliminating the frequent grinding of valves and keeping the motor always clean. No experience or labor required—you can easily do it yourself in ten minutes–and the cost is trifling.

JOHNSON'S CARBON REMOVER

Johnson's Carbon Remover is a perfectly harmless liquid to be poured or squirted into the cylinders. Millions of cans have been used with satisfaction. It simply softens the carbon, then the heat from the engine pulverizes it and it is blown out the exhaust. Johnson's Carbon Remover contains no acids and does not affect lubrication.

It is the easiest, cleanest, safest and most satisfactory remedy for carbon. It will save you from $3.00 to $5.00 over any other method without laying up your car. A dose of Johnson's Carbon Remover—the engine laxative—will stop that knock—quiet the motor, and give the maximum power with the minimum amount of fuel.

KEEP YOUR CAR YOUNG

Johnson's Radiator Cement

will stop leaks immediately without laying up the car—no mechanical experience required. It contains nothing which can clog or coat the cooling system and is absolutely harmless in every respect. It isn't a makeshift—it's a permanent repair. It will ordinarily seal a leak in from two to ten minutes. A half pint is sufficient for a Ford or other small radiator.

Johnson's Black-Lac

Here is a preparation with which you can make your gray, dusty top and side curtains look like new. Johnson's Black-Lac is unequaled for blackening fenders, rims, hoods, lamps—and in fact, all worn metal parts. Prevents rust and keeps your car in a high state of repair.

Johnson's Hastee Patch

This is the ideal repair for tubes, casings and rubber goods of all kinds. No time, labor or heat required. A Patch can be applied in three minutes, and it's so simple a child can use it. Gives equally good results on a pin hole puncture or on a large blowout. Conveniently put up in strips.

More Mileage for Tubes and Casings

Johnson's Valve Grinding Compound

Best by test for grinding all kinds of valves. Contains no glass, emery or grit. Made in two grades—the coarse for roughening and the fine for finishing. Put up in lithographed Duplex cans containing 2 ozs. each of the fine and coarse. Use Johnson's Valve Grinding Compound for all kinds of surfacing and polishing.

Drive around to our service station at 113 E. Superior Street (Chicago) and get an estimate on having the finish of your car put in perfect condition without revarnishing—simply with the use of Johnson's Cleaner and Johnson's Prepared Wax. Phone Superior 6516.

ESTABLISHED 1882

JUNE ELVIDGE (Mrs. Lieut. Frank Badgely) after graduating from college started out to be a concert singer. But somebody from the Winter Garden saw her and nipped this little ambition in the bud by persuading her to join "The Passing Show of 1914."

So charming was she on the stage that the World company thought it would be a good little thing for them to secure her services for their pictures. So they set about it in the well-known monetarily seductive manner with the result that Miss Elvidge went to them—and stayed with them. Her address is still: World, Fort Lee.

In appearance Miss Elvidge is charming. Rather lissome—she doesn't run to stays—but she must have a care on that score. She has brown hair and eyes, is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 135 pounds and was born in St. Paul, Minn., 1893.

WILLIAM DESMOND is an Irishman, —born in Dublin. He received his education in New York, however, and there, I hear, started his histrionic career in "Quo Vadis." Several other productions boasted his name in their cast. Then he deserted for the screen, starting with Triangle. Jesse D. Hampton is featuring him now.

Some of the pictures you may have liked the best have been "Deuce Duncan," "The Prodigal Liar," and "A Romance in Overhalls."

Mr. Desmond boasts that he not only wrestles, boxes, rides, and rows, but that he is the author of three vaudeville sketches. He's 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs 170 pounds and has black hair and blue eyes. (Regular Irish beauty, girls!)

THE R-34 IN AMERICA—Making the first trans-Atlantic round trip by air proved a comparatively humdrum matter for the crew of the great British dirigible; it was their brief stay in this country that gave them their thrills. Just before this photograph was taken at Roosevelt Field, Mineola, the ship, with no hangar to hide in, had been torn from its moorings and nearly blown away. One adventurous American officer did his bit in the rescue by climbing on top of the huge gas bag. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

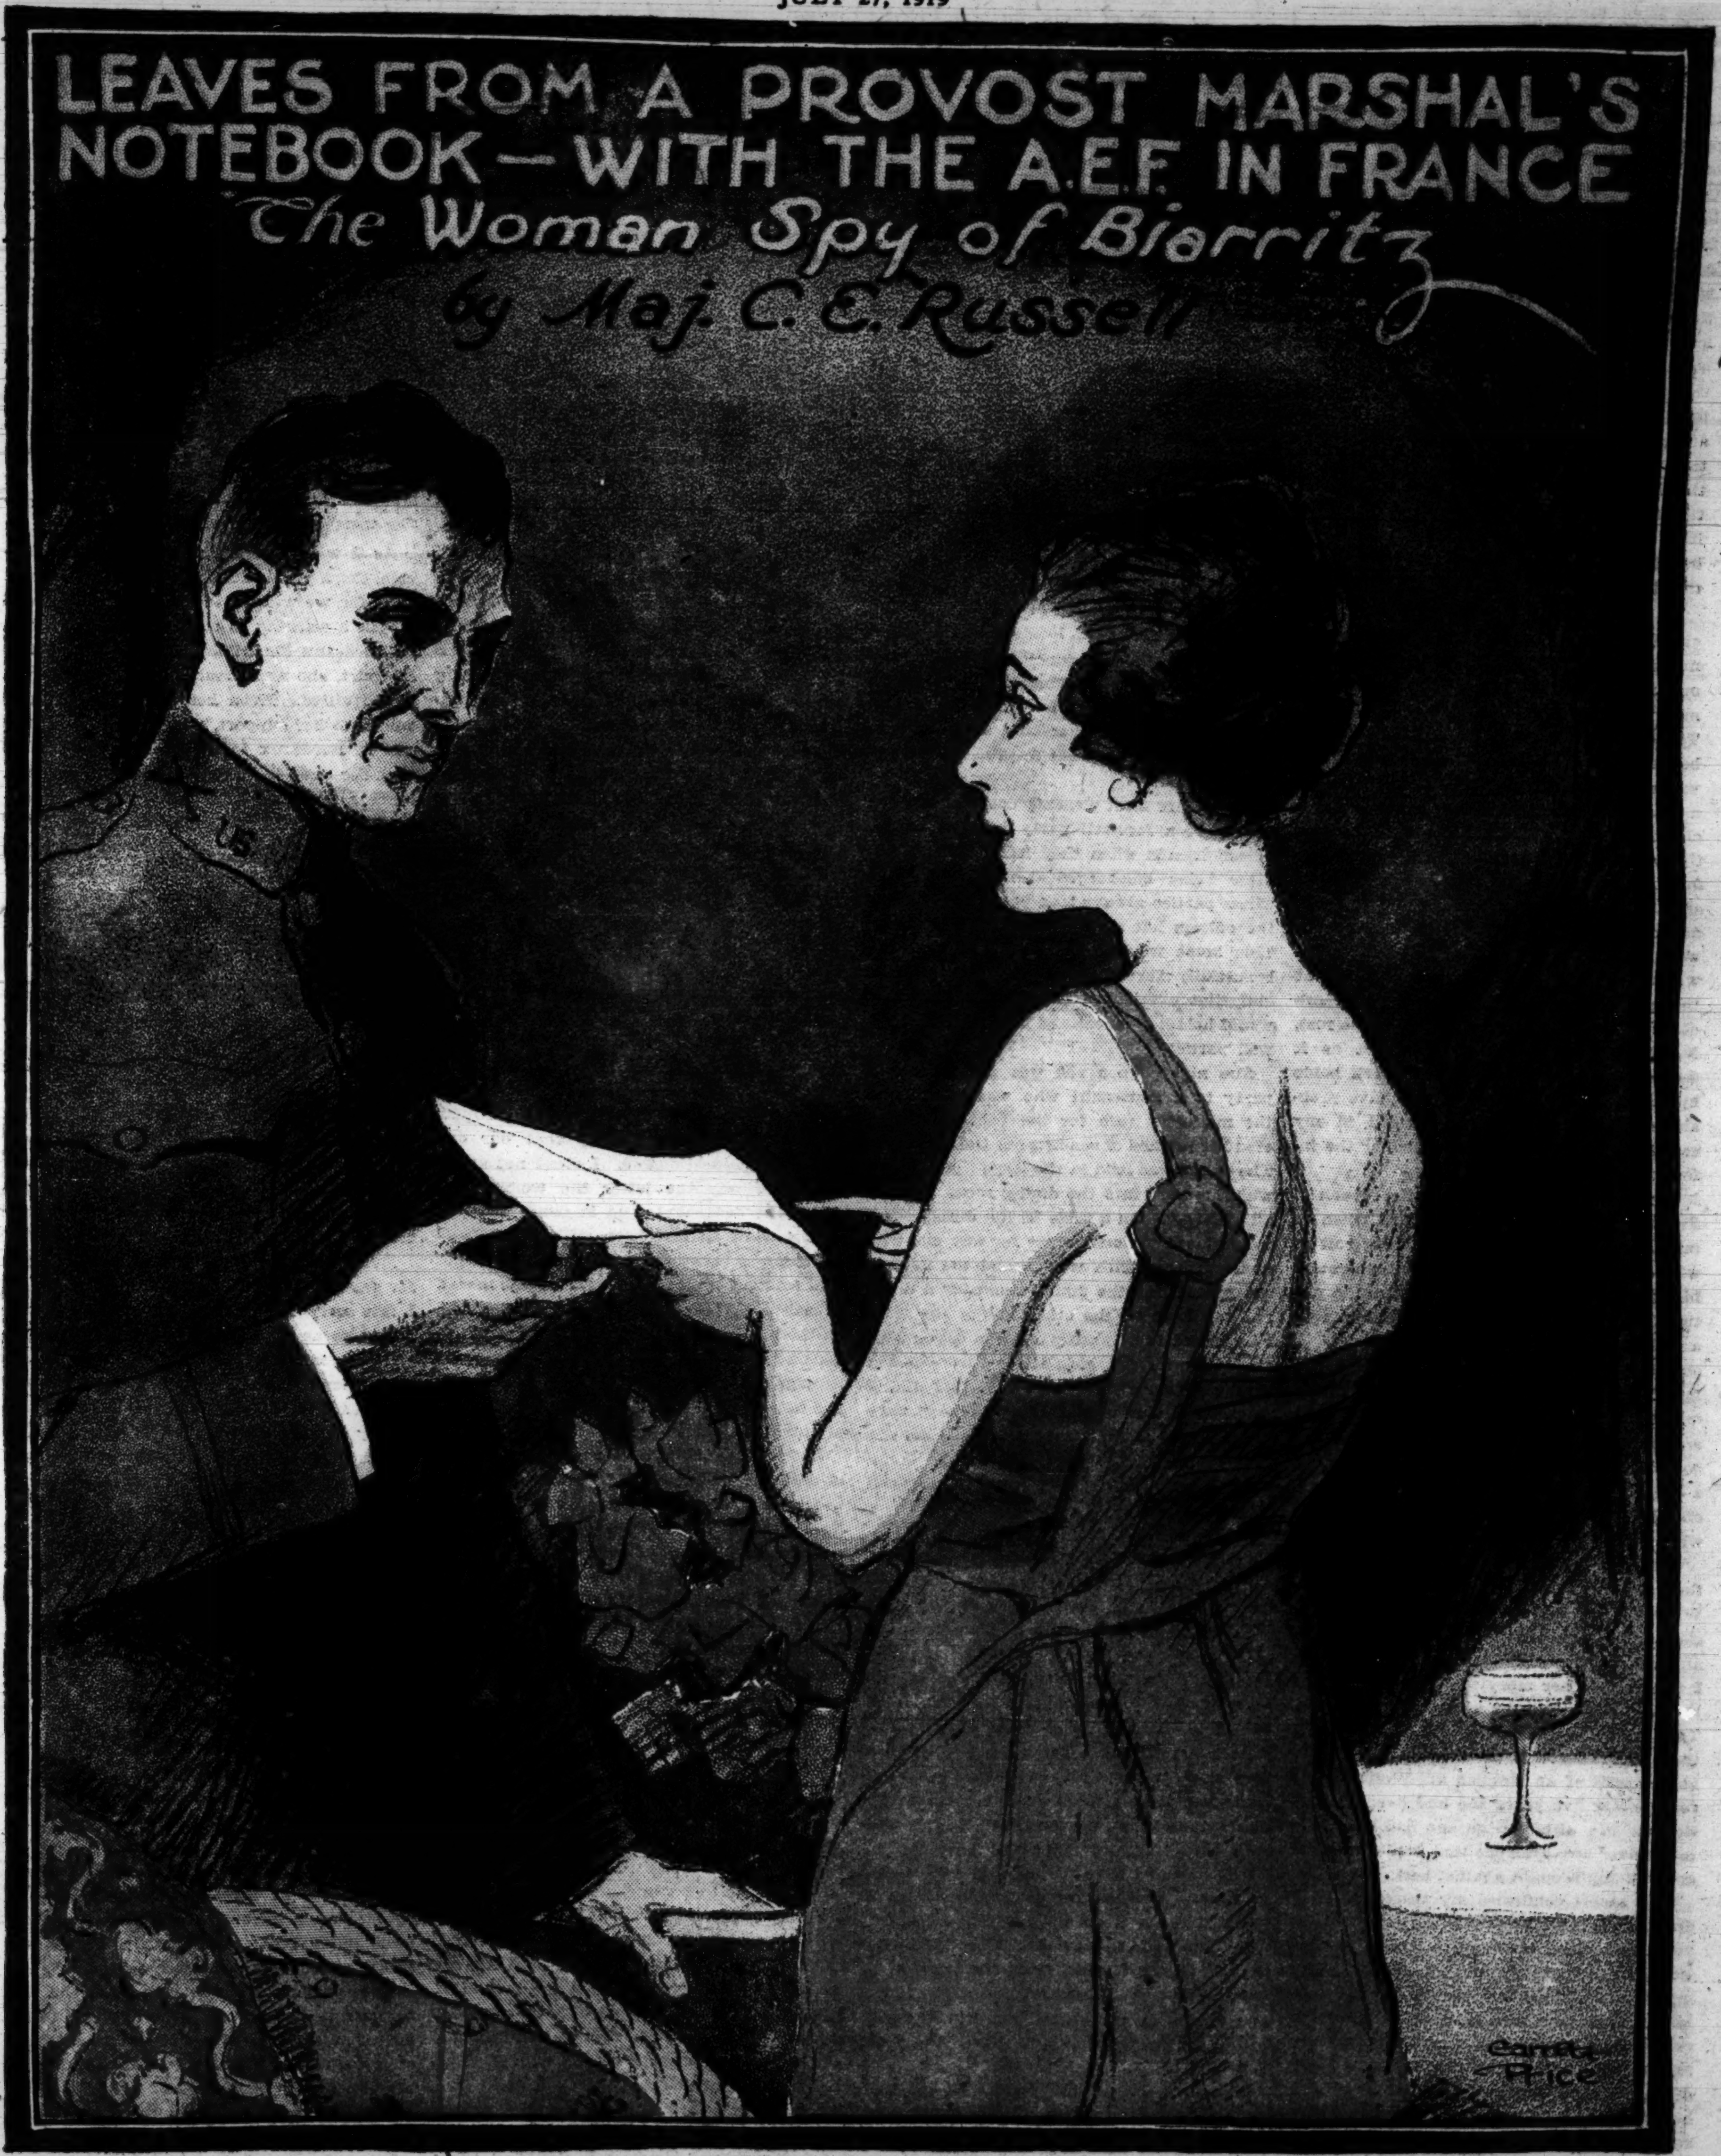
LEAVES FROM A PROVOST MARSHAL'S NOTEBOOK—WITH THE A.E.F. IN FRANCE

The Woman Spy of Biarritz

by Maj. C. E. Russell



AT Biarritz, Bolo Pasha, the noted French renegade, had his summer home, and here, doubtless, were formulated many of his plans and schemes for which he was shot. About the time he was executed, the American Red Cross hired one of the largest summer hotels here as a convalescent hospital for the sick and wounded American officers from the front. Many of our officers were sent here for treatment, although the American intelligence service protested against it, believing that it was not the proper place.

During the entire period of the war, the southwestern part of France that bordered upon the Spanish frontier was infested with German spies; and San Sebastian, a noted hotbed of German intelligence operatives, was only eighteen miles from Biarritz. As soon as it was known that the Americans were coming to Biarritz, these people flocked to the town. Many were caught and deported, and all Americans were warned not to enter into conversation with strangers.

It was not easy, however, for our men so far away from their homes and womenfolk to resist talking to some one, especially if that some one was sympathetic and interested in hearing all about the fight and how the wound was received. This was particularly true if the listener happened to be a charming Englishwoman whose husband was at that moment fighting in Flanders. Surely no one would think of telling their experiences to a stranger, but was not this woman one of our allies, a leader of the en

THE INDIAN GOES AFTER BIG GAME. by WM. DONAHEY.

NOT far from the shoe house there was quite a large pond. An old board stuck out of the water and one end of it rested on the bank. On warm, pleasant days an old turtle would crawl up out of the water and sun himself on the board. The Indian, who was always prowling about in quiet places, saw the turtle one day and he made up his mind to capture it.

"Sir," said the Indian one day as he approached the General, "me know where me can capture big turtle."

"Well, what on earth would we do with a turtle?" laughed the General.

"Him heap fine to pull wagons," answered the Indian.

"Yes, of course he could pull a wagon, but it would take a year to go any distance, for a turtle is as slow as the day before Christmas."

"Him can pull plow when we make garden," argued the Indian.

"S-s-s-say!" shouted the Dunce, who had been interested in the conversation. "Let's catch that turtle and start a z-z-zoo-a-goshical g-g-garden."

"You mean a zoological garden, a place to keep animals," laughed the Doctor. "I think that is a very good idea, and we could train the turtle to carry the children on its back just as the elephant carries the big children."

"Well, if you can catch the turtle without hurting it and treat it well after you catch it, I don't see but what it would be a pretty good plan," said the General.

That afternoon the Indian led the Teenie Weenies down to the pond where they hid in the long grass near the bank.

"Now everybody keep heap quiet," grunted the Indian, "or turtle him won't come out on log."

After a long wait the turtle suddenly stuck his head up out near the board and presently he crawled up and lay very quiet.

Taking one end of a long rope the Indian quietly climbed onto the board and sneaked up behind the turtle. With a small stick he tickled the hind leg of the turtle until it lifted its foot off the board and then slipping the noose, which was on the end of the rope, over the turtle's foot he gave it a mighty jerk and jumped off the board.

The turtle leaped for the water when he felt the rope tighten around his leg, but he was held tight, for several of the strongest Teenie Weenies hung on to the other end of the rope.

The little men quickly tied the rope around a tree while the Indian soon managed to lasso the turtle's front legs and in a short time they had him securely bound. It took a great deal of work to get the turtle home and it was nearly dark before the little people had finished the task.

The turtle was put into an old can for the night and the next morning the Teenie Weenies brought out their strongest derrick and hoisted him into an old bucket where he was to live until a better place could be built. Water had to be put into the bucket so the turtle could be comfortable and it took the little people all day to do the work, for it required nine hundred and seventy thimbles full.

"Much fun huntin' big game," grunted the Indian when the turtle had been lifted into the bucket. "Heap much more fun than huntin' grass hoppers."

This is the first of a series of short stories by Maj. C. E. Russell, a provost marshal with the A. E. F. in France.

Maj. Russell was commissioned as captain and called to active service in 1917. He was soon promoted to major and was ordered overseas as commanding officer of a telegraph battalion. Early in 1918 he was transferred to the provost marshal's department and later was made a provost marshal and ordered to Bordeaux. On October 10, 1918, he was appointed provost marshal of the Second Army. Owing to an attack of pneumonia he was ordered to the United States in December, 1918. He was discharged from the service last January.

Each one of these stories is based on actual experience of the major's while in France and throws a light upon the side of the service which is so little understood.

tertainments given for our benefit, and didn't she join us in our swims and hold open house on the beach where we could get cigarets and a drink? "A spy? Most certainly not!" This is the reply you would have received, no doubt, if you had attempted to question the wisdom of talking to this woman. Some of our officers were so sure of her that they would even have gone so far as to have offered to fight you for questioning this woman's loyalty.

Such was the situation in Biarritz when I arrived there with instructions to discover, if possible, whether the leak to the German high command was through this town. From Germans captured on the front we had learned that their commanding officers were familiar with the location and number of certain of our troops, and that they knew when these troops were moved to other locations or sectors of the front. Both the American and French intelligence services had for some time been suspicious of Biarritz, and this new information received convinced us that there must be a very clever spy operating there who was securing this information from the Americans and somehow getting it through to Germany. For a long time the mails were watched as well as the comings and goings of the civilians, but nothing had been discovered that would warrant action being taken against any one.

On the first night of my arrival I heard about this English woman who was doing so much to make the time pass pleasantly for our men, and naturally I was anxious to meet her myself and enjoy her hospitality. The opportunity came when I was on the beach one day; I had just come out of the water and was introduced by another officer, a mutual friend, and I myself found her very charming. This woman had a large tent on the beach and was running an open house for the benefit of the Americans there. Here, after a dip in the ocean, one could go for a drink or a cigaret. Assisting this woman were some of the younger set of the town whose husbands or fathers were fighting at the front, and regarding whose loyalty there could be no question. I myself, like the rest, had no suspicion that all was not as it seemed, and but for a chance remark made by this English woman I would have probably returned to Bordeaux baffled in my search for the one who was sending the information from Biarritz.

One day while sitting on the beach a Frenchman—short and fat—walked down to take a plunge. He had on a bathing suit of wide red and yellow stripes running around his body, and surely he made an amusing picture. The woman remarked in Spanish to a friend that he looked like a convict. I smiled. This woman noticed it and asked me if I spoke Spanish; and upon my replying that I did, the conversation drifted around to languages. We found that we both knew several in common; and then, in a boastful manner, she said: "Well, I know one that you cannot speak!" I doubted it, to which she replied: "I speak Russian!"

Until this remark was made I had no idea that she was other than she claimed to be. When I heard her state that she spoke Russian, I felt that inquiries should be made and her story checked up. That afternoon I telegraphed her story to our headquarters in Paris and asked for a confirmation of it. They passed it to England and checked it up there and reported back that she was the divorced wife of an English army officer, but for the last five years she had lived a questionable life, although no one had been able to discover any evidence that would warrant action being brought against her.

This report confirmed my suspicions, so I dropped all other angles of the case and devoted my entire time and attention to this woman. Fortunately for my plans, I had my auto with me, and, as the French prohibited cars from being operated, owing to the scarcity of gasoline, I could use my car to assist me in winning this woman's confidence. I soon became quite popular with her, and every day we would go for a ride, sometimes with her friends and sometimes alone. We made various trips through the country and the Pyrenees mountains—in fact, all she had to do was to express a wish to go to some place and I would volunteer to take her there in my car. I urged these trips in order to win this woman's confidence, while on her part she was willing to go for a twofold reason; first, she enjoyed the rides, and, second, she was doing her best to use me as a source of information to further her own ends.

I had the advantage, however, for I felt that I knew her game, and by knowing it I could win. It was fascinating work, although her death was the stake we played for if I won. At times I was so sure of her guilt that it was with difficulty that I kept my true feelings from showing, because she had been the means of sending many of our boys to their death.

She was exceedingly clever, for she had gathered around her several young people who were above suspicion as to their loyalty—thus she was able to use them as a screen behind which to hide while carrying on her nefarious work. I had her mail watched and even had her maid replaced by a French secret service operative; but she was not to be caught sending out any messages or letters that would incriminate her.

While we were watching her mail we discovered that she was carrying on an extensive correspondence with over thirty of the American officers who in the past had been her guests. Some of their letters contained information as to the location and strength of various organizations—information that was forbidden by the censorship regulations. The contents of these letters, coupled with our knowledge of her actions, made us sure that she was guilty—but to prove it was another matter.

One of her most pleasing customs was the giving of a farewell party to each of her officer friends when they left for the front, after being discharged from the hospital. These parties always took place on the night the officers left and were held at her home. This home was all that could be desired—beautifully furnished and situated upon a cliff that overlooked the ocean. Here she would hold her dances and here give her farewell parties.

One night, when she was giving such a party to a lieutenant who was leaving on the midnight train for the front, I discovered her method of sending out the messages. The dance was held in the large living room, which opened into the dining room through an archway. On a table in the dining room were placed various drinks for any one who desired them. This woman and the lieutenant passed into the dining room for a drink and sat down on the other side of the arch. I happened to be sitting out this dance with one of the French girls and we were seated near the door that opened into this dining room. The woman and the lieutenant were so interested in each other that they did not observe us when they passed—thus, unnoticed, I was able to overhear the conversation.

As I was there for a purpose, eavesdropping under these conditions was justifiable, and I did my best to overhear the conversation. The woman asked the lieutenant if he was passing through Paris on his way to the front, and upon his replying that he was, she said: "I will appreciate it if you will do me a favor—my husband sent me some deeds to sign and I must return them to our bankers in Switzerland. The French mails are very slow, and as my funds depend upon my returning these papers quickly, if you will please take them, censor them for me, and mail them in your American postoffice in Paris, it would save me at least two weeks in time. Another favor, lieutenant, as I would like to keep up our acquaintance, won't you write to me once in a while? After the war is over I would like to have you visit us at our home in England, and if by chance you should be anywhere near my husband while at the front I will have him look you up."

Orders are orders; and no one is supposed to sign a letter as censored until he has read it. Corresponding with strangers is also forbidden; but who would suspect such a charming woman? And besides it was such a small favor; and she had been so kind to a poor lieutenant who was so far from home; so the lieutenant disobeyed orders for this woman. All this transpired while I was listening.

Train time came, and we went over to the station to see the lieutenant off and wish him good luck. Once more the woman cautioned him about mailing the letter just as soon as he arrived in Paris. After the train had left a walk on the beach was suggested, but, pleading a headache, I returned to the hospital. As soon as possible I telephoned to the office in Bordeaux for one of my officers to meet the train and place the lieutenant under arrest. This was done and the lieutenant was then searched and confined to a room in a hotel, where it was impossible for him to communicate with any one. Later investigation proved that the lieutenant was innocent of any complicity in this woman's work, but for fear he might telephone to her at Biarritz, these extra precautions were taken.

All his papers were sent me by special messenger, who came through on a motorcycle; and before this woman had awakened from her beauty sleep the next morning, we had absolute proof of her guilt. Instead of deeds, she had given the lieutenant sheets of a closely written message in code. The letter was just a jumble of words; but we soon discovered that it was written in the so-called "diagonal code." The key to the code was the date. The letter was written on a square paper, and the words were in columns. In solving it, we first added the figures of the date, which gave us seven; then counting seven words from left to right on the top line, we had the second position of the code; then counting diagonally across the paper, still keeping from left to right, the last word was the ninth from the top; with this number we went back to the first column, and counting down nine words, we had the first word of the message. Skipping nine words, we had the second; and by continually skipping nine words and going from left to right, we had the entire message. We found that this woman was sending out detailed information secured from various officers as to the location, plans, and strength of some of our forces.

It was finally decided that as this woman was English, and her punishment, if convicted, was death in front of a firing squad, it was absolutely necessary that our evidence be unquestionable. I could not swear that this was the letter the woman had given the lieutenant; and in court it would be his word against hers, with the natural tendency to believe her; so we decided to get confirmatory proof before making the arrest. It was necessary that there be no slip, too, as there is a French law which permits an accused person, if falsely accused, to recover damages if found innocent. I was not willing to involve the United States in a lawsuit of this kind.

A few days after we decided on our line of action, I remarked to her that I must go to Bordeaux to draw my pay, as there was no finance officer nearer than that city. I asked this woman if I could do any errands for her. She gave me several commissions to perform, and among them to find out when Admiral —— was expected to arrive from "the States" with the next convoy. "The admiral is a personal friend of mine," she said, "and promised the last time he was here that when he returned he would come to Biarritz for a few days' rest. I am very anxious to know when he will arrive so that I can arrange for his entertainment and go to Bordeaux to meet him. He might not visit me as promised unless urged to do so personally"—a perfectly plausible statement.

I promised to try and get this information for her, and went away. Upon my return, with many pledges of secrecy, telling her I might be court martialed and shot if it were known that I ever told about the arrival of a convoy, I gave her the date of expected arrival. I also told her how we were fooling the subs by steering a certain course. The information, of course, was all false.

Two days later I had a telegram sent me ordering me to turn in my car to the garage at Bordeaux and to report to the First army for duty, and allowing me two days' leave on my way to the front. I showed this woman the telegram and bewailed my luck in being ordered away from such pleasant people. She at once arranged a farewell party for me; and the night that I was supposed to leave was set for the dance. I sent my car ahead to Bayonne, fifteen miles up the line, with orders to await my arrival. That night I went to her home for the farewell party.

During the evening, while dancing with her, she suggested that we go into the dining room for a drink and sit out the rest of the dance. Here she told me the same story that she had told the lieutenant—about the deeds, money, bankers in Switzerland, and all. I determined to try her further and offered her a loan, but she said she did not need money at that time. I accepted the letter, and, in order to allay suspicion, took out my pen and marked the envelope "Passed as censored," with my name and rank underneath. With urgings to be sure and mail it when I got to Paris, we returned to the other room.

Train time came, and they all went over to the station to see me off. Instead of keeping on the train until it arrived in Paris as she thought I would, I left it at Bayonne. My car was waiting for me there, and by 2 a. m. I had placed the entire proof of her guilt in the hands of the French authorities. I had to do this, for all arrests of civilians in France must be made by the French police. The envelope given me contained another code letter; we found it had the information which I had given her regarding the admiral's expected arrival. This letter, with the letter which she had given to the lieutenant, was considered sufficient evidence with which to secure a conviction, so the French placed this woman under arrest. It was not deemed wise that I be present at the time of the arrest.

As it was thought she might attempt suicide, extra precautions were taken to prevent this, for we wanted to make an example of her as a warning to others. She was taken to Bordeaux for trial, and until I faced her in court, she was absolutely sure she would be acquitted. Even her friends at Biarritz rallied to her support, securing the best lawyer in Bordeaux to defend her, and stated that for once the French secret service had made a mistake. When the English government heard of the arrest—for we had notified them—they also came into the case, and I was glad I had secured the added evidence to substantiate the lieutenant's story.

When I faced her in court—and this was her first intimation that I was connected with the affair—the situation was so different that she realized that the game was up. A peculiarity of the French law allows a prisoner to harangue a witness in open court, so when I appeared on the stand she gave me a reception that I will never forget. I learned the full meaning of the old saying, "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." Her trial was a short one; for with my testimony, substantiated as it was by that of the lieutenant, she was found guilty and sentenced to be shot.

Even though I knew she was responsible for sending many of our boys to their death, I felt sorry for her and tried to make her last days as pleasant as was possible under the circumstances. All her friends had deserted her, and she had no one to whom she could turn in her great trouble. She refused all my offers, even refusing to talk with the chaplain whom I sent up to her. One bright sunny morning at 6 o'clock she was brought out into the courtyard of the prison, placed against a wall, the command "Fire" rang out—and this woman paid the price; while her employer, the arch fiend of them all, was safe in Berlin.

I afterward learned her story from her former husband, who was good enough to come down and take charge of her body and give it a decent burial. This woman came from a highly respected English family and married an English army officer. It was the old, old story, however—she could not stand a well ordered, quiet life, and one day her husband found her with another man. He divorced her and she went to Paris to live.

The czar of Russia, always on the lookout for this type of woman, soon hired her and she became a member of his personal secret intelligence staff operating in Paris, her funds coming through Switzerland. When the revolution in Russia took place she lost her post and then went to Switzerland to secure funds. Here the German intelligence staff found her, hired her, and sent her to Biarritz to join Bolo Pasha. She was established in a beautiful villa there, and until Bolo was caught, she operated with him.

When we opened the hospital she was very successful as a leader in the entertainments given for our men, and thus secured much valuable information for the boche. As her messenger, she always used an American officer who was returning to the front through Paris. No one will ever know just how much harm this woman really accomplished before she was caught in the toils of the American intelligence service.

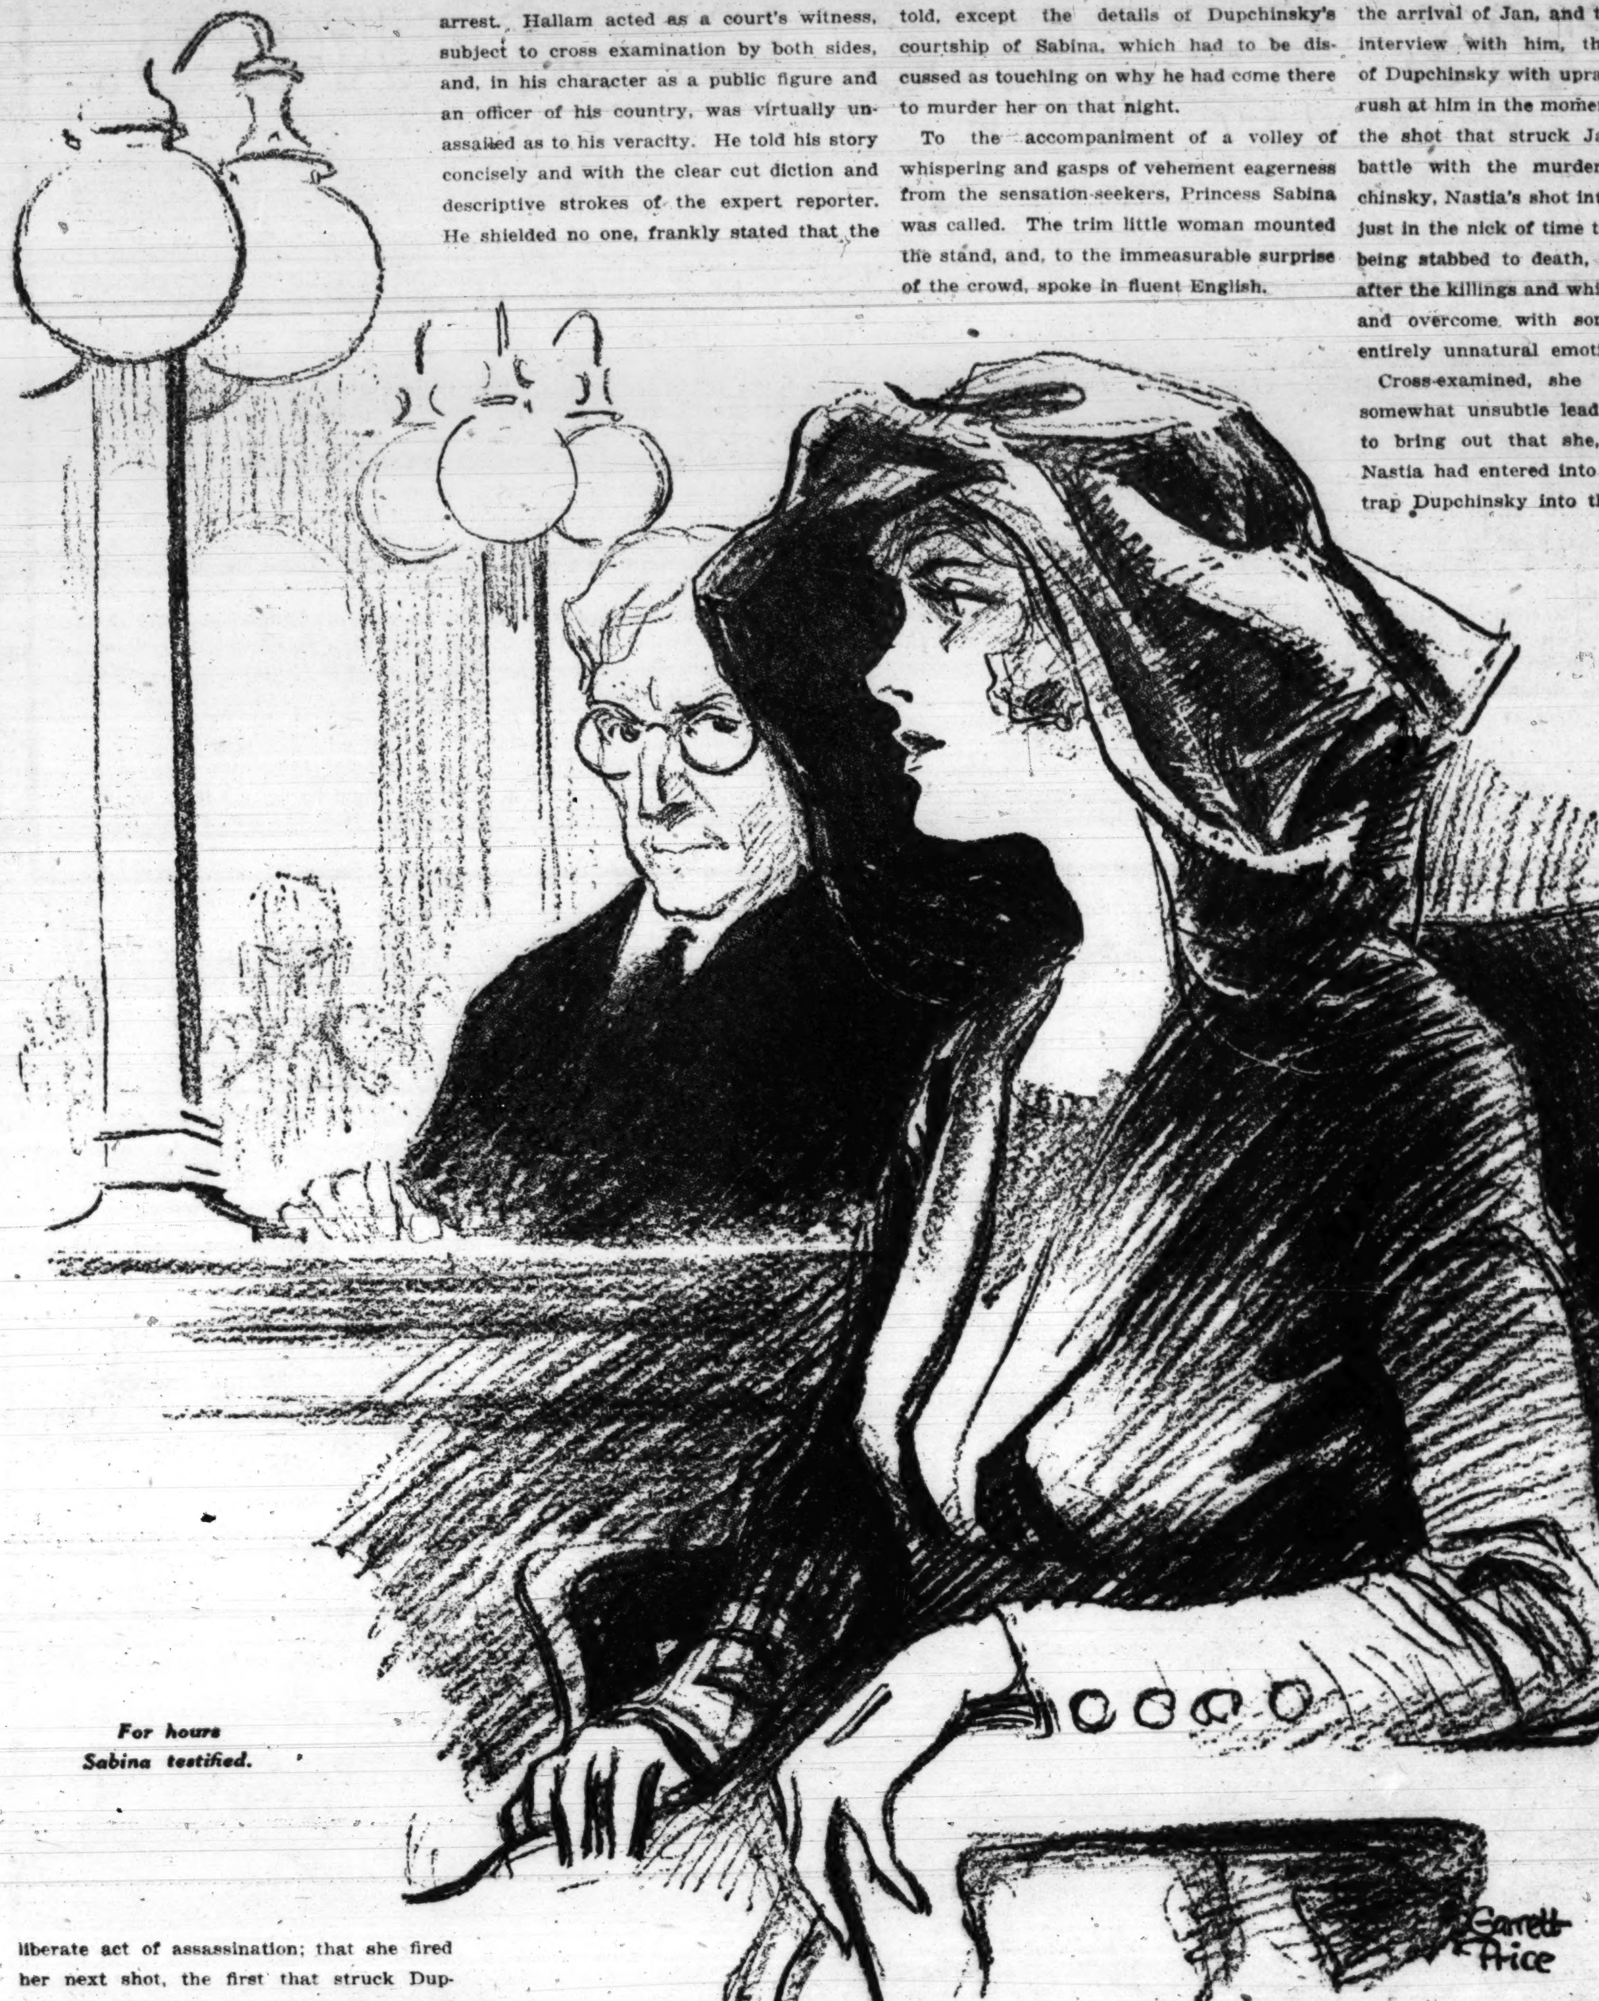
liberate act of assassination; that she fired her next shot, the first that struck Dupchinsky, while he was again in the act of attempting and about to consummate a murder, this time against witness, Hallam, who was unarmed and against whom Dupchinsky's knife could not, therefore, have been used in self-defense; that, had she not shot when she did, witness, Hallam, would have been killed; that, no matter what motive prompted her in firing the additional three shots—probably merely excitement and overwrought emotions—the first shot severed his spine and was, therefore, fatal beyond argument; that, as one cannot kill or injure a dead man, the three other shots were in no manner germane to the question of guilt or innocence; that these details would be entirely substantiated by three witnesses of far more than ordinary intelligence and credibility, a royal princess, whose noble conduct had endeared her to a world, a priest of the holy church, and the most famous and brilliant journalist of the generation.

Hallam was called as the first witness after the detective had testified for a few minutes to identify the revolver and tell of the girl's arrest. Hallam acted as a court's witness, subject to cross examination by both sides, and, in his character as a public figure and an officer of his country, was virtually unassailed as to his veracity. He told his story concisely and with the clear cut diction and descriptive strokes of the expert reporter. He shielded no one, frankly stated that the girl had drawn her revolver before she had entered the house, and that she had confessed later that she had come to kill Dupchinsky and was glad she had killed him, but he also established every point made by Nastia's lawyer as to the split-hair second by which her shot had saved his life and the exact moment at which she had fired on Dupchinsky the first shot, the one that had killed Jan, the moment in which Dupchinsky's knife would have plunged into Sabina's breast.

Father Pokoff, whose memory was not as clear as Hallam's, nor whose observation was as keen, testified through an interpreter and was excused without much pressing when it was seen that he had been highly moved during the whole scene and knew nothing about it except what Hallam had told, except the details of Dupchinsky's courtship of Sabina, which had to be discussed as touching on why he had come there to murder her on that night.

To the accompaniment of a volley of whispering and gasps of vehement eagerness from the sensation-seekers, Princess Sabina was called. The trim little woman mounted the stand, and, to the immeasurable surprise of the crowd, spoke in fluent English.



For hours Sabina testified.

"Your name?" asked Nastia's lawyer, Sabina being called as a witness for the defense.

"Sabina."

"Sabina what?"

"Sabina—that is all."

"You have a title, have you not?"

"No, sir."

"Are you not a princess?"

"I was, sir."

"You are a citizen of Grodnia?"

"Yes, sir. But I hope to become a citizen of the United States."

"By naturalization?"

"By marriage."

Here was "copy." At last Hallam was not getting the news all for himself. The other reporters grinned with boyish delight at this gratuitous confession.

For hours Sabina testified, going through the entire story of her early relations with Nastia, her meeting with Hallam, her flight to America, and her meeting with Dupchinsky, the torturous experiences which she had suffered at his hands, arrival of Nastia, the arrival of Jan, and the essentials of her interview with him, the sudden entrance of Dupchinsky with upraised knife, Hallam's rush at him in the moment when Nastia fired the shot that struck Jan, Hallam's heroic battle with the murderously armed Dupchinsky, Nastia's shot into Dupchinsky's ribs just in the nick of time to save Hallam from being stabbed to death, Nastia's statements after the killings and while she seemed dazed and overcome with some compelling and entirely unnatural emotion.

Cross-examined, she easily defeated a somewhat unsubtle lead of the prosecution to bring out that she, Hallam, Jan, and Nastia had entered into a conspiracy to entrap Dupchinsky into the house for Nastia to kill him in revenge and for Sabina to rid herself of an unwelcome suitor who at the same time was a menace to her safety. The district attorney sought to hint that perhaps Nastia, whose witnesses admitted she had drawn her revolver before he had drawn his knife, was leveling her weapon at him when he had pulled out the knife to defend himself. The state made little progress along that direction. Sabina was dismissed.

Within an hour the jury acquitted Nastia on grounds that she had shot to save two innocent lives and recommended that she be deported as an undesirable alien. This recommendation, while not binding, was accepted by the immigration department, and Nastia was taken into custody to be shipped back to Grodnia, but on Hallam's appeal, when he recalled the fact that her kinsmen had been slain by bolsheviki adherents because of her act, the order for deportation was canceled on Hallam's mother taking her on parole and agreeing to be responsible for the girl's behavior.

And so the trial ended. Hallam led the three principals out with him and to his home.

(To be concluded.)

"Take It From Me" by Oney Fred Sweet

The Red Headed Girl Turns Press Agent for an Unsung Section.

FILM and fiction have thus far ignored Fowty's farm in seeking a setting for romance. Yet the folks who live on and near places just like it make up millions. Their city is Chicago. From fifty to five hundred miles west they ship in grain and live stock from their fields, and from the big town they secure, indirectly, roof, raiment, and recreation. Perhaps the plain they populate is too evenly prosperous to be picturesque—no depth of shadows to furnish the contrast that catches the artist's eye.

Consider a farm like Ferm Fowty's. The movie camera has never caught it. If it be a rural plot, the chances are that you will find a palm tree in the background, the California producer having sought scenery near the studio. New England, maybe, the far west, the sunny south, the frozen north, but the Ferm Fowty farm and its tens of thousands like it—unphotographed, unsung.

The Ferm Fowty farm, representative of its species, lies on the stretch of prairie that is the heart of America. A big red barn, a white house smaller than the barn, a tall windmill, and a willow windbreak—the cluster surrounded by 160 acres, each acre well nigh worth the price of a new little automobile. The wind sweeps there and it has just about swept away everything that has been lugged in, either from back east or the old world, leaving the multitudes that have migrated to its meadows all pretty much alike.

Ferm Fowty had one child, a daughter, Alma. In some sections she might have been referred to as an heiress. But the soil of her vicinity had been touched only by the plow, never by a novelist, and she saw herself and her surroundings simply through her own eyes. When she reached the age of 18 she went to the ten mile distant town of Prairie Junction and sought and secured a position as chambermaid and waitress in the Pioneer hotel.

To the traveling man who sat at the transient table she was a rather clumsy "K. M." who blushed when she asked him if he preferred "tea, coffee, or ice tea." To the landlord she was a cog that momentarily helped to solve the help problem. To the town she was "one of the hotel girls."

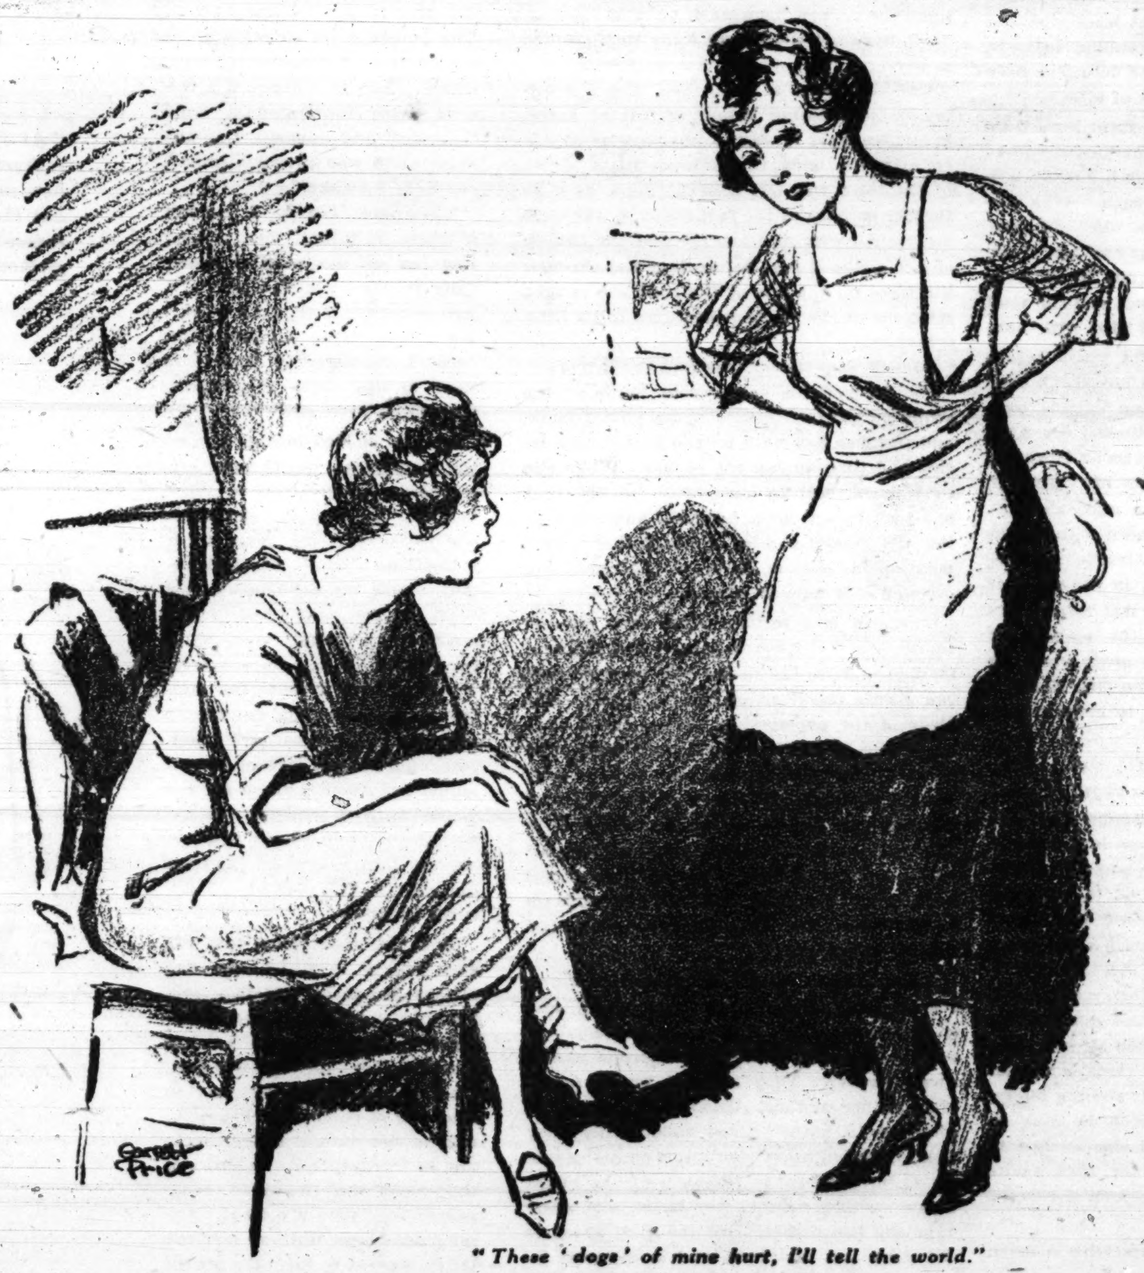
More than one Alma has been unable to resist the lure of working in Pioneer hotels. Musty halls haunted by souls from the great outside world who have sojourned there—actresses, drummers, politicians, ball players, horse buyers, gamblers, milliner trimmers, evangelists, and painless dentists. The bus down in front, the piano in the parlor, the pale clerk behind the desk, the advertisement paneled writing stand, the colored porter. The one place in the whole county that is different. A far cry it is from the corn field and the crickets.

Ferm Fowty sat on the porch at home one Sunday afternoon, and his eyes, squinty from close contact with the shine of fifty summer suns, took on a tighter squint. He was a large man, stooped of shoulder. His mustache was faded in color and straggly in shape. He went to Chicago twice a year with stock.

"Seems queer to me," he said to his wife. "Here you and me pull away from the old country to get over here to get hold of a piece of land. No more chance of our owning it over there than there was of owning the moon. We work to get rid of a mortgage and to add on more acres on account of Alma. And when she grows up she pulls out to work for somebody else."

"Jep Jenson says Alma would come back if it wasn't for that red headed girl that's working where she is," mourned the wife. "Jep says she and the red headed girl run together when they get through waiting on tables and making beds. You remember seeing her that Saturday afternoon we was in town—that girl that wabbled around on her high heel shoes."

"Yes, and the Jenson place belongs to Jep now. Handy by here. The two places would join together mighty well," squinted Ferm. "I'd give this year's crops to have Alma here this afternoon turning on the phonograph and chasing the chickens off the geranium bed."



"These 'dogs' of mine hurt, I'll tell the world."

It was at this same Sunday afternoon hour that Alma and her red headed companion completed their task of serving corn starch pudding as dessert to the handful of diners at the Pioneer house. They slighted the pudding in partaking of nourishment for themselves; they had witnessed the dish in the process of preparation. The pair were up in their room on the third floor—the only third floor in town. Their room had a west exposure and the sun beat scorchingly against the cracked half drawn curtain.

Clara, the red headed girl, sat near the window that looked down on Main street, sun baked and deserted save for a big car that was drawn close to the walk across the street. All along the block the shades in the store windows were drawn. The Sunday lid was on tight. The clatter of dishes in the dining room below was the only sound to break the stillness.

"These 'dogs' of mine hurt, I'll tell the world," sighed the red haired girl, removing one of the soiled white shoes that had attracted Mrs. Ferm Fowty's critical country eye. "I wish I knew the bird in that car across the street there. I'd just as soon go for a ride, but no walk to the cemetery or anywhere else for me this afternoon."

"That's Jep Jenson out in the car there," remarked Alma. "He's been waiting for me for an hour."

"What ya sticking around here for, then?"

"'Cause he wants to take me home. His farm's next to ours. I thought you and I could slip out the back way."

The red headed girl stared, started to open her lips, stared, all but gave up giving expression to what she thought of her younger companion. "His farm next to your farm and him out there waiting in a taxi like that!" she finally managed. "Don't 'four-flush' with me, dearie. Nobody has kidded with me and got away with it for ten years. If it was true you wouldn't be no 'K. M.' in a dump like this."

"It's all right for you to talk," responded Alma, almost tearfully, "but in all the movies we've been to you never saw a hero who looked like Jep, did you?"

The red headed girl leaned forward as if to peer further under the auto top across the street. Jep wasn't exactly dolled up like the youths in the magazine clothing advertisements.

"He looks like the goods to me," scrutinized the red headed girl. "I don't know as his hair waves back, but he does look as if that farm of his was worth fifty thousand in real jack. My first husband always carried a cane, but he left me down in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, without so much as a farewell note. You take Ed Fiskus, one of the smoothest manipulators of a paddle game that ever worked a street fair. I wish you could have seen the furnished room where I was left behind with the tonsilitis out in Bakersfield, California. Canes and gold teeth and coats that pinch in the back don't mean anything when you've been around as much as I have, dearie."

"That's just it," Alma half sobbed. "You've been around so much. If they'd only have one single movie about this part of the country—just one. But we're neither north, west, south, or east. We're nothing but——"

"Nothing but the heart of America," finished the red headed girl. "Clear away from where they've ever had wars, and nobody knowing whether bolsheviki is the name of a pianist or a new kind of washing machine. No slums, or strikes, or white slaves, or vampires, or bandits. O, it's awful. The only dinge in the county is the porter here in the hotel, so there's no chance for a race problem. No famines, blamed old crops are sure to grow every year. No——"

"But you're just making fun now," complained Alma.

"I'm just telling you. Just because none of the phonograph songs are about this part of the country is all to its credit. I've been in some of those states that some one is always wanting to be back to in those songs, and take it from me, the guys that write 'em get away with it because they know the chances are slim that you'll ever look those hankered after places over. And take these movie actors and their line of making love. You don't see me forgetting orders thinking about the film I seen the night before. Some guy wrote those lines for 'em that they flash in the subtitles. Like as not the hero's married. Jep might not register very classy in a 'close up,' but—"

"Jep's got a wart on his nose,' interrupted Alma.

"A month after you're married you'll never know it's there. Say, if a guy had piled up as much as Jep has and he came to me and says 'half of it's yours,' or words to that effect, he could leave out the 'I love you' stuff. I'd simply take that for granted. You're thinking about moonlight way off somewhere else. Say, did you ever notice that the moon shines all over this country whenever it's time for it to shine? Same moon.

"I've read a lot of books, but nobody ever writes about us," argued Alma. "If only we were up in the mountains, or——'

"Say, dearie, can't you take the word of one that's seen it all? I'm not swinging in and out of somebody else's kitchen door because I'm looking for romance. Can't you let me tell you what it's like, running away with a sideshow spieler or a pecan grove salesman without you having to go all through it? I've seen more exciting places than what there is around here, but I've never seen any that was more steady. There's a lot of far off distant burgs that sound fine when you hear 'em mentioned or look at 'em on the map, but the times I saw 'em I was hunting for furnished rooms.

"I can see Jep well enough from here to know that if you took him you wouldn't have to do any dragging around in strange towns looking for furnished rooms. You'd probably never know very much about the Greek restaurants. Maybe there wouldn't be any jazz music in your life. But if I could look out the window in any old direction and say 'this old landscape is ours,' I'd be willing to go to bed at night with the birdies and wake up in the morning where the morning glories grow. After what I've—say, he's getting ready to pull out of town. He's getting tired of waiting. Yell out the window, Alma, and tell him you'll be down in a minute.'

Evening was over the countryside when Jep and Alma reached the Fowty place. Ferm Fowty squinted his eyes as the car drove into the yard. He came out to where Jep remained looking over the machine's mechanism after Alma had gone into the house.

"Yes, she's here to stay," informed Jep. "Headstrong, but she's got all over it. We talked over who we'd have perform the ceremony and everything on the way home. I always did say Alma would be all right if we could only get her away from under the influence of that red headed girl."

The Red Shawl

SYNOPSIS.

Revolution sweeps Grodnia. The king is killed by a mob, and his daughter, Princess Sabina, escapes in the garb of a peasant. An aged priest, Father Pokoff, accompanies her in flight. The two meet an American newspaper correspondent, Bob Hallam, who bribes guards to permit them to cross the border. Naroush Dupchinsky, a bolshevist, is assigned to seek and kill the princess. He takes passage for America on the same boat with the Princess Sabina, who is passing as a peasant girl, Sophia Gorov. Struck by the girl's beauty, Dupchinsky makes love to her, much to her distress. Chaos reigns in Grodnia, and Count Jan is sent by leaders of the old régime to find the princess that a marriage between the two may be arranged and the queen put upon her throne. He meets Hallam en route home, confides his mission, and asks his aid. The princess reaches New York and goes into hiding. Dupchinsky annoys her. He boasts to her his mission, and she finally promises to marry him "when he has killed the princess." Nastia, the bolshevist's forsaken sweetheart, trails him to New York. Jan and Nastia both discover the princess, causing her great alarm. Hallam appears on the scene again. The princess rejects Jan and tells him that she will make no contest for the throne. As Dupchinsky is about to kill the princess, he himself is killed by Nastia. The princess, Nastia, and Hallam are arrested and taken to police headquarters. Nastia is held for trial and the others are released. Hallam writes "the story" for his newspaper.

FOURTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

THE TRIAL.

THE courtroom was jammed.

Day after day Hallam's paper had written exclusive interviews with Princess Sabina, day after day it had published new and exclusive photographs of this romantic royal refugee, and no rival newspaper had ever been able to find her or get a word from her.

Established in the home of Mrs. Hallam, she and Father Pokoff had remained hidden from the world at large. Her whereabouts was the despair of city editors and the panic of their most astute reporters. Always where there is a police element in a story the authorities furnish assistance or at least valuable clews toward the finding of those who figure in interesting news; but here Hallam was the officer, and he did not propose to let any one from without in on his treasured secrets.

He was trailed and spied upon by the others, but his comings and goings furnished no hint, since there was nothing significant in his going home twice daily. One or two who got a flash of suspicion that Sabina might be hidden at his home, unlikely as that appeared, were met at the door by the amiable but suave widow, Hallam's mother, who gasped at the spoken suggestion that a princess of the blood might accept her humble hospitality. Neither the princess nor the priest ever left the house during the interval between their arrival and the morning of the first day of Nastia's trial.

The police did not exercise themselves over the absence of their two star witnesses, as they had Hallam's daily assurance that he could and would produce them when wanted, and he himself, a principal witness, had given to the prosecuting attorneys all data that they asked for. The federal officers verified Bob's authority as the representative of the bureau of immigration and were satisfied that he should retain custody of their two witnesses of value in the investigation of conditions affecting the insidious roots of bolshevism in New York.

The disappearance of the princess had changed from a "mystery" to a scandal as the "scoops" followed day after day. The reproduction of her resignation over her own signature the day after the first publication of the story, that walloping beat which had given all the other newspapers a woeful licking, and after New York had been scoured up street and down avenue by the host of newspaper hunters for the central figure of the tremendous story, had been a severe blow, following on the unmerciful first one.

Circulation on Bob's paper rose by bounds. The biggest local story of the year had become a one-paper monopoly. The others followed gingerly and as best they could. The afternoon prints stole the stuff shamelessly. But it was reprint and every one knew it. Hallam had grown to be the foremost figure in the newspaper world, for the time at least.

Of course there were other news sources. The bolshevistic character of the coffee house had come in for a big play, all around, and through this the winnowing and burrowing had developed and uncovered the surprising if not alarming growth of anarchy on the free soil of America. Raids and arrests came thick and the license of the fell coffee dive as a public resort was revoked by the mayor on request of the federal officials.

Sleuth Grogan, seeing some money in sight, had gone to one of the other newspapers and volunteered to sell all that he knew, which was bought and played up as a sensational return beat. Nastia, who was available, was cross questioned half to death, posed for pictures and run frantic. So the substantial facts gained general publication. But what are facts as compared to personalities, and what personality can compare with a living princess—young, orphaned and dethroned by bolshevism, pursued by nihilism, sentenced to death in a secret council of a rabid soviet, loved by her pursuer, wooed by a count, witness to a double murder of both her suitors as she herself was about to be slain, murders enacted by her one time maid, whose lover had been the avenger swain?

No wonder that the public craved, raved to see her in the royal flesh.

Her withdrawal from royal pretensions had been cabled round the globe and had been answered from Grodnia.

The soviet had met and voted resolutions deploring the death of their loyal and distinguished comrade, Naroush Dupchinsky, who "had died a martyr hero in the act of striking for liberty and the eternal emancipation of his delivered people." It was proposed to erect a monument to him on the spot where the royal palace had been razed by him and his cohorts. Two of Nastia's cousins had been butchered in the streets when they showed themselves during a parade in demonstration of the official sorrow and mourning over the death of Dupchinsky.

The soviet issued an acceptance of the abdication of Princess Sabina, declaring the royal lines thus ended forever, and appended to it the courageous statement that Sabina had taken her self-denying stand through fear of the power of bolshevism and through realization that its arm stretched everywhere around the world and recognition of the futility of its doomed attempting evasion or escape.

But the flamboyant utterances were more blatant than sincere. Grodnia had undergone horrible times. The power of the soviet, rampant in the momentum of the first tremendous triumphs, beginning to wabble a bit in the early rumblings of timid protest against the atrocities of the bolshevist reign, had by now begun to recognize serious and menacing prophecies of ruin in the stern and stubborn opposition which, as bolshevism itself had grown, was developing with snowball velocity around the soul of indignation and rebellion swelling through the land.

The outrages were beginning to be answered with resistance and armed revenge. The first riots had all been massacres by the constituted bullies of bolshevism; but now they were two-sided battles with groups of citizens banded together or flocking to the support of one another. For a time the centralized power of red anarchy had been able easily and bloodily to sweep aside each stand of return rebellion. Now the tide was turning. Every inhuman defeat strengthened the heated hatred against the rough riding upstarts, each killing lost one enemy to bolshevism and made a hundred.

Already the uniformed guards of the soviet had been met in open combat and successfully fought. Already the frantic central council had met and hastily issued pronunciamentos holding forth certain reforms and apologizing for the injustices and barbarities on specious grounds of natural confusion in promulgating a new national government. Already laws countenancing "free marriage" and other superradical pets of bolshevism had been withdrawn, and violation of women was declared punishable by death. Some semblance of protection for life and property was promised.

All this gradually was breaking down the power of bolshevism. All this presaged visibly and beyond denial the gradual development of the soviet monstrosity into a republican form of central government. The bolshevik officeholders, grand grafters and bloodthirsty leaders had not yet surrendered or admitted their defeat. But they were being pressed back with the rest, back from the unreasonable bolshevistic extremes which had succeeded the irrational royal extremes into the middle path of orderly and sane democracy, not bound by the iron hand of an arbitrary monarch, not ruled by a howling mob of armed gorillas, but maintained by the chosen representatives of all the people.

Already a constitution was being openly advocated on the street corners and allowed discussion by virtue of a proclamation guaranteeing freedom of speech, one of the first rules the soviet had been cudgeled into submitting. The soviet rulers were to be allowed seats at the constitutional convention, but the people at large were electing their delegates, who would outnumber the organized beasts of bolshevism. The people had awakened, having lived through both ends of criminal governmental imposition, and were taking hold; and nowhere have the people yet been unable to rule themselves where they have found their power, found their viewpoint, and found their courage.

All this was appended to the daily developments of the sensational "follow" on the Sabina story. And all this, so thrilling in itself, only added to the tremendous curiosity which surrounded the breathing foremost personality of the world-wide series of classic episodes. And she was lost in New York—lost except to Bob Hallam.

Through his column, and thus by cable to Grodnia, she sent a message encouraging those who had once worshiped her, whom she now claimed freely as her equals and brethren, to push back the bolshevik usurpers and the bolshevik apostles and to declare, establish, and maintain a republic. Several items in answer stated that red fire had been burned in support of her message in the public streets and that a committee had voted her an invitation to attend the constitutional convention as a citizen of Grodnia.

Princess Sabina accepted the bid through a cable written in her own hand, reproduced, of course, by Hallam, exclusively. The soviet having officially withdrawn the sentence of death against her, the thought was plausible even in the face of the still surviving, squirming strength of the soviet and its self-seeking supporters in Grodnia.

And this girl was to be the witness in chief at a public trial in New York. She would be there, visible, almost touchable.

The court officers were offered large bribes for ringside seats in the spectators' inclosure for the sessions. Moving picture companies had arranged for star "locations" near the doors of the building to seek a "shot" at this extraordinary international figure, for she was beautiful as well as famous and violently interesting.

On the first morning of the trial Hallam slipped Sabina and Father Pokoff out of the house early and took them for a drive through the parks so that their starting place would not be revealed. Before the picture operators or the dense crowd about the entrance had noticed it, the closed car had stopped and three people had crossed the walk and been lost behind the massive outer doors. Sabina was recognized from her frequent photographs, in spite of her veil, by a few, and the buzz instantaneously made known that she had come. The press toward the courtroom was so heavy that the police handled it with difficulty and some employment of clubs.

Hallam led his witnesses past the knot of guards at the inner portals and into the partitioned section for witnesses and principals. The craning of necks and animated whispering were subdued only when the bailiff rapped for order and the proceedings became formal.

Hallam was but slightly less ogled than Sabina and Nastia, for his fame had become a municipal institution. But he was busy and divided himself with determining the preliminary details and protecting Sabina from too obstreperous gaze of the spectators.

Nastia, looking pale but unruffled, rather hopeful than blankly disinterested as she had seemed on the night of the tragedies, appeared with her attorney, a leader of the bar who had accepted the case without fee, regarding it, as it obviously was, a valuable feather in his cap to be the defending counsel in this most talked of and written of criminal case in years.

Nastia was arraigned and pleaded not guilty through her interpreter. The witnesses were sworn en masse. By agreement of the state and defense a jury was accepted without much preliminary wrangling, and, with promptness unknown to issues of such vital public interest, the process of trial was in action within an hour.

The prosecutor presented his case briefly to the jury:

Defendant was a non-citizen who had been betrayed, she alleged, by one of the deceased; she would claim that she did not come here with the direct purpose of killing him, perhaps not true, but the point would be waived by the state; admitting then that she had come with an innocent heart, although she had brought a revolver with her, she had demanded of deceased that he marry her, which deceased had refused to do; she had then deliberately followed him through the streets and into the home of the witnesses and killed him; true, he was in the act of committing a murder himself, but not against defendant; that there had been venom in her heart was indicated by the fact that she had poured four bullets into him, three after he had fallen; however, it was not the purpose of the prosecution to seek conviction for the murder of Dupchinsky, but for the killing of Count Jan of Grodnia; although the bullet which she discharged into his brain had not been fired with direct intent to kill or even to injure him; his death had been caused by her while in the process of committing an illegal deed, which constituted murder by statutory enactment and would therefore relieve the issue of the trying complexities of whether her anger at Dupchinsky did or did not ameliorate her act; killing, even when under influence of great hatred with cause, was an illegal act per se, and when in such an act an innocent third party was deprived of life it fell under the cold and unequivocal statutes in such cases made and provided.

Counsel for the defense answered:

Grounds existed sufficient to establish substantial insanity, which would have to be adduced in the process of conveying to the jury the facts, but the defense would waive the plea of insanity and would call no experts; that the facts in themselves would prove justifiable homicide in the slaying of Dupchinsky as well as Count Jan; that, whatever the ulterior motives of defendant might have been in following Dupchinsky, in arming herself, in drawing her weapon, all of this became null and inconsequential because, when she entered the house she beheld Dupchinsky with upraised knife about to butcher witness, Princess Sabina of Grodnia; that she immediately fired upon him while he was in this brutal and murderously criminal act; that, while she missed him and accidentally killed Count Jan, she nevertheless fired the shot to save an innocent victim from a murderer in the very act of committing a de-

BRINGING MOTHER UP TO DATE

by Elizabeth Jordan

"Do What You Like with the Old House" She Told Her Much Traveled Daughter, "But Leave Me My Things."

WITH a raucous grinding of brakes the train stopped at the country station and Eleanor Bryson, glancing around apprehensively as she descended the steps of her car, was relieved to see that no one had come to meet her.

"No one" was the way she put it to herself. The only person who could reasonably have been looked for was her mother; and during the last hour of the journey she had experienced a growing dread of her first glimpse of the pathetic, waiting figure, made conspicuous among the station throng by the somberness of its new mourning apparel. But it was not there, and at least the first poignant moments of the reunion between widowed mother and widowed daughter need not be passed under the eyes of others.

As Eleanor passed the platform toward an array of waiting hacks and carry-alls a wave of memories hurled itself upon her so abruptly that she caught her breath. Was it—could it be—ten years since she had gone away? In that long interval she had lived, and loved, and suffered, and, in a way, died—for her husband had died, and the vital part of herself, she felt, had died with him.

They had known wonderful years before he went; they had ridden on horseback over the hills of Morocco, and on camels over Egyptian sands; they had climbed the Alps, and listened to the nightingales at Granada, and drifted along the canals of Venice in the moonlight, and seen the midnight sun. Change, change—there had been nothing but change, ending in the greatest change of all. Then she had left Jack in the vault at Palermo; and though for the last three years she had gone through all the motions of life, nothing had meant very much until she received the cable announcing her father's death, and sailed for home to comfort her mother.

Here, at last, was a real interest. She had come—and, so far, all was as it had been. It might have been only yesterday that she left. The same curious groups lounged and stared on the platform; the same dingy station seemed awkwardly backing away from approaching travelers; the same dusty road led up the same long hill toward the same white house where her mother was waiting. But yes, here, too, was the great change—her big, exuberant father was not striding forward to meet her, as he had always done when, a girl at college, she came home on her vacations. Neither was his shining buggy here, nor the horses of which he was so proud; but across the years she seemed to hear his voice, "Well, daughter, back again, eh? Glad to see you. Things look natural?"

"Hello, Nellie!"

She came out of her dream with a start. Jim Beasley, a local hackman, was greeting her. He had known her all her life, and had never seen any reason why he should change the easy familiarity of his early address because Nellie Dixon had married a rich man and traveled in "furrin" parts. He shook hands intimately and, taking her small bag, led the way to his lumbering carry-all.

He held out his hand for her trunk checks and Eleanor produced them.

"How does mother look?" she asked as she handed them over.

He tossed the checks to a truckman and, climbing into the front seat of his vehicle, shook the reins over the back of his venerable horse; then, turning half around, he settled into an attitude that promised an easeful chat with his passenger.

"Why, your ma's the same's ever, seems t' me," he was saying. "When your pa went, I says to Mis' Beasley, 'I guess his wife wunt be long after hum,' I says—an' she did go down quick for a spell. But when she got your letter sayin' you was comin' home t' live with her, the way she picked up was a caution. I never see such a change! I says t' Mis' Beasley, 'Mebbe Nellie's givin' up a good deal to come home like this,' I says. 'Mebbe she'd ruther go right on livin' in them furrin parts, bein's she's been there s'long already. But I guess she'd feel 'twus wuth while,' I says, 'if she seen the change in her ma after she got that letter.'"

"Thank you, Jim. It's good of you to tell me that." Eleanor was touched and showed it. "Then you think it really means a great deal to her to have me come home?"

The man nodded.

"You're all she's got," he said, simply. "'Tain't as if she had others. You're goin' t' find her changed," he added. "Ten years means a lot from 60 to 70. And, well," his eyes twinkled, "p'raps she'll find you changed, too. Mebbe you've growed away from each other a little; 'twouldn't be strange. But you're doin' the right thing—an' you'll be glad of it some day," he added shrewdly, "if you ain't now."

Eleanor flushed. It seemed to her that with one voice her native town was speaking. Of course, the townspeople had talked her over, had discussed her return in its every phase, and their imaginations must have conceived something of what it meant. But how big a sacrifice it was she knew they could never understand, because to them the narrow boundaries of their environment were not the prison walls they seemed to her.

Unconsciously, at first, then with a growing peace, Eleanor began to feel at home. She had always loved the quiet beauty of this countryside, once the hideous main street of the town was left behind. Soon, as if to further emphasize the fact that she was back among her own, the low spire of the church of her girlhood rose before her, and through the trees on the left of the road she caught glimpses of the white headstones in its little cemetery.

"I will stop there," she told the driver.

He checked his acquiescent horse at the swinging gate set in the white picket fence, and watched her walk up the gravel path inside and turn among the cedars. When she came back, half an hour later, he saw that she had drawn down her veil, and, repressing the reminiscences of her father which were on his tongue, he drove the remaining quarter of a mile in silence.

The sun was setting when they entered the gate of "the Dixon place" and followed its curved driveway to the wide veranda that ran across the front of the big house. The birds in the poplars her mother loved were beginning to bid the world good night; the tinkle of cow bells sounded near at hand, and, coming toward her along the side of the road Eleanor saw a line of cattle making their slow way home. Then the carry-all stopped before the front steps, where a little figure in black stood waiting, and with a great lump in her throat the daughter sprang out and took it in her arms.

For a long moment the two women clung together, wet cheek against wet cheek, and in that moment one of the fears Eleanor Bryson had brought home from Europe passed away forever. They had not grown apart, she and her mother! Undoubtedly each had changed in many ways; undoubtedly they held widely different viewpoints on many subjects; but under the pressure of the slight figure resting against her heart, she knew that she had in her arms the most precious thing her life now held, and in the next instant she saw the reflection of her own emotion in the wet eyes of her mother. The love that had bound them was still there, and in incoherent words each made this clear to the other. On that supreme fact Eleanor rested content. The small things, the problems inevitable in such a readjustment as lay between these two, could be met as they came up.

With her mother clinging to her arm she went upstairs to her old room. The big hall running through the house, with the narrow staircase at the end, was exactly as she remembered it, and without for the moment realizing why, she experienced a sudden depression. Then she understood. At every turn she was looking for her father, expecting him to appear.

With forced cheerfulness she looked around her. The same walnut hat rack and mirror stood in the corner, the same Brussels carpet flaunted its flamboyant pattern on the floor, the same brass rails protecting the narrow, worn "runner" that covered the stairs. But through the open front door something of the glory of the October sunset entered and softened them all; and, though subconsciously, Eleanor set her teeth as she passed them, the eyes that looked at them were wet with memories of other days.

In her bedroom, too, nothing was changed. The rocking chair in which her mother used to sit and "visit" while she dressed was empty at the window, the same parallel lines beneath it showing the carpet. Eleanor hastened to establish her now in the familiar place, and, after a friendly greeting to the servant who brought up the hot water, she began the limited toilet made necessary by the nonarrival of her trunks. Mother and daughter were increasingly at ease, though each watched the other closely, and both clung to the artificial cheerfulness designed to prevent a breakdown.

As Eleanor redressed her hair, her mother pointed out the familiar treasures of her girlhood. On a walnut "whatnot" in a corner were a number of "mineral specimens" she had collected during a brief passion for geology; on the mantel stood two flaming vases given her on her fourteenth birthday, companioned by a plaster copy of "Cupid with a Broken Heart," which had moved her deeply at the same tender age. With an absent smile she moved from one object to another, touching them with absent fingers. How dreadful they were and how oddly moving! The bedstead, in an alcove, had a walnut headboard, ornamented with carved cherries. Above it a colored print illustrated a child "Asleep," and opposite this the same child was revealed almost riotously "Awake."

"You see, dearie, I haven't changed a thing," her mother told her as she swayed peacefully in the rocking chair. "I just couldn't. I thought of having a new carpet put down, but then I remembered how you used to like these roses when you was a little girl."

Eleanor nodded, looking around the room with a tender smile, and a sinking heart. How far, how very far she had traveled since she treasured those roses, those vases, that Cupid! She had forgotten how her old home looked—or, rather, she had never realized it, though even as a school girl she had frankly criticized the wall flowers, the marble topped tables, and the family albums in the "parlor." Now, returning with a love of beauty which had been fostered for ten years, until it was the one remaining passion of her life, her surroundings already affected her nerves like a series of discords in music.

And yet, right here was the sure refuge to which she had always fled in her childish troubles, and she fled to it now. Dropping on the footstool at her mother's feet—the same old footstool on which she had sat so often as a child—she began to talk of her father and of Jack; and in the deepening shadows of the room the two men came nearer to the women who mourned them, until at last the latter seemed to hear the stir of their actual presence.

Lights brought a change of mood, and her mother was full of bustling hospitality as they went downstairs to supper.

"I haven't changed much in the house, either," she explained. "But when I got your letter saying you was coming, I bought a few things—knowing you'd want them."

Eleanor shivered. Abysmally she knew what those few things would be.

"It isn't that I haven't had means, of course," her mother resumed contentedly. "There wasn't a near hair in your father's head. But some way we got used to seeing things like they was, and we didn't want them changed."

Unconsciously Eleanor visualized the rest of the house, and then sternly reproached herself for doing so. What sort of a daughter was she, she demanded in self-scorn, to be so immediately and deeply affected by externals! They were not vital—and this was not the time to think of them—but her depression deepened. Possibly her mother guessed her thoughts; her own thoughts seemed to be running on parallel lines. She had given more consideration to the details of this homecoming than her daughter had. A cloud crossed her eyes, and a note of anxiety was in her voice when she spoke again.

"Perhaps you'll want some things different now, dearie," she suggested, "some things," she repeated guardedly. "And if you do, why," this with a little gulp, "you just get them. It's your home, same's mine. I want you should enjoy it."

Eleanor bent and kissed her, banishing her depression with a resolute effort.

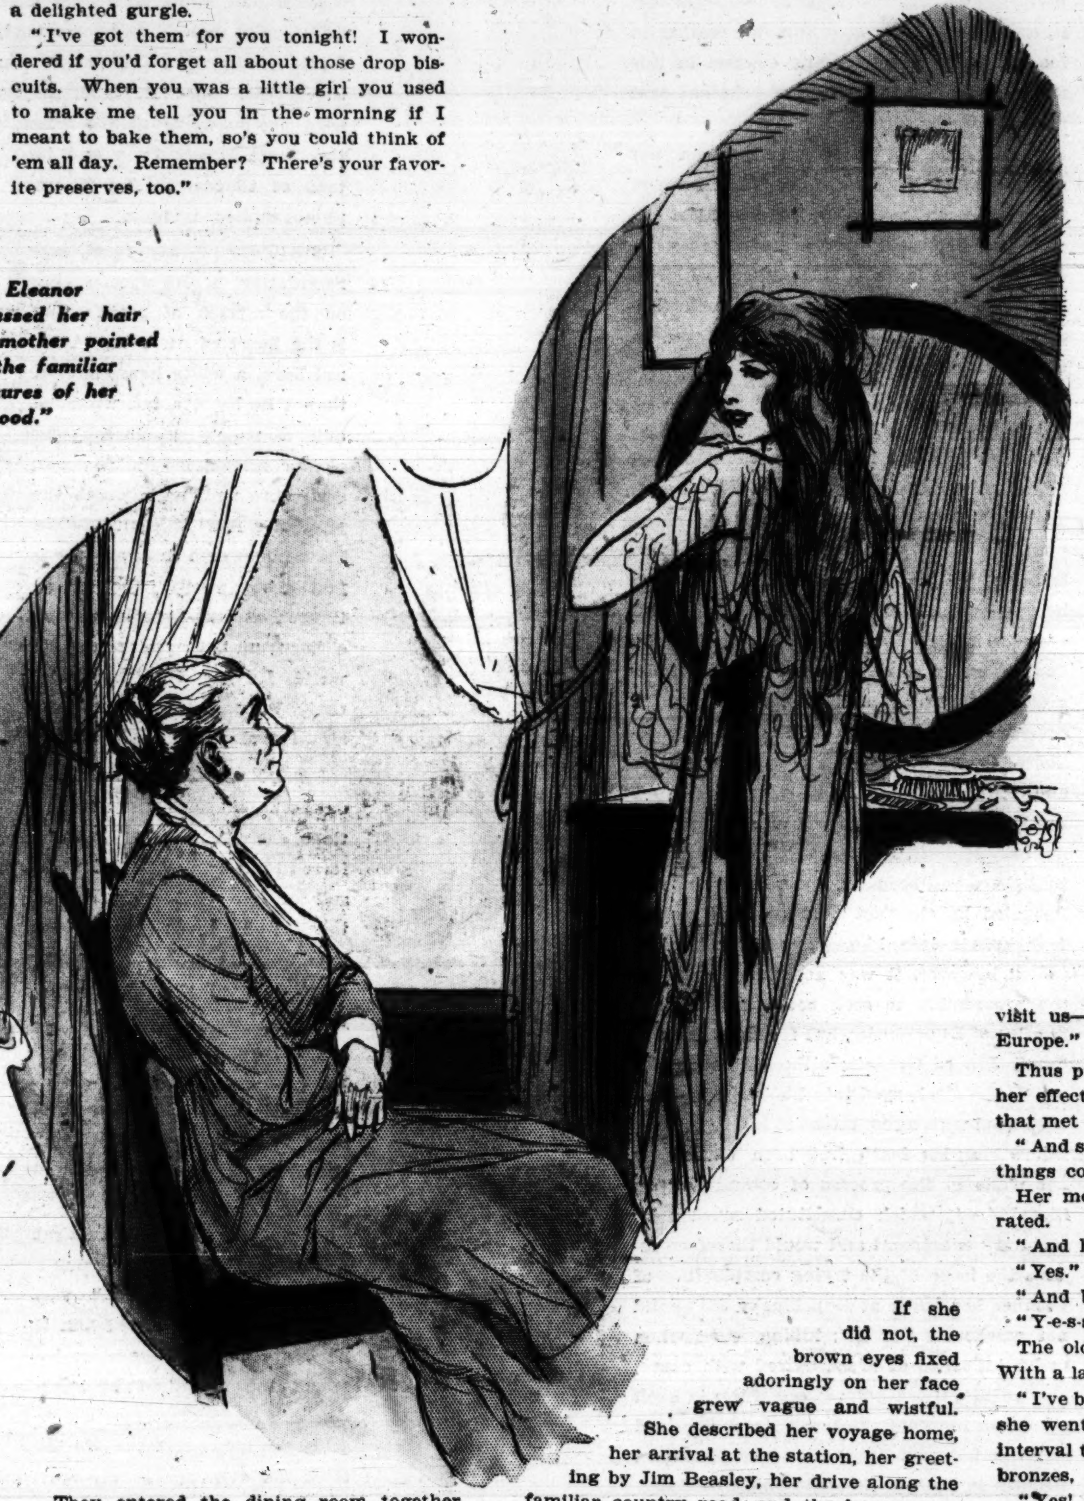
"Possibly I shall," she said cheerfully. "But we needn't think of that now. We've got so many things to talk about."

Her mother's face brightened—took on, indeed, the look of one reprieved.

"I guess you're ready for supper," she chirped. "I guess you won't want mother's cooking changed, anyway."

Eleanor laughed. "I've never tasted anything, anywhere, as good as your drop biscuits," she admitted, and was rewarded by a delighted gurgle.

"I've got them for you tonight! I wondered if you'd forget all about those drop biscuits. When you was a little girl you used to make me tell you in the morning if I meant to bake them, so's you could think of 'em all day. Remember? There's your favorite preserves, too."



"As Eleanor redressed her hair her mother pointed out the familiar treasures of her girlhood."

They entered the dining room together, Eleanor's arm around her mother's waist. It was good to be home! But notwithstanding the heat of the evening, a slight chill struck her as she crossed the threshold and found herself drawn proudly toward a highly polished golden oak sideboard, with a large mirror in the back and an apparently exhaustless array of shining columns in the front.

"I ordered that from a catalogue," explained Mrs. Dixon with modest pride, as she led the way to the table. "I got the new rug from it, too."

It was not necessary to draw Eleanor's attention to the new rug. Its pattern had already risen to smite her eyeballs. She fixed her eyes on her mother, now seated sedately opposite her, a quaint and attractive figure thrown up in relief against a lacy green background of ferns and palms in the big bay window. Under her white hair her brown eyes glowed in the excitement of her daughter's return. Looking at her, Eleanor felt a familiar tug at her heartstrings; then, in fascinated surrender, her eyes crept around the room.

On the mantel was a huge stuffed and varnished trout her father had caught ten years before; near it hung a colored lithograph representing a plate of fruit, cut and uncut; and half of one side of the room seemed given up to a steel engraving of a stag holding majestic vigil on a lonely peak. Almost the first object Eleanor had observed from her baby "high chair" was that great stag. In the bay window, against the background of the growing plants, stood—Eleanor looked again—yes, it was the sewing machine!

She rushed into speech, praising the beaten biscuit, the tomato preserves, and the cake. She asked for another cup of tea. She talked on, resolutely keeping to the surface of things and selecting incidents she thought would interest her mother. If she herself figured in them they did interest the listener. If she did not, the brown eyes fixed adoringly on her face grew vague and wistful. She described her voyage home, her arrival at the station, her greeting by Jim Beasley, her drive along the familiar country road, and the brown eyes gleamed. It was going to be very easy, she realized, to make her mother happy. Already she knew the way if she could keep to it.

Her last memory that night was another experience of her little girlhood. Her mother put her to bed, tucked in the bed clothes, kissed her good night, and turned out the lights, leaving the room with a noiseless step. Eleanor slept as she had not slept for years, and late the next morning opened her eyes to meet the colored print of the fat child, with an amused and reminiscent smile.

But as the days passed, memories grew more blurred and nerves were more on edge. How could she live among the horrors around her? How could she? And if she could not, how could she change her environment without most horribly hurting her mother? She knew something of the hold things and associations have on the minds of the older generation. She had yet to learn their full power, but eloquent suggestions of it lurked in every word that fell from Mrs. Dixon's happy lips.

For a week she ignored successfully the dangerous topic that seemed forever rearing its head between her and her mother—this topic of "changes." Then, as each day had drawn them closer together, she casually suggested an inspection of the house.

"You'll want some changes, I know," the older woman quavered as they wandered from floor to floor. "I—I guess mebbe you'll want to change all your own room!"

Her pathetic hope that this would satisfy her traveled fledgling touched the latter, but she had now planned her campaign and held resolutely to its carrying out. She had looked at her problem from every angle, and time had brought steadiness and calmness for the inevitable readjustment. Certain things simply had to be done! She knew she could appeal to her mother's common sense and count on the generosity of her heart. She met this morning's advance with brisk assurance.

"Suppose we look at every room first," she suggested, "and then talk them over. I'm glad you haven't done much. It will be so interesting to do it together."

During the tour of inspection she made few comments, receiving with some noncommittal word her mother's plans to buy new Brussels lace curtains for the parlor and to run a plate rail around the dining room. When it was over, she led the little woman to an arbor that sunned itself on the side lawn, and they sat down face to face.

"We're going to be frank with each other, aren't we?" she began. "We must be, for we expect to live together all our lives, and each of us wants to make the other happy."

"That's so," murmured her mother peacefully. Her hands were folded on her lap. Her trustful eyes were on her daughter's face.

"That's so," she repeated.

Eleanor experienced a pang of remorse and sternly suppressed it.

"If I expected to be here for a year or two only," she went on, "I would not suggest changing anything. I would bear it—I mean," she corrected herself, "I mean I'd accept it. But a lifetime, dear—that's so different! This will be our home. And my friends will be coming here to visit us—from New York, and Boston, and Europe."

Thus put and with such a climax, she got her effect. She saw it in the widening eyes that met her own.

"And so," she resumed tenderly, "we want things comfortable——"

Her mother nodded. "Yes," she corroborated.

"And healthful——"

"Yes."

"And beautiful!"

"Y-e-s-s!"

The older woman was looking frightened. With a laugh Eleanor rose to hug her.

"I've brought back heaps of lovely things," she went on, resuming her chair after an interval that refreshed them both, "pictures, bronzes, rugs——"

"Yes! Why—of course!" Her mother beamed and drew a deep breath.

"You can put them right here," she exclaimed joyously. "There's room for every—single—thing—you—got!"

"Yes. But, you see," Eleanor hesitated. "You see," she explained slowly, "my things and yours don't harmonize."

"They don't what?"

The little woman was puzzled now as well as frightened.

"They don't look well together."

"Nellie," Mrs. Dixon's tone was desperate, "you stop beating the devil around the bush and tell me exactly what you want to do. Then I'll know where I am."

Her daughter laughed.

"Good," she said. "Well, then, first of all, I want to paint the house, inside and out."

Mrs. Dixon exhaled the breath she had been holding. This was easy. Lots of folks painted their houses. She had thought of painting hers last year, but, of course, when her husband was taken ill it was no time to have workmen around.

"'Tain't but six years since 'twas done," she said. "But all right. Paint it. That all?"

"No. I want to put in hardwood floors and three bathrooms."

"Thr—thr—did you say three bathrooms, Nellie?"

"Yes, dear, three. One for you and me, one for guests, and one for the servants."

"The servants! We ain't got but one——"

"We're going to have three." Eleanor's tone was a bit ruthless now, and her mother responded to the unconscious prick of it.

"One for each bathroom, I s'pose," she said, with a sudden setting of her thin lips. "What else?"

"I'd like to repaper every room——"

"Yes," grimly, but acquiescently.

"And put in new rugs. I've brought home almost enough——"

"Y-e-s."

Eleanor let it go at that, for her mother looked haggard. Six weeks later, however, in the repainted and repapered house, she brought up the subject again. It was not easy in the face of her mother's conviction that the cataclysm was over.

"We need a great deal of new furniture," she began. "In fact—I should like to refurnish the house."

There was a long silence which the daughter broke in desperation.

"Mother," she urged, "try to understand. We can make it really beautiful. The place is full of possibilities."

"P'raps it is." Her mother's voice was hard. "It's full of perfectly good furniture, too. What we goin' to do with that?"

"Well, I—I hadn't exactly thought that out."

What Eleanor saw in her mind's eye was a glorious conflagration at some point on the grounds most remote from the house—a conflagration fed by whatnots, and mission chairs, and tables, and stuffed trout—but it was no time to dwell on this dream.

"Isn't there any one you could give them to?" she hedged hopefully.

"Give them away! Give my things away!" Her mother's voice rose to a shrill note of panic. "Nellie Bryson," she ended, "I—believe—you're—crazy!"

Eleanor tried to reassure her with a kiss, but an averted face and projecting shoulder repelled the offered caress.

"I've used these things all my life," came a stifled voice. "They was good enough for me and for your father. They ought to be good enough for you."

"I know, dear," Eleanor's voice was very tender. "And you've enjoyed them for fifty years. I used to love them myself. They're associated with all my childhood memories. Even now they make me alternately weep and writhe. But they're hideous. Let's get rid of them."

"Oh-h!" moaned her mother.

"Times and tastes have changed. I've learned what beauty really is, and how lovely an old house like this can be made," continued Eleanor. "Try to see my side of it. Be progressive. We're living in 1918—not in 1850. Let us accept the conditions in 1918. Let me"—she laughed a little—"let me bring you up to date."

Her mother remained silent and Eleanor produced her trump card.

"I'd be wretched among these things," she added, somberly, "utterly wretched!"

She felt heartsick and discouraged. If mother meant to take it like this, perhaps after all it was her duty to adapt herself to conditions as they were. But she was giving up so much! Wasn't it only fair that her mother should meet her half way?

"Nellie!" It was almost a cry. "Ain't there some way we can both have what we want?"

"Not unless we live apart, dear."

Her mother took this in silence.

"I know you'll love the new things when you see them," Eleanor hurried on. "I'm not going to let you in for Bakst, or black and white"—she caught herself up—"I mean the things we shall have will be simple and beautiful."

"I guess the bills won't be simple," murmured Mrs. Dixon, bitterly.

"The bills will be my affair. I'll attend to them."

Her mother rose. "You let me think this over," she said, and went slowly and heavily upstairs.

Two months later Mrs. Dixon escorted her nearest neighbor and closest friend, Mrs. Henry Whipley, over her refurnished house. On her brow was high serenity. Her manner radiated a gentle pride.

"If ever there was a bad time for you to break your ankle, Amanda Whipley," she said, "'twas this fall, jest when I wanted you most—to talk things over with!"

"I come soon's I could," Mrs. Whipley defended herself. "My, Mary, but you're grand—and real comfortable, too. The neighbors told me much's they could, but I didn't know 'twas goin' to be like this! Seemed like they couldn't really describe it, some way."

Her eyes were sweeping the rooms, looking through openings on every side at vistas of soft, exquisite color.

"Eleanor did it all," admitted Mrs. Dixon, "and I like it real well," she added peacefully. "I liked it soon's I got used to it. But sometimes I do get kind of lonesome for the old furniture."

She turned suddenly and cast a swift look around her. No one was in sight.

"Amanda Whipley," she whispered, "you come with me!"

Dragging her friend after her, she mounted the steps leading to the second floor, and, slipping along a rear hall to its end, opened a door, entered a large room and mysteriously motioned to the other to follow. Staring, Mrs. Whipley did so. Then she gasped.

"Well, I never!"

Mrs. Dixon had closed the door behind her. Now, with the expression of a mischievous child in her brown eyes, she drew two big mission chairs into the center of the room, pressed her neighbor into one of them and sank into the other.

Mrs. Whipley was still staring.

"My suz!" she gasped. "Whut's it mean, Mary? Whut's this place. Looks like a mu-se-e-um to me."

Her gaze lingered on the stuffed trout over the mantel, then on the vases near it, the stag over the fireplace, the framed silver nameplate from Mr. Dixon's coffin, the wax flowers, the tidies, the crewel work, the marble topped tables covered with the family albums—in short, on all the familiar relics with which the big room was crowded. "Whut's it mean?" she repeated.

In hushed accents Mrs. Dixon told her.

"Eleanor calls it the 'Chamber of Horrors,'" she said. "But it's really my settin' room. Amanda Whipley, would you believe it—that child wanted to burn these things—burn 'em—out in the back yard!"

She waited to give this statement its full value, and to enjoy the horror and incredulity of Mrs. Whipley's expression. It was all that she had hoped for, and she leaned back with a contented sigh.

"But I put my foot down on that. 'Do what you like,' I told Nellie, 'but leave me my things.' So we put 'em in here. Now I don't want you should misunderstand me. I don't want any one to think I ain't proud of my home, for I am. And I got nothin' against beauty. But I can tell you one thing right now. There's been days——"

Her voice sank lower. She paused to look around, then seemed to find reassurance in the familiar atmosphere of the room.

"There's been days," she whispered resolutely, "when I got sick of it. When that happened—when I was so fed up with beauty that I couldn't stand it one minute more——"

"Whut did you do?" Mrs. Whipley's tone dripped sympathy.

"I come up here." The voice of her hostess took on the reverent reflection of one who describes a religious rite. "I come up here," she repeated. "And when I got here I shut the door, and I set down among my own things, and I set and set——"

"Yes——"

"Till I got over it!" ended her friend triumphantly. "It got easier all the time. At first I come every day. Now—well, I ain't been here for most two weeks."

Mrs. Whipley nodded. Again her eyes traveled among the familiar objects in the room, and as they made the journey they brightened.

"It kams you to know you've got it," she conceded solemnly. "I sh'd think 'twould. I ain't for these new fangled notions, either. This is my idee of beauty!"

Mrs. Dixon started. Then, as she took in the simple admiration of her neighbor's expression as she rocked herself and gazed around the room, the eyes of the hostess flashed with sudden understanding. Aghast, she stared at her old friend across the gulf that lay between them. Amanda Whipley had lost the point of her confidences. Amanda Whipley was hopelessly behind the times.

But in that moment of illumination, Mrs. Dixon knew that she herself had taken the first difficult steps along the pathway of progress.
